$55,133,147 D. C. Budget Is Submitted For Study

Health, Welfare, School, Highways And Park Funds Are Curtailed

A municipal budget of $55,133,147 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1943—nearly a million dollars in excess of current appropriations—will be studied today by the Budget Bureau.

Largest in the District's history, primarily because of booming defense activities here, the fund was asked by the Commissioners yesterday and represents, they said, a balanced budget with no necessity for tax increases.

The record request, however, was pared down by $9,696,607 from estimates submitted by various department heads to the city officials.

In a letter of transmittal to the Budget Bureau, Commissioner John Russell Young asked Congressional approval in toto of the amount and explained that anticipated revenues during the next fiscal year are expected to cover all expenditures.

Major "blue penciling" by the Commissioners in order to hold the budget figure to the barest minimum affected the health, school, park, welfare and highway departments.

In line with their recently enacted and fast-moving policy to provide the city with greater traffic and private property protection, the city heads requested 195 additional policemen to bring the Metropolitan Police Force to a new strength of 1711 men.

School Slash Is Harsh

They asked for 184 privates, four lieutenants and six sergeants. If pending legislation to add 100 men to the force is passed, the Commissioners said they would reduce their request to 93 officers.

Only meager details of the new budget were released pending final action by the Federal Budget Bureau. It was made clear—although there was no official statement—that water rates will not be increased to meet the current drain on facilities and supply due to the influx of defense workers.

It had been suggested by the War Department that existing rates be boosted by 115 per cent to finance necessary outlays and improvements in the water system next year.

School budget estimates were among the more severely slashed. Failure of a predicted increase this year in student registrations to materialize was seen as the reason. School authorities asked for about 18 million dollars and will receive

James Roosevelt Will Pay Ex-Wife Only $25,000

Los Angeles, Nov. 7 (AP).—A modified property settlement under which Capt. James Roosevelt will pay his former wife, Betsy Cushing Roosevelt, $25,000 instead of the $50,000 originally agreed to, was approved today in Superior Court.

A stipulation to the reduction was signed by Mrs. Roosevelt in New York, October 20. No reason was given.

When the divorce was granted here March 8, 1940, Capt. Roosevelt agreed to pay the $50,000 within five years, with an alternative of $5000 yearly for life.

Other provisions of the original agreement stand.

Mrs. Roosevelt received $68,000 at the time of the divorce. Roosevelt later married Romelle Schneider, a nurse.

Who Tells The President?

People who talk with the President are amazed at his profound knowledge of so many subjects. How can any one person, a busy President at that, keep abreast of all foreign affairs? Or grasp the complex details of defense production? An article of unusual interest in tomorrow's Post (Section II) tells you how he does it.

20,000 Pupils May Receive Free Milk Here

Committee Named By Education Board Approves Program

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

More than 2... enrolled in low income ... schools would receive free milk daily under a plan approved yesterday by a special city-wide committee appointed by the Board of Education.

Inclusion of an additional 5500 children in parochial schools also is probable, though their eligibility is not yet finally determined.

Robert L. Haycock, committee chairman, said the school list will be submitted as soon as practicable to the Surplus Marketing Administration for tentative approval. Next step would be for the Board of Education to give its indorsement—which is virtually certain—and make formal application to S. M. A. for initiation of the penny half pint project.

Representing several weeks of investigation, whose purpose was to marshal the largest number of schools which could meet Federal eligibility rules, the plan would almost treble the total of needy youngsters who now receive free milk.

It would establish penny half pints in 40 elementary and one junior high school. If the parochial schools participate, 15 of them could get the Federally subsidized milk for their 5500 pupils, it appeared yesterday.

Uncertainty over this group's eligibility resulted from a report submitted at yesterday's meeting which, it developed later, was not substantially accurate. According to this report, the 15 selected parochial schools could not effect a 270 per cent increase in milk consumption, as required by Federal rules

Senators Kept Away By Night Session but Invitations Are Used

By Hope Ridings Miller.
The Post Society Editor.

A "Red"-letter event on Washington's social calendar for 1941 drew to the Soviet Embassy almost 3000 guests yesterday. The party scheduled in celebration of the twenty-fourth anniversary of "The Great October Revolution" turned out to be big, but by no means brilliant.

The diplomatic contingent was fashionably late in arriving, and by 6 o'clock only two envoys had put in an appearance. Yet, the entrance of Japanese Ambassador Nomura caused quite a flurry, while the absence of the entire German, French, Italian and Spanish embassy staffs was scarcely noticed in a crowd accented with a generous selection of Britons, Danes, Norwegians, Turks and Chinese.

1939 Fiasco Recalled

Traditionally a barometer of international feeling and trends, the Soviet Embassy's annual reception to celebrate the birth of its government never fails to write a colorful chapter into Washington's history. Back in 1939 the fete came on the heels of Premier Molotov's blast at President Roosevelt, and Capitalites showed their displeasure by staying away in droves.

A year ago Washington officialdom did some polite wooing of La Belle Soviet over vodka and champagne. More celebrated persons than had ever appeared at the Soviet Embassy came, and stayed around longer than usual to pay their compliments. Yesterday, a fair-sized sample of Washington's upper crust floated through a throng heavily accented with strange faces. Too busy to go to any afternoon party this year are many top-rank officials. Senators were detained on Capitol Hill for a vote on the Neutrality Law revision; and few Supreme Court Justices ever step out to 5-to-7 affairs. Yet almost every invitation that went out for the reception was turned in at the Embassy before 7 o'clock; and perhaps not

Pleads Not Guilty

U. S. to Ask Death for Ewing In Attack on Girl Tenant

The United States attorney's office yesterday told a District criminal court that it intended to ask the death penalty for Orman W. Ewing, 53-year-old former Democratic National Committeeman from Utah, charged with attacking a pretty 19-year-old OPM stenographer on October 28.

The gray-haired Ewing, who was the girl's landlord, had just finished pleading "not guilty" in emphatic, measured tones when arraigned before Justice James W. Morris.

Disclosure that the prosecution would seek a death sentence was made by Assistant U. S. Attorney John W. Fihelly after Ewing's attorney, Homer L. McCormick, had asked the justice to admit his client to bail.

Defendants accused of a capital offense may be released on bail at the discretion of the justice, McCormick argued.

He asserted that the circumstances of the case did not warrant Ewing's being held without bond: First, because his reputation was such that there was no doubt but what he would appear for trial; second, because the evidence presented at a preliminary hearing did not clearly indicate an attack had taken place.

He declared that the testimony of the blonde complainant did not indicate that force had been used upon her, and he asserted that she waited for about 21 hours after the alleged crime before reporting it to police.

Fihelly replied by repeating the girl's statement that Ewing had put his hand over her mouth and told her, "Shut up or I'll kill you." He added that the Government had other evidence but did not wish to submit it at that time.

Justice Morris took the question under advisement, pending a study of the testimony given at the preliminary hearing.

Offensive Reported Intended to Reopen Moscow-Leningrad Communications

Bear Shows Claws

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 7.—General Soviet attacks above Moscow which appeared to be reaching the power of a sustained counteroffensive intended to reopen Moscow-Leningrad communications, were reported tonight by informed persons here.

German forward positions in a 30-mile-deep zone extending from the area of Volokolamsk, 65 miles northwest of Moscow, to Kalinin farther north were under violent assault by mobile Red forces which in some areas appeared to have driven the invaders back several miles.

About Kalinin itself, a secondary railroad was said already to have been put back in Soviet control and operation—presumably a branch line which would be of great importance in moving local Russian supplies in the northwestern sector.

All Arms in Action

In action was nearly every Soviet arm—infantry, cavalry, artillery and planes—and authoritative quarters here declared that the reported withdrawal of the bulk of the German aerial squadrons for present and prospective service in the south had given the Red air force an even position if not an effective superiority in the air.

This, together with the seizure of initiative by the Soviet ground forces, reflected a material continuing improvement in the Soviet position all about Moscow—and to some extent, apparently, about Leningrad as well—and even the day's accounts of the Germans themselves admitted that their offensive in the Moscow theater had been wholly halted.

New successes for the R. A. F. fighter wing in Russia were reported, the air ministry announcing that British pilots had destroyed 15 German airplanes, and possibly ten more, losing only one British plane in the process.

British aerial operations, it was disclosed, were extended as far north as Murmansk in the Arctic.

Josef Stalin's appeal for a second fighting front—followed by another speech today in which he declared that Germany was "bleeding to death" and could be made to collapse, perhaps within a year—was discussed here in the light of strategic considerations.

A reliable source said that Britain had plans for such a second front which were "ready to be put into effect."

Hull Publishes Record of Soviet Offer to Deal With Finland; Given to Her People by Radio

By William V. Nessly
Post Staff Writer

Clarifying this country's opposition to continued Finnish fighting against Russia, which has drawn a United States warning for the Helsinki Government, the State Department yesterday published memoranda on conversations held with the Finnish Minister here on the subject.

The unusual procedure was adopted because of "misconceptions" arising from publication of the fact that Finland had been cautioned that continuation of her struggle on the side of Germany threatened loss of American friendship and raised a question as to her ultimate safety.

While Department officials remained silent, standing on the texts of the memoranda to present the American viewpoint, their issuance was generally interpreted to have had these prime motives:

1. To reply to assertions from Finland that no proposals for peace had been received from the Russians. The memoranda showed that last August 18 Undersecretary of State Welles told Finnish Minister Hjalmar Procope that "the Soviet government was prepared to negotiate a new treaty of peace with Finland which would involve the making of territorial concessions by the Soviet Union to Finland.

2. To show American consistency in opposing aggression from any source. It was pointed out that when Russia was invading Finnish territory this country took her stand firmly on Finland's side and bitterly denounced the Russian attack. Continued fighting by Finland now, after having regained her lost territory, it was held in informed circles, likewise would constitute aggression, to which the United States is consistently opposed.

3. To make it plain that this Nation is prepared to devote unlimited resources to aid those countries committed to crush the power of the Nazis, Secretary Hull was shown in one memorandum to have told Procope that the United States would "expend 15 or 25 or 40 or 75 billions of dollars" to help achieve that end.

4. To emphasize what was termed in diplomatic circles Secretary Hull's "courageous" expression that he is "glad to see Finland recover her lost territory," but that the "fine" friendship between Finland and the United States was "beside the governing question just now."

The determination of this Government not to limit its material aid in

House Concurrence Foreseen Wednesday; Full Neutrality Act Repeal Is Defeated

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Virtual nullification of the Neutrality Act to permit arming of merchant ships and shipping through combat zones directly to British and Russian ports last night was approved by a 50-to-37 vote of the Senate.

Passage came in a tense night session after failure of two attempts to modify the bill and one futile effort at full repeal.

Ending two weeks of emotional debate in which isolationists sought to make it a peace or war test, Senate approval sent the vastly broadened measure back to the House for concurrence.

As passed by the Senate, the bill repeals the three key sections of the act—Section 2, banning merchant ship entry into belligerent ports; Section 3, barring combat zone travel, and Section 6, prohibiting arming of ships.

The House bill provided merely for ship arming. Despite Senate changes to permit free movement of American ships in any seas, House leaders predicted the House would concur, but by a narrow majority. House action was expected Wednesday, under a rule allowing liberal debate.

No Change, Connally Replies

Crowds jammed the galleries, with "standing room only," when Senate leaders working under debate limitation pushed the historic measure through a series of tests and to final approval at 9:15 p. m.

"It means war, war, war," shouted Senator Johnson (Republican), of California, in a last bitter protest.

"It changes our status not one jot or tittle," retorted chairman Connally of the Foreign Relations Committee. "Of course there's a hazard, but we've got to take hazards whether we want to or not."

When the final call came, 43 Democrats, 6 Republicans and 1 Independent voted "Aye." Shouting "No" to the end wer 15 Democrats, 21 Republicans and 1 Progressive.

A recapitulation was demanded by Connally as one expected "Aye" vote failed to show up in the count. Senator Downey (Democrat), of

Priorities Plan To Give Way To Allocation

U. S. Will Parcel Out Material to Industry On Basis of Utility

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

The Supply Priorities and Allocations Board and the OPM yesterday announced they were junking the defense priorities system and ordering its replacement with an "all-out" allocations system.

The new program, simply stated, means that the Government will allocate specific amounts of all critical manufacturing supplies—a huge list of basic metals, chemicals and raw materials—to every major industry in the Nation, military or civilian.

The revolutionary policy, long anticipated as the only answer to the increasingly apparent breakdown of the priorities method, makes final the absolute control by the Government of almost every detail in the Nation's manufacturing economy for the period of the emergency.

Mechanics of Plan Explained

Rail Unions Reject Compromise On Pay, Threaten Strike Dec. 5

Navy to Take Over San Diego Building Jobs Unless Tieup Ceases

By the Associated Press

The railroad operating brotherhoods rejected yesterday a proposed compromise settlement of their wage dispute, and one of their leaders declared there would be a nation-wide strike December 5.

A. F. Whitney, president of the trainmen, mentioned this date, but heads of the other brotherhoods—the engineers, firemen, conductors and switchmen—indicated no date had been set, though saying there would be a strike.

As this grave threat to defense and other transportation developed, the Navy became embroiled in sharp controversy with A. F. of L. building trades units over work stoppages at three military establishments in the San Diego, Calif., area.

The Navy announced that unless work was resumed Monday on the $10,500,000 in defense projects it would take over the work.

Knox Appeal Rebuffed

Work was halted last Monday on a destroyer graving dock because of what the Navy said was a jurisdictional dispute. Subsequently, A. F. of L. workers left their jobs on projects at the Naval Training Station and the Marines' Camp Elliott, asking 12½ per cent increase in wages. The present scale was said to range from 75 cents an hour for laborers to $1.37½ for electricians. About 1500 men, altogether, are idle.

Secretary of the Navy Knox appealed Thursday for a return to work. In reply, K. G. Bitter, secretary of the San Diego Building Trades Council, charged the Navy

A Presidential Caution

By Arthur F. Degreve

President Roosevelt revealed yesterday that the United States may withdraw its marines from China, a move apparently intended to strengthen this Nation's bargaining position in the approaching showdown with Japan.

Word that the transfer was under consideration was made known by the President at his press conference. He would not explain the development and said he did not know when a decision would be reached. He emphasized, however, that the maneuver was not discussed in recent conversations exploring means of improving relations between the United States and Japan.

The marines, totaling 970, are located at Peiping and Tientsin, currently occupied by Japanese troops, and at Shanghai, which is completely encircled by Nippon forces. In the event of hostilities

Seven Provisions Of Neutrality Act Untouched by Vote

By the Associated Press

If the Senate-approved neutrality revision measure is enacted, these provisions of the existing neutrality law will remain on the statute books:

The President or Congress may proclaim a state of war between foreign states.

American citizens may not travel on belligerent vessels except in accordance with Presidential regulations.

Americans may not deal in the securities of belligerents.

No person may solicit contributions in the United States for belligerent governments.

The President may prescribe regulations regarding the use of American ports by belligerent submarines or armed merchantmen.

The National Munitions Control Board may regulate munitions exports.

Foreign vessels are forbidden to fly the American flag.

Defense Opens Fire

Langer Victim of Persecution By U. S. Officials, Probers Told

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

William Langer, of North Dakota, suffered at the hands of a "very antagonistic" judge and Federal officials "out to get" him, witnesses defending his right to be a United States Senator yesterday told the Senate Privileges and Elections Committee.

By Representative Burdick (Republican), whose name has appeared on the same ticket with Langer in North Dakota elections, the committee was given the general impression that the former Governor was persecuted for his espousal of the cause of impoverished farmers.

Langer's witnesses gave such detailed testimony that the Senator's scheduled stand in his own defense had to be put off until Monday when, it was clear, he will develop, among other things, the bitter theme of a man hounded by "big interests."

The Senator showed to reporters yesterday a 6-page outline of his defense which laid stress on such topics as hardship on the farm and exploitation of the farmer by chain corporations.

Burdick charged that the system of selecting juries in the North Dakota Federal Court made it possible to convict "anyone you wanted to." The United States marshal, his deputy and the assistant Federal Court clerk at the trial that convicted Langer and associates of conspiring to collect pay percentages from WPA workers and employes in 1934, were bitter enemies of the Governor, said Burdick.

Burdick, a former assistant Federal district attorney in North Dakota, declared his experience with Andrew Miller, the judge who tried Langer, had shown that:

"When he wanted a man convicted, he tried the case himself, and if he didn't want him convicted you couldn't get by him."

Frank Talcott, the assistant clerk, visited the Langer jury, Burdick gave the committee to understand.

Howard Strack, deputy marshal, Burdick described as "pretty fast in jury work."

For the committee's benefit, Burdick reenacted what he called a charge to the jury typical of Judge Miller. The judge, he demonstrated, spoke in a low, matter-of-fact voice when telling the jury that the defendant could not be found guilty until all reasonable doubts had been removed.

But, said Burdick, when the judge came to that part of his charge where the jury is told under what circumstances "it is your duty to

'Most Perilous Period' Is Past, Churchill Tells British People

(Germany Faces Disaster, Stalin Asserts. See Page 3.)

By International News Service

Newcastle, England, Nov. 7—Prime Minister Winston Churchill today gave the British people the cheering word that they had already passed through the "darkest and most perilous period," but he was quick to add that a long struggle requiring "cruel sacrifices" still lies ahead.

Britain, he declared in a surprise speech delivered to a cheering Newcastle crowd during a whirlwind tour of northeastern cities, will be "found ready and anxious to prosecute this war when some of those who provoked it are talking vehemently of peace."

This passage in the premier's brief address was his only intimation that the British are preparing for the offensive action that Josef Stalin called for and predicted in his Moscow speech yesterday. It served, moreover, as advance notification to Adolf Hitler that any German "peace offensive"—which some British circles anticipate in the near future—is foredoomed to failure.

Beyond the hint that the British are getting ready to take the initiative on some new front, Churchill's only other reference to Russia consisted of new praise for Soviet resistance which he stated is yielding fruit of benefit to all foes of the Nazis.

"The Russians," he said, "are struggling and battling vigorously, with results which are particularly significant."

Churchill also extolled the role of the United States in the battle of the Atlantic which he said is being carried out, despite German attacks on American ships and sailors.

"On the other side of the At-

Agrees, 50 to 37, On Virtual Repeal Of Neutrality Act

California, a supporter of the bill, had stepped out of the chamber. The recount was refused and the vote stood 50 to 37 as announced.

G. O. P. Repealer Withdrawn

Before the final test, three Republican sponsors of the so-called "Willkie amedment," to wipe out the Neutrality Act, withdrew their full repealer at the request of the Administration leadership.

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, leading opponent of the bill, promptly revived it, declaring full repeal preferable to "emasculation" of the act. But his motion went down on a roll-call vote, 78 to 12.

Leaders had a jittery moment when Senator O'Daniel (Democrat), of Texas, pressed his amendment to punish violence in strikes. The President had asked passage without labor riders and House leaders warned such riders would jeopardize Neutrality Act revision in that chamber. But Senators voted down the O'Daniel rider, viva voce, without so much as a roll-call test.

The march to passage started after dusk with rejection of an amendment by Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, to confine revision to removal of the port entry and ship-arming bans.

Thomas contended the President has discretionary power to define combat zones and asked that these Section 3 restrictions be retained in the law. It was the first test of strength on the bill, and it failed, 38 to 50, on a roll call.

Clark Amendment Beaten

Clark, of Missouri, next offered the opposition's key amendment to confine revision to the ship-arming provisions of the House-approved bill. His motion to retain in full effect both combat zone and port entry restrictions, was rejected, 38 to 49. With that vote, the back of the Senate opposition was broken, and by a 50 to 38 roll call count the Senate affirmed the Senate Foreign Relations Committee's three-way modification amendment, 50 to 38.

Save for loss of Downey's vote, the Administration registered its maximum strength for the bill, with absentees by pairing counted.

There were a few surprises in breaks from the so-called doubtful list.

Senator White (Republican), of Maine, voted for every effort to modify the bill as he had in committee, then swung over to vote "Aye" on final passage.

Gerry, Russell Give Support

Senator Gerry (Democrat), of Rhode Island, who was silent on his position up to the voting, supported "all out" revision on every test, as did Senator Russell (Democrat), of Georgia, another "doubtful."

The two remaining uncommitted Senators, Tydings of Maryland and Johnson of Colorado (Democrats) voted down the line against the bill.

The strain of 11 days of almost continuous debate cracked in a series of emotional speeches before the final vote.

Majority Leader Barkley, pleading for passage, wept as he told the Senate of his feeling for his sons and said he did not know whether the bill meant war but America must be willing to risk it.

Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, bitterly condemning the President for his failure to end strikes, surprised colleagues with the vehemence of his break with Administration foreign policy.

Senator Chandler (Democrat), of Kentucky, sent word to his friend, Champ Ligon in service in Iceland, "I'm not going to desert you, son." Chandler said he would join his regiment and die fighting rather than risk bombing of American cities.

20-Minute Debate Limit

Two days of futile efforts to cut short debate ended at 5 p. m. when speakers by unanimous consent came under a 20-minute speech limit. Senator after Senator took the floor, for and against the resolution, but had to take their seats when the gavel tapped.

Barkley, in the last of the unlimited speeches, pleaded with Senators not to consider the effect of their votes on their political lives—"if all of us who are here are defeated in a body, the Government of the United States will still go on."

The leader told his colleagues America had no part in starting this war, "unless we stopped fighting too soon in the last war, and I am inclined to think that we did."

"I do not know whether Hitler can invade the United States or not—I'm not a Senatorial brigadier general—but I'm not willing to take any chance," Barkley said.

He said American patriots had never been afraid to "take risks to preserve their freedom" at any other crisis in their history "and I do not believe they are afraid today."

Half way through his speech, Barkley's voice broke and he shed tears after telling the Senate that he had four sons and wanted to be sure "what kind of a country I will leave them."

No Half-Way, Tydings Says

Senator Tydings, whose stand was unknown until he took the floor in late afternoon, told the Senate "there is no such thing as a half-way war" and America was not ready for a full effort.

He accused the President of "snapping his fingers" at Congress, of leading the country unprepared toward an "executive war without authorization of Congress," and of "dilly-dallying" with defense strikes.

The Maryland Democrat said he could not vote for a bill he felt would lead to war until seven things are done that are "indispensable to fighting it successfully and ending it quickly."

The seven steps he demanded were "complete frankness" with the American people, stoppage of strikes for the duration, drastic increase in all forms of taxation, cuts in nondefense spending, a "price ceiling on everything," wages included, doubling of the number of training camps, increase in the size of the Army "as high possibly as five or six million men."

To vote indirectly for war, without giving outright support to the Allies, he said, was to deceive the people and lose the "crushing effect" of a declaration of war on the enemy.

Calls Honesty Better Policy

"The greatest nation on the face of the earth choses a dishonest, pusillanimous, cowardly and craven attitude in its international relations, an attitude which does not help our friends nor hurt our enemies to the extent that honesty would accomplish," Tydings cried.

"This whole proposition is conceived in deceit, born in intrigue and reared in camouflage."

Through the long afternoon until the 5 o'clock debate deadline shortened the talk, the speeches continued.

Senator Willis (Republican), of Indiana, called the bill "a leap which it has been admitted here time and again would more than likely land us in war."

Senator Andrews (Democrat), of Florida, said the Neutrality Act "fitted admirably into the Nazi scheme of conquest."

Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, again warned a "shooting war" would follow and said every supporter of the bill "must count himself responsible."

Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, said determined aid to the Allies was "the only chance to keep out of war."

Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, said the bill approved an "unlimited commitment to send our men anywhere in the world to make it free."

Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahome, complimented Wendell L. Willkie and Republican supporters of full repeal "for placing country above party."

Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, said he feared demands for a declaration of war would follow, and "it may mean we will lose one million men to avenge the deaths of 100."

Senator Tunnell (Democrat), of Delaware, accused opponents of "sidestepping" the issues in the bill to "simply argue against war in the abstract."

House leaders said they had not polled House members on Senate changes. They conceded the 121 majority for the armed ship bill will be greatly reduced but said concurrence was certain.

Most estimates of the House majority for revision ranged from 30 to 50, but Chairman Bloom, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, predicted the Senate amendments would be approved by a majority of "from 75 to 100."

DOUBLE-TALK: In high good humor, ready, willing and able to bat the ball back and forth; the President let in the news hordes, gave them the once over lightly. Instead of the usual shake of the head or barbed return, Mr. Roosevelt had himself a fine time brushing up on his diplomatic double-talk as out-of-bounds questions flew in his direction. With Vice President Sam Eubanks, Secretary William Rodgers and Treasurer Barney Taylor, Murray told Mr. Roosevelt that they intended to operate a union of which he could be proud to have his columnist wife a member. On the heels of this announcement came Secretary of War Stimson, his field marshal, Gen. George Marshall, for a conference on deep, dark military secrets.

Nazi Handbill Sent to Grieving Mother

MOTHER OF KEARNY SAILOR RECEIVED THIS—When Mrs. George Calvert was mourning her son, George Alexander Calvert, jr., lost in the torpedoing of the U. S. destroyer Kearny, this Nazi handbill was delivered to the farm home of the Calverts near Gillespie, Ill.

Letters From Nazi Propagandists Torment Family of Boy Who Died for U. S. on Kearny

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

There was an official telegram delivered on the morning of October 20, to the plain farmhouse of the George Calvert family, near Gillespie, Ill.

The Navy Department deeply regretted to say that George Alexander Calvert, jr., a fireman, first class, on the destroyer Kearny, was missing. A German torpedo had struck his ship.

The sailor's mother collapsed from grief and worry. His four sisters and six brothers gathered at her bedside to console her. Voicing hopes they did not feel, they tried to help her, fighting the despair that came when she thought of her boy "missing" in the icy North Atlantic. From friends and other kinsmen came messages of comfort.

The newspapers reported Mrs. Calvert's collapse.

Thus did the family name and address come to the attention of Hitler's propaganda machine in America, the machine which has mailed millions of anti-British, anti-Roosevelt, anti-defense, pro-Nazi leaflets into American homes, often under Congressional frank so that American taxpayers paid the postage.

And thus also it came about that three days later there was a letter, addressed in the German fashion to "Family Calvert." The envelope, mailed in Chicago, contained a dodger that pictured Uncle Sam being tortured on "The Cross of Gold," with Justice and Liberty hung from other crosses on his right and left.

Hauling Uncle Sam up by ropes were figures labelled "F. D. R." and "Me too, W. W." Tacked on his cross was the legend "H. R. 1776." Clustered beneath the cross were cartoon figures with demoniac expressions, tagged with the names Carter Glass, Bernhard Baruch, Dotty Tom Tom, Frank Knox, Harry Hopkins, LaGuardia, Pepper, Henry L. Stimson and others.

Washington experts yesterday pronounced the engraving "technically excellent" and the printing "good."

It might appear that only a crank would deride a mother's sorrow for her son. But skilled investigators pointed out that cranks do not have engraving plants, printing shops and distribution facilities at their disposal.

Moreover, the dodger was found to be identical with dozens of others, mailed in Eastern cities as well as in the Middle West. The plates from which an identical dodger of different size was printed have actually been seized.

And within the past few months several hundred pieces of similar propaganda have been turned over to the authorities by patriotic families which got them in the mail.

One of those caricatured was Dr. E. A. Goldenweiser, director of the Division of Research and Statistics of the Federal Reserve System. Only a person well versed in national affairs—better so than a Chicago crank—would think to include this shy, retiring scholar, whose name is little known to the general public, even in Washington.

The investigators concluded that the dodger came from the Hitler propaganda machine.

The dodger was not all there was in the envelope. There was a letter too, especially for Mrs. Calvert. Here it is:

first of all are you a jew
Coz your sorrow
if you are a christian mother
blame our jewish President he is the cause of it. he ort to go to jail.
Patriotic American
Christian Mother
he has no right to send the boys over the so whole U.S.A
is against it.

"This hurts me more than losing my boy," Mrs. Calvert said. "He died for our country. I am proud of my boy. His brother is old enough now, and I am ready for him to go, when he is needed. But this is cruel, nasty . . . I feel degraded to have them send it to me . . ."

Hitler's propangandists were not through with Mrs. Calvert.

A few days later she got another letter. This contained a clipping from a newspaper, which described her collapse the day her son was reported missing. The clipping was on a sheet of paper, with a note lettered beneath it. Here is the note:

YOUR DEAR SON WAS SENT
MURDERING INSANE
HEAD OF OUR NATION

A FRIEND

Mr. and Mrs. Calvert sent the letter to Washington by a friend. Of the Government they asked these things:

1. That, if it can be arranged, the mother be permitted to go to her son's locker, taken from his shattered warship, and with her own hands take away his belongings.

2. That the people who sent the letters be hunted down, so "they will not torture any more families whose boys are lost."

That's all they want.

But you see, there is no law against it.

Russian Peace Means Suicide, Finns Assert

By the Associated Press

Helsinki, Nov. 7.—The Finnish press contended today that Finland sorely needs to repossess the Hanko naval base and the islands in the Gulf of Finland which Russia obtained by the treaty of March, 1940, and that to yield to British-American demands for immediate cessation of the war with Russia would be "military and national suicide."

These careful comments followed up a broadcast over the official Finnish radio last night which quoted this significant passage from a pamphlet of the Finnish Central Labor Union:

"Finland's war is purely defensive and it will come to an end as soon as the threat of renewed attack has been removed and her frontier has been made secure."

(There have been repeated unofficial intimations that Finland would like to conclude her part of the war as speedily as possible—if she could avoid German hostile action.)

Receipt of Offer Denied

Last Monday United States Secretary of State Hull advised the Finns to get out of the war or risk forfeiting U. S. friendship and said he had informed the Finnish minister last August that Russia was ready to discuss peace on a basis of territorial compensation for Finland.

The Finnish foreign office denied it ever had received a Russian peace offer, and newspapers all over Finland asserted today that the only agency through which a peace proposal had been sent to Finland was a British radio broadcast two days ago.

They criticized this radio offer on the ground that it mentioned no provision for restoring to Finland the vital areas which Russia annexed earlier, particularly Hanko, the Gulf islands and the Fischer Peninsula in the Arctic.

Hanko, still occupied by Russian troops, was described as "a pistol aimed straight at the heart of Finland," in the words of President Risto Ryti.

Bases For Air Raids

The Gulf islands were declared to be serving as bases for air raids which caused civilian casualties in Helsinki as late as yesterday.

With these exceptions Finland has reconquered practically all the territory she had to cede to Russia.

A radio reference last night to Finland's knowledge that her frontiers cannot be determined "until the coming peace conference" was explained as applying not to any early negotiations but as intended to note that Finland eventually must lay before international leaders her case for a more defensible frontier.

the fight to defeat Hitlerism, and the Soviet peace offer last night were being made plain to the Finnish people through powerful short wave broadcasts to Finland in the Finnish language.

Though the Soviet disposition to discuss peace with Finland was first communicated to the Finnish government by Washington on August 18, no reply has yet been received.

Nevertheless, the Finnish radio on Thursday night was heard to declare that "military operations are drawing to a close so far as our country is concerned."

Hull's warning to Finland was issued in a conference he held with the Finnish Minister on October 3, urging that Finland accept Russia's proffer of a separate peace. The question at issue, Hull said, is not whether one likes or dislikes Hitler or Stalin, but "relates to the future safety of the United States and of all peaceful countries of the world."

"In these circumstances," Hull asserted, "my country is expending and is ready to expend 15 or 25 or 40 or 75 billions of dollars to aid in resisting and suppressing Hitler and Hitlerism.

"Therefore, the one question uppermost is whether Finland is going to be content to regain her lost territory and stop there, or whether she will undertake to go further, if she has not already done so, so that the logical effect of her course and action would be to project her on the side of Hitler into the general war between Germany and Russia and the other countries involved."

The memorandum on the Welles-Procope talk disclosed that Procope inquired whether the United States and Great Britain were prepared to guarantee the separate peace with Russia, if it was accepted by Finland.

Welles replied that he was not prepared to discuss that question at this time, but that they were matters for discussion at such time as Finland signified willingness to discuss the peace offer.

Welles pointed out that he "wondered what guarantees or assurances Finland thought she would have in retaining her own independence and autonomy if Germany succeeded in winning and were then the overlord of all Europe."

"I said," Welles stated, "that in such event Finland could look to no one for assistance whereas if Germany were defeated she (Finland) would have many extremely powerful friends on her side."

Text of Welles, Hull Talks

The State Department's memorahda on a conversation between Undersecretary Welles and Finnish Minister Hjalmar Procope follows:

"The Minister of Finland called to see me this afternoon at my request.

"I told the Minister that I wished to inform him in the utmost confidence that this Government had received information to the effect that should the government of Finland be so disposed, the Soviet government was prepared to negotiate a new treaty of peace with Finland which would involve the making of territorial concessions by the Soviet Union to Finland.

"I said that I was communicating this information as a transmitting agent and that at the moment I was expressing no official opinion with regard thereto. I said that I wished to make it, however, completely clear that the information I was giving the Minister implied in no sense whatever any weakening on the part of the Soviet government.

Resisting Nazi Magnificently

"I said that, from the official statements made to us by the Soviet Union and from every other evidence available to this Government, the Soviet government is not only resisting magnificently German aggression against Russia but is likewise prepared to fight indefinitely against Germany, and that from our knowledge of the military situation there seemed every reason to suppose that Russia may do so successfully and for a protracted period. I said that this information referred solely to Finland and should consequently be viewed solely in that light.

"The minister at once raised certain obvious questions. First, in view of the experience Finland had had with the Soviet Union in 1939, what guarantees would Great Britain and the United States offer Finland that any peace treaty which the Soviet Union might now be disposed to negotiate would be maintained? Second, what assurance would Finland be given that, in the event that Germany was defeated and the Soviet Union were to become the predominant military power, Russia would respect any promises which Great Britain or the United States might have made and would not again undertake to seize Finland and deprive the Finnish people of their independence?

Questions Held Premature

"I replied that these questions were questions which I was not prepared to discuss. I said it seemed to me, first of all, that it was necessary to determine what the attitude of Finland might be with regard to the possibilities which I had communicated to the Minister and that consequently the questions which he had raised were questions which need only come up for discussion in the event that the government of Finland desired to explore these possibilities.

"I said further that it appeared to me that the question was a mo- Finnish gov- I added ...e considerations ...ter had advanced I won- ...t guarantees or assur- ...s Finland thought she would have of retaining her own independence and autonomy if Germany succeeded in winning and were then the overlord of all of Europe. I said that in such event Finland could look to no one for assistance, whereas if Germany were defeated she would have many extremely powerful friends on her side.

Conversation With Hull

The State Department's memorandum of the talk between Secretary Hull and Procope follows:

"The Minister of Finland called at my request. I proceeded at once to say that it was unnecessary to go over the pros and cons of the situation as the war relates to Finland and the United States or to the likes and dislikes of either government with respect to Stalin and Hitler or their respective countries.

"I said that as heretofore stated by me to the Minister, I am glad to see Finland recover her lost territory. My Government, and country and I have been loyal friends of Finland and would like very much to see our fine relations continue. But even this consideration was beside the governing question just now.

That question, which is of the greatest importance to my country without contemplating the slightest injustice to Finland and her best interests, relates to the future safety of the Untied States and of all peaceful countries in the world that this Government, profoundly convinced as it is that Hitler, practicing loathsome barbaric methods, is undertaking to conquer the earth; that in these circumstances my country is expending and is ready to expend 15 or 25 or 40 or 75 billions of dollars to aid in resisting and suppressing Hitler and Hitlersim; therefore, the one question uppermost in the mind of my Government with respect to Finland is whether Finland is going to be content to regain her lost territory and stop there, or whether she will undertake to go further, if she has not already done so, so that the logical effect of her course and action would be to project her on the side of Hitler into the general war between Germany and Russia and the other countries involved."

New War Building Excavation Recalls 'Boondoggle' Days

Five years ago a Baltimore contracting company hauled tons of dirt to the Washington Airport and filled in low places. Today, the same concern, Potts & Callahan Contracting Co., is digging up the same dirt in preparing the ground for the War Department's new "dream" office building. "We have accomplished a total of nothing," commented one of the workmen.

London Expects 'Hitler Congress'

London (Saturday), Nov. 8 (AP).—The entire London morning press carried detailed accounts today of what it puts forward as Adolf Hitler's plan to call a continental conference "before the end of the year, possibly before the end of the month," to announce establishment of his "new order" in Europe.

The meeting, it was said, will be held in Vienna and Hitler will attempt to blame continuance of the war on British aggressiveness and the United States' "war-mindedness."

According to the newspapers, invitations will be issued to governments associated with Germany, those of occupied nations and the remaining neutrals of central and southwestern Europe.

Fighting for Life

Victory Vital, Goebbels Warns Reich

(See editorial, "Virtue of an 'If,'" Page 8.)

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Nov. 7.—Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels writes in the weekly Das Reich that the "Axis powers are really fighting for bare existence, and the worries and distress which we all must bear in the war would pale in the face of the inferno which would await us if we were to lose."

The article tells the German people "not to ask when victory will come, but rather to see to it that it comes."

Victory, Goebbels wrote, would require a "gigantic national effort" from which no one could be excepted.

"We can be victorious and we will be victorious," he continued.

"Just as a war which is won will benefit us all, so a war which is lost would smash us all up. As always in the great hours of history our people has its fate in its own hands.

History Only Offers

"Did anyone believe that the historic task of reorganizing the continent would fall into our laps easily and almost unearned?

"History gives nothing away, it only offers. Whoever doesn't help himself and hold fast will lose everything."

Goebbels added that "although we have to bear the most important part of the burden of conducting the war, we still enjoy the highest standard of living among all European nations."

Picturing the future, he said "if we win the war then everything is won: raw materials, freedom of foodstuffs supply, lebensraum (living space), foundation for the social rebuilding of our state, and the possibility of fulfilling the national destiny for the Axis powers. . . ."

He added that "if we lose it, then all that would be lost and even more: namely, our national life in its entirety."

"No one would want to assume," he wrote, "that European problems would have been settled if Poland in the summer of 1939 had given up Danzig and a corridor through the corridor, or if England and France had agreed to the Fuehrer's offer of peace after victorious conclusion of the Polish campaign."

Series of Conflicts

He continued that the present war is actually a series of conflicts "which would have been due in a few years if they were not taken up now."

Taking note of limitations which the war "has forced on Germans in every phase of life," Goebbels commented that "as difficult as it may be for the individual, he need only look to the side to discover someone who has it even harder."

"War," he declared, "is everything else except a way of passing time for soldiers. It is a hard, bitter, bloody necessity which the entire nation faces."

Mountain Defenses Slow Crimea Drive, Berlin Also Says

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Nov. 7.—Axis dive-bombers and artillery hammered Sevastopol's approaches tonight, but military quarters reported a bristling Red mountain defense throughout the Crimea and a German standstill before Moscow.

The high command announced German and Rumanian gains in the Yaila Mountains "despite impassable mountain terrain and the stubbornly fighting rear guards" of the Soviets, and said German dive-bombers "crushed enemy positions in the Sevastopol fortress area and silenced several batteries."

But there was no hint as to how near the Germans were to the big Soviet naval base in the southwest or to Kerch, the eastern bridgehead to the Caucasus.

Referring to the Moscow front, which he said was bogged down by bad weather, the military spokesman said:

"It is unnecessary to undertake anything under such circumstances and we aren't doing it. A little more frost soon and the going will be easier for motorized equipment."

German news dispatches told of the rugged Red defense in the 80-mile-long Yaila Mountains skirting the southern Crimean coast.

When the break-through at Perekop occurred the Russians retired to these mountains, where steel and concrete casemates abound with artillery, heavy machine-guns and Soviet flame-thrower units, the dispatches said.

These casemates are being reduced systematically by dive-bombers, Nazi flame-throwers, artillery, and engineers with special weapons designed to clear the way, the Germans said.

Soviet Gunboats Appear

And while German commentators were speculating on the ability of the Soviet Black Sea fleet to protect a Russian evacuation from Sevastopol or Kerch, another dispatch told of two Soviet gunboats suddenly appearing off Taganrog, 30 miles from Rostov, the northern gateway to the Caucasus, where German shore batteries were engaged.

The gunboats, the Germans said, were forced back to sea.

In the Donets Basin, of which the Taganrog action is a part, the high command said German and Italian troops "made further headway," but no specific localities were mentioned.

Farther north, on the central sector, the war bulletin announced that an "infantry division broke through strongly built enemy positions and made numerous prisoners and captured many guns." But here, too, no localities were named.

The Germans said that their batteries sank a Red freighter off Leninsk, west of Leningrad, and that heavy bombs again were dropped on long-besieged Lenigrad during the day.

Nazis Boost Estimate Of Russian Losses

Berlin, Nov. 7 (AP).—German military spokesmen declared today their tabulations showed Russian losses amounted to seven million to eight million men killed, captured or otherwise put out of action.

These figures, were disclosed in reply to Premier Stalin's speech yesterday placing Russian losses at 350,000 killed, 378,000 missing and 1,020,000 wounded. (Stalin said German losses in four months of the war with Russia totaled 4,500,000 men.

The spokesmen said Soviet losses last month alone amounted to 1,200,000 and added that 389 "large Russian units" and Moscow divisions had been pronounced "annihilated."

Maritime's Draft Of Ships Hint Soviet Aid Action

By the United Press

An authoritative source said last night the Maritime Commission has begun requisitioning a large number of coastwise and intercoastal ships, giving rise to a belief the Administration is making ready for mass movement of war cargoes to Russia.

The requisitioned coastwise ships will be taken from both West and East Coast services, it was indicated.

Reports circulated in West Coast shipping circles that the Maritime Commission proposed to take over as many as 40 of the coastal ships were described as "premature."

Maritime Commission officials declined to comment on the scope of the requisitioning but told the United Press that the commission already has requested the use of seven of the coastal vessels "for immediate defense purposes."

Henderson Acts To Check Further Rise in Oil Prices

Moving to meet a succession of recent price advances, Price Administrator Leon Henderson yesterday asked all producers, refiners and marketers of oil and petroleum products to refrain from further increases.

Under Henderson's instructions, designed to block further price rises throughout the entire country, producers of crude petroleum must maintain October 1 levels, and all projected advances must be submitted first to the Office of Price Administration for approval.

more than half that number were presented by persons to whom they were sent.

In the absence of Ambassador Constantine Oumansky, the guests were greeted by Charge d'Affaires Andrei A. Gromyko. With him in the receiving line stood Mme. Gromyko and Mme. Oumansky, wife of the Ambassador.

"Gromyko was late to his own party. When 5 o'clock rolled around he was still with the President at the White House. As he neared the embassy he pushed his way through the milling crowd, pulled off his overcoat, dashed upstairs and took his place in line. Meanwhile earlycomers waited in the foyer.

Jesse Jones, Commerce Secretary, meanwhile had arrived—"for a sandwich," he said. Getting to the party even earlier than her husband was Mrs. Jones who came in with Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson.

Attorney General Francis Biddle, only other Cabinet member at the party, was accompanied by Mrs. Biddle and the two made the rounds in leisurely fashion. Mrs. Henry A. Wallace came early and was on her way home within half an hour.

Mrs. Cordell Hull, whose gray wool costume, set off with an olive green hat, trimmed in gold, was the fashion-high costume of the afternoon, was there without the Secretary of State. Undersecretary Sumner Welles, wearing a brown business suit, slipped through the crowd unobserved by half the persons who were on the lookout for him. Ten minutes later he was on his way back down the stairs.

Mme. Oumansky, answering a barrage of questions fired by almost every guest she greeted, said she did not know when she would be leaving Washington. She will remain here at least until the new envoy arrives, probably longer.

Meanwhile, however, the hungry, thirsty throng was pouring into the embassy by the hundreds, getting through the receiving line as quickly as possible and then joining the milling mob that jammed the dining room and the adjoining picture gallery, where an improvised bar was set up. The long rose-decked table in the dining room groaned beneath a variety of tea-time dainties and two huge sturgeons, temptingly laid out where only one appeared last year.

Drinks also were poured freely at a bar on the second floor, and the third; and dozens of guests were continually in the process of going from one floor to another.

Working their way through a phalanx of photographers stationed at the front door were scores of diplomats. First to arrive—they alighted from their automobile in front of the embassy a quarter of an hour after the party began—were the Bulgarian Minister and Mme. Naoumoff.

The Australian Minister and Mrs. Richard Casey came along shortly afterward and obligingly posed for photographs. When about the tenth camera was trained on him, however, the Minister decided to call a halt. "Look here," he said in a clipped British accent, with a twinkle in his eye, "I'm not Litvinoff, you know!"

Still out of town is the British Ambassador, Lord Halifax, but several members of his staff strolled in toward the end of the party. Sir Ronald Campbell, Charge d'Affaires, was there; also the Commercial Secretary and Mrs. J. P. Summerscale, John Foster, Angus Malcolm, Sir Anthony and Lady Rumbold, and several others.

Missing, of course, was Finnish Minister Hjalmar Procope who, two years ago when official celebrities at the annual party were few and far between, was the first to arrive—and, incidentally, also the first to leave.

The Yugoslav Minister and Mme. Fotitch, who have been attending Soviet Embassy fetes only a short time (their country didn't recognize the Soviet government until 1940) arrived yesterday with all the Yugoslav delegates to the recent International Labor Conference. Jan Masaryk, son of the late President of Czecho-Slovakia, and himself a delegate to the recent conference, accompanied the Czecho-Slovak Minister and Mme. Hurban.

As in other years, guests ascending the stairway at yesterday's "revolution reception" passed in review before a mammoth picture depicting the battle that resulted in a Red victory 24 years ago. Suitably enough, red roses brimmed from silver vases throughout the handsomely furnished rooms of the embassy, and a red flag, supported by a gold-crested hammer and sickle, surmounted a three-tiered red and white centerpiece on the dining room table.

At a quarter of seven, guests were still surging in to the reception. An hour later, the sturgeons had been reduced to skeletons, there was no more turkey and only a few sandwiches; but drinks continued to be freely poured . . . and several hundred guests were still enjoying the party.

Long before that, however, the few official celebrities in the crowd had disappeared. The first guest to arrive was Dr. Ales Hrdlicka of the Smithsonian Institution. Mrs. Sumner Welles, mink-coated and wearing a brown-veiled hat, came, as usual, with Mrs. Stanley Reed; and they left before Undersecretary Welles arrived.

Mrs. Robert H. Jackson was accompanied by Mrs. Edward Stettinius, the latter joining her husband as soon as he came in. Recently returned from a five-week trip to London, Norwegian Minister Munthe de Morgenstierne was greeting friends on all sides. Coming with him was Mme. Morgenstierne, wearing a Platina scarf with a black ensemble, and all members of the Norwegian legation staff. Swedish Minister Wollmar Bostrom appeared with several members of his staff, including the Swedish Military Attache and Mme. Wessel. The Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun were there; also, the Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu Shih; the Belgian Ambassador, Count Robert van der Straten-Ponthoz; the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera, and the Ambassador of Ecuador, Capitan Colon Eloy Alfaro.

Miss Natalie Askenazy, who will leave soon to become Poland's first woman attache at Moscow, was among those present yesterday, as were the Cuban Ambassador and Senora de Concheso. Not among those present were the Spanish Ambassador and Senora de Cardenas.

"Sure, I'm here," said Leon Henderson; "why I came here when nobody else would. I certainly wouldn't miss it now." The Undersecretary of the Interior and Mrs. John J. Dempsey threaded their way through the crowd. Rear Admiral Emory S. Land chatted with friends in the drawing room, made a quick turn through the dining room, and was soon on his way. Maj. Gen. Robert M. Danford, chief of Field Artillery, was accompanied by his wife. Brig. Gen. Alexander Day Surles and Mrs. Surles were there; also, Maj. Gen. Allen W. Gullion, Brig. Gen. Sherman Miles, and Maj. Gen. Virgil L. Peterson, inspector general of the Army, and Mrs. Peterson.

Down from New York especially for the party was Miss Lillian Hellman, author of "The Little Foxes," who chatted at length with another well-known writer, St. Clair McKelway. Adela Rogers St. John may have been gathering material for a novel or short story when she made the rounds at the reception with her Washintgon hostess, Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr.

Assistant Secretary of State Breckinridge Long went down the receiving line shortly after 6 o'clock. Paying their respects long before that were several official hostesses, including Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck, Mrs. Claude Wickard, who said her husband simply couldn't tear away from his work long enough to get to the party, and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, who was accompanied by Mrs. Richard Patterson, of New York.

Still others there—to mention but a few—were Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Frank Hines, Ralph Totten, Mrs. Mordecai Ezekiel, Mrs. Elbert D. Thomas, accompanied by Mrs. Ralph Stevenson, Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Horgan, Mrs. Thomas Burke, Mrs. Charles Stanley White, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Richberg and Dr. and Mrs. R. R. Sayers.

George Proposes New Tax on All Personal Receipts

By the Associated Press

A "withholding" tax on all personal income was proposed by Chairman George (Democrat), of Georgia, of the Senate Finance Committee, yesterday after Congressional leaders had decided to delay action temporarily on Treasury suggestions for a new revenue bill.

George took the position that sooner or later Congress would have to face the necessity of raising more taxes to offset in part expected expenditures of three billion dollars a month in the next fiscal year. For that reason, he told reporters, he favored not only a payroll levy but a similar tax on all personal receipts.

Darkest Hour Past, Churchill Says

lantic," the premier observed, "our kith and kin are struggling to see that we get all we need—and we find ourselves in goodly company . . .

"Our kith and kin across the Atlantic are straining every nerve to equip us with all we need to cary on the struggle. Regardless of the cost to them or risk to their sailors and ships, they are driving forward with supplies across the ocean and aiding us to strike down and strangle the foe that molests those supplies."

Indicating a belief that the worst is over though much bitter fighting remains to be done, Churchill began his short speech with the words:

"We have passed through the darkest and most perilous period of this struggle and are once more the masters of our own destiny."

He hastened, however, to caution against any assumption that the going may be easier from now on.

"Prussian militarism," he warned, "is abroad again in a new and hideous guise. Nazi tyranny is compelling us to face once more a long struggle and cruel sacrifices. We must not be daunted or deterred by any feeling of vexation.

"I have never given any assurances of a speedy, easy or cheap victory, and I have never promised anything but the hardest conditions, great disappointments and many mistakes. But I am sure that at the end, all will be well for us on this island."

"With a little forethought and a greater measure of slow persistency, we need never have had to face this thing in our lifetime or that of our children.

"But we are resolved to go forward and will not flinch, despite the manifestation of power or threats by which on all sides we have been confronted.

"The resolution of the British people is unconquerable. Neither sudden shock nor long provoking strain can or will alter our course . . . we shall be found ready and anxious to prosecute this war when some of those who provoked it are talking vehemently about peace."

In a sense, Churchill's speech was accepted as a counterpart of Stalin's address of less than 24 hours earlier. For, like the Russian leader, the British premier voiced confidence in ultimate victory and implied that the power of Hitler and his satellites, though tremendous, had nevertheless passed its peak.

A more direct commentary on Stalin's address may be made by Churchill in a war review he is expected to deliver before Commons shortly.

Stalin Gives Nazis Few Months, 'Maybe Year,' Before Collapse

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Nov. 7.—Josef Stalin told his countrymen today that, although their situation is difficult now, they "can and must win victory over the German invaders," who he said "are facing disaster," perhaps within a few months, perhaps a year.

Stalin, whose speeches are rare, was making his second in two days. Speaking at a military review in Red Square in celebration of the twenty-fourth anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution, he appealed to Soviet citizens, including those behind the German lines, to destroy "the brigand hordes" in a "war of liberation." His words were carried by the Moscow radio.

"The German invaders," he said, "are straining their last forces. There is no doubt Germany cannot sustain such a strain for any long time. Another few months, another half-year, one year maybe, and Hitlerite Germany must burst under the weight of her own crimes."

At another point he said:

"If one judges by Germany's actual position and not by the boastful assertion of German propagandists, it will not be difficult to see that the German Fascist invaders are facing disaster."

Although the Soviet must celebrate today's anniversary "in difficult conditions," Stalin declared, with "a number of regions" lost and with the Germans "before the gates of Leningrad and Moscow," they are not so bad as in 1918, when "foreign interventionists" were defeated.

"We experience no serious shortage either in food, arms or clothing," he said, and "our reserves of man power are inexhaustible . . ."

In sizing up the positions of Germany and Russia as their war nears the end of its twentieth week, Stalin prefaced his prediction of a German collapse with these remarks:

"Hunger and impoverishment are now reigning in Germany. In four months of war Germany lost 4,500,000 soldiers. Germany is bleeding to death; her resources are giving out.

"The spirit of revolt is gaining possession not only of the nations of Europe who fell under the yoke of the Greman invaders, but of the German people themselves, who see no end to the war."

Stalin repeated his assertion of yesterday that Germany had counted on Russia's cracking up after the first blow, and that in this she had "badly miscalculated."

Today, he said, Russia stands united with a strong army and navy backed by all the peoples of the Soviet Union, with allies "who jointly form a united front against the German invaders," and with "the sympathy and support of all peoples of Europe who have fallen under the yoke of Fascist tyranny."

"Is it possible then," he asked, "to doubt that we can and must win victory over the German invaders? The enemy is not as strong as certain terror-stricken, weak intellectuals picture him. The devil is not as terrible as he is painted. Who can deny that our army has more than once put the much-lauded German troops to panicky flight?"

LATEST ADDITION TO WASHINGTON'S TELEPHONE CENTRAL OFFICE NAMES

WASHINGTON'S rapidly growing telephones have made necessary the addition of a new central office —"LU dlow." It was named after Brig. Gen. Wm. Ludlow, Engineer Commissioner of the District, 1886-88. Located in the LI ncoln-AT lantic building, it will serve the rapidly growing Northeast area of the city.

The National Defense effort is bringing more and more people to Washington. This means more telephones.

The C. and P. Company is doing — and will continue to do — its level best to meet this unprecedented demand for service. So far this year it has installed twice as many telephones as it had at this time last year. It has opened 7 new central offices in 1941, and plans to open still others next year. Over $20,000,000 has been spent on construction and new equipment this year to provide the service that Washington wants.

Telephone service today, more than ever before, is a vital link. This company fully appreciates its importance in the defense program and will continue to make every effort to furnish satisfactory service under increasingly difficult conditions.

Runaway Mine Issue Aggravates Tokyo-Red Relations

By the Associated Press

Tokyo, Nov. 7.—The future of Japanese relations with the United States and Russia pivoted tonight on what Russia will say to a protest over runaway mines in the Sea of Japan and the outcome of Saburo Kusuru's "war or peace" mission to Washington.

The New York correspondent of the newspaper Asahi telephoned to Tokyo the opinion that the chance of success in rapprochement at Washington was "about 1 in 10 . . . Kurusu holds the fate of war or peace."

Asahi appended the comment that "it should be made clear that Japan will not pay any price" at the expense of Japan's broad program of Asiatic leadership.

Kurusu paused overnight at Manila on his clipper flights. He is expected to take off at dawn Saturday for San Francisco.

Here in Tokyo, a government spokesman said that Kurusu's visit manifested Japan's "earnest desire to bring the talks to a conclusion as early as possible."

It was reported that Kurusu carries a letter from the Japanese premier, Gen. Hideki Tojo, for presentation to President Roosevelt, but there was nothing to indicate it was more than formal credentials.

In the other most important sector of Japan's diplomacy—relations with Russia—the foreign office still awaited an answer to its urgent protest over the sinking Wednesday night of the Japanese steamer, Kehi Maru, with a possible loss of 131 lives, attributed to collision with a mine that had floated from the Vladivostok defense belt.

Koh Ishii, Japanese cabinet spokesman, without waiting for the Russian answer, said that Russia had promised precautions before and questioned her good faith.

Ishii, declaring that free floating explosives, violated freedom of the seas, said that "America must support Japan's stand on this issue."

[It was reported later a second Japanese steamer, the Takuyen Maru, sank in a storm off Hokkaido and 20 of her 45 crewmen are missing. But the cause was not reported.

[Lloyd's Register lists the Takuyen Maru at 3276 tons.]

The Japanese press splashed the new of the United States billion-dollar loan to Russia and took the view that this was but another indication of United States determination to give unstinted help to the powers fighting Germany and Italy.

Kurusu's journey to Washington had behind it the Japanese army's hope that any settlement between the United States and Japan would close the Burma Road, a vital supply channel for the Chungking government in its war with the Japanese.

Authoritative quarters at Chungking said that China would be disposed to accept any suggestion for placing the Burma Road entirely under United States direction and control. Apparently they were inspired to speak thus by the reports of American experts on how to speed up the traffic and increase cargoes carried.

Woolcock was captured during the Battle of Greece.

Miss Mitchell immediately cabled "yes."

They might have a long engagement. Woolcock is a prisoner in Bolzano, Italy.

He spoke at a foreign press association luncheon.

Perhaps, he said, it will be the action of 100,000 tanks combined with that of 100,000 planes and supplied by 50 million tons of shipping "which will cause the enemy's mechanized system to crumble."

Nazi Bombers Raid 6 Towns; RAF Hits Back

By the Associated Press

London, Saturday, Nov. 8.—German air raiders ranged over a wide area of the British Isles last night and caused some dead and injured in attacks on six towns.

Casualties were reported in one inland town and another on the coast in the northeast. Other raided areas included southeast Scotland and the English south and east coasts.

One south coast town was twice attacked by a dive bomber which at first loosed high explosives and then fire bombs. There were no casualties there, however.

The raiders, appearing more numerous than for several nights, encountered heavy antiaircraft barrages and R. A. F. night fighters.

Fighters Turn Bombers

The R. A. F. apparently attacked airdromes across the Channel. Planes were heard crossing the Channel, and there was considerable antiaircraft activity over the French coast in the Boulogne district.

[Berlin reported the city was subjected to an air raid last night and early today.

From Bern, Switzerland, it was reported German air-raid alarms were heard by residents of the Swiss border city of Basel during the night. Three waves of low-flying planes were reported over the Reich.]

Meanwhile it was announced Hurricane fighters, doubling in brass as ground-skimming bombers, paced the R. A. F.'s daylight sweeps of northern France and the occupied coast yesterday, attacking a factory and gun positions.

An announcement said that the Hurricanes, already credited as fighting planes with helping to turn the tide of the Battle of Britain last fall, now are being equipped with bombs to supplement their 4 cannon or 12 machine guns The bomb load was not disclosed.

Presumably the bombs are small, racked in conventional fashion so that the pilots of the one-man planes can release them even while firing his guns.

Called "Hurry Bombers"

The planes have been tagged "hurry bombers." Last night's operations communique said that they participated in one of the daylight raids with other planes whose targets included a German supply train, a wireless station and road transport.

"Enemy fighters were encountered on some occasions and four were destroyed by our fighters in combat," the communique said. "One of our aircraft is missing."

The air ministry news service said the "hurry bombers" passed over a factory in France, leaving the buildings enveloped in flames. At least 12 gun posts which opened fire were said to have been silenced "in a few seconds."

The ministry's news service said that "these fighter-bombers have already proved their worth in recent successful attacks by the fighter command in northern France. The Hurricane bombers are successors to the ground strafers in the last war.

French Arrest Suspects in Nazi Killings

By the Associated Press

Vichy, Nov. 7—Police today announced arrest of a group of persons accused of being terrorist plotters responsible for the assassination of Lieut. Col. Paul Friedrich Hotz, German commandant at Nantes, on October 20.

French and German police, who cooperated in the arrests, were declared also to be hot on the trail of another group which caused the assassination of Dr. Hans Gottfried Reimers, German military lawyer, at Bordeaux on October 21.

The number held was not disclosed, but some of the arrests were reported to have been made in Paris after discovery of terrorist supplies during a house-to-house search.

The Germans executed 50 hostages at Nantes and 50 at Bordeaux last month for the two assissinations. One hundred more hostages who were scheduled to face firing squads received indefinite stays.

Fresh Troops, U. S. Materiel Flow to Iran

By Preston Grover
Associated Press Staff Writer

Ankara, Turkey, Nov. 6 (Delayed).—Britain was reported today to be steadily augmenting her military power in Iran, bordering the Russian Caucasus, with a stream of fresh troops drawn from the empire and American-made tanks and planes and the help of two United States military missions to the Middle East.

The American delegations, each headed by a brigadier general, are expected to bolster not only the transportation organization but to manage the repair and supply for American-made planes.

The transportation and ship unloading situations at the head of the Persian Gulf, an intermediate link in the conveyor belt to Iraq, Iran, and the Caucasus, were said to have been vastly improved but were still far from satisfactory.

Details Are Secret

Britain is steadily building up her strength both in Iran and adjacent Iraq, but details on the movement of forces into Iran are secret.

[In Canberra, Australia, Maj. Gen. Albert Cecil Fewtrell, commander of the First Division of the Commonwealth military forces, said that Australian imperial troops soon might be fighting in the Caucasus.]

The British Middle Eastern front presently reached up to the Caucasus, now under direct German threat, but the British preparations may be pointed in other directions besides junction with the Russians. There is fresh word of German military preparations in Bulgaria, which is separated by Turkey from the British bastions in the Middle East.

The Russian air force still has "pools" of planes far behind the lines, including one in the Caucasus containing upwards of 700 aircraft, according to a military observer who arrived today from Kuibyshev.

Soviet Morale Is Good

The Russian army, he said, has suffered tremendous losses but retains good morale and has "huge masses" of forces yet in being.

He declared that the Russians were capable of carrying on a defensive fight far into the winter but badly wanted tanks and heavy artillery for offensive action because, in their constant retreating, they had lost huge quantities of such equipment to the Germans.

Coupled with the reports of British activities in Iraq, Iran and Syria, there were renewed reports that the Germans steadily were preparing air bases and assembly points in Bulgaria for what one military authority called "a quick move in" if such a step were considered desirable either for military or political purposes.

There was a stream of reports from Bulgaria, some only moderately well confirmed, that the Germans were canvassing major towns and cities to determine the whereabouts of space for quartering soldiers.

Further information indicated that the Germans were marking main highways with signs in German, in the same manner as they have throughout occupied sections of Europe. The signs show not only the direction and distances of certain towns but also point out gasoline, ammunition and food depots as well as repair centers.

These preparations were said to have been accompanied by the arrival of German technicians for air bases and other military operating centers.

Germans Are Glad to Be Slaves, Berlin Retorts to President

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Nov. 7.—Authorized sources, commenting on President Roosevelt's speech before the International Labor Organization yesterday, said today Germany was willing to match her social achievements against those of the United States.

(The President said that labor had become a "slave of the military state" under the Nazi system and that Berlin was "the principal slave market of the world.")

"Nobody is hungry in Germany," a spokesman said.

Stalin Also Assailed

"There are no multimillionaires but there is also no proletariat," he continued. "We're glad to be slaves if thereby an older slavery is broken and the Reich is led into a period of liberty, comfort and plenty. America's social order is catastrophical."

Turning to Josef Stalin's speech yesterday, the same sources said it "revealed the spiritual decay of an Asiatic village despot."

His speech was born of fear and terror and "he tried first to scare Germany and her allies, which is of course laughable; second to encourage the Russian people by producing lying figures and third to bring pressure on England and indirectly on America to relieve him by creating an effective Western Front."

(Stalin said that if the Germans want a war of destruction they will get it, that 4,500,000 Germans had been killed, wounded or captured, and that the lack of a second European front was Russia's chief problem in the war of liberation against Germany.)

Talk His "Swan Song"

German spokesmen accused Stalin of going over the head of Prime Minister Winston Churchill and trying to evoke the aid of British leftists. The British were once again revealed, they said, as a nation which leaves its allies in the lurch.

"Stalin has spoken. He showed he has lost all contact with his own people. It was probably his swan song."

Reprimanded, Woman Corporal Ends Life

London, Nov. 7 (AP).—A coroner decided today that Mary Clement Davies, lance corporal in the Auxiliary Service, committed suicide Wednesday after a reprimand for failing to salute an officer.

Miss Davies, daughter of Clement Davies, member of Parliament and critic of Government policies, was found dead from electric shock at the base of a pylon at the A. T. S. School in southern England. The coroner said she appeared to have lost her temper after the reprimand, failed to keep a promise to apologize and five minutes later was found dead.

between the United States and Japan, the small force would be nothing but a "suicide" battalion, subject to quick annihilation.

The President cautioned reporters against interpreting the announcement, but it's far-reaching implications were the topic of immediate speculation. The revelation came as Saburo Kurusu, top-ranking Tokyo diplomat, was speeding to the United States by clipper in a last-ditch effort to work out a basis for improved relations between the two countries.

Kurusu, according to Tokyo dispatches, is carrying a personal message to the President from Premier Gen. Hideki Tojo, purportedly declaring that if Japanese-American rapprochement is not achieved speedily Japan will be compelled to "use other means" to combat economic and military encirclement by America, Britain, China and the Dutch East Indies.

The envoy also is reported to be prepared to moderate some of Japan's earlier demands. Official circles here, however, doubt that Kurusu is empowered to accept what this country is insisting is the No. 1 concession Japan must make as a prelude to successful negotiations — withdrawal of Japanese troops from China.

The outlook for success of Kurusu's mission is not bright. Should it fail and should Japan's next move bring it into armed conflict with the United States, the position of the marines in China would automatically become precarious. In withdrawing them, military experts pointed out, the President would be taking precautionary measures.

At the same time, diplomats pointed out that withdrawal would be a tacit warning to Japan that the United States is ready for any eventuality in the Far East. They did not see it as a move to appease Japan, which since 1938 repeatedly has urged that all foreign nations withdraw their troops from China.

Japan's position has been that the foreign battalions have been in China only to preserve order and safeguard property and lives of their nationals, and the Nipponese insist that they have sufficiently large forces there to do the job. The presence of the marines as well as troops of other nations has held out the constant threat of clashes with Japanese soldiers and subsequent "incidents" which strain international relations.

Most of the other countries have withdrawn their troops gradually since 1938, leaving the U. S. marines as virtually the only remaining allen force in China.

Priorities Plan to Give Way to Allocation of Resources

tary industry and essential public service in the Nation, industry by industry, and showing month-to-month materials requirements, for 1942.

2. To carry this out, the various industrial branches of OPM will work up the programs of all the industries in their jurisdiction, showing the requirements per unit of production.

3. Concurrently, under previous SPAB orders, similar requirement programs are being worked up for Army, Navy, Maritime Commission, lend-lease and other military needs.

4. When the requirements programs have been prepared, they will be brought to the OPM industrial branches, which have the data on quantities of raw material available for distribution. Then, after deducting the amounts of materials which must go to military needs, agreement will be reached on how much is left over to be allocated to the civilian economy and how much to each industry in the economy.

5. When the program for a certain industry is agreed upon, it will be presented to SPAB for approval. SPAB may approve it, modify it, or order other action.

The approved program will then be transmitted to the OPM priorities division, which will issue orders allocating materials to each industry, or giving high ratings with frozen delivery dates so that military needs will be forthcoming.

Start Will Be Delayed

In making the announcement, the defense agencies said that it will take "a good deal of time to get the entire program into effect," but that as it gradually emerges, it will give "greater certainty" to American business and industry.

At the same time, it will give a clear, over-all picture of the Nation's total raw material requirements, it was said, since SPAB has already ordered the compilation of detailed requirement statements for the armed services, the merchant ship program and lend-lease.

The SPAB and OPM gave this illustration of how a program for a specific industry would be compiled:

"A program for the manufacturers of plumbing equipment would be initiated in the plumbing and heating branch of the division of civilian supply. It would be worked up in consultation with the industry, and cross-checked to see how the military requirements situation might affect it. Then, when it had been put in shape, it would be referred to the various raw materials groups—the iron and steel branch, the copper branch, etc—for a final checking.

"Thus, in effect, each program would originate with the group which is responsible for the end product, with the raw materials groups coming into the picture in an advisory and consultative capacity. Since all programs must of necessity be decreased or increased as armament production rises, each one will be framed so that it can be modified upward or downward in case of need. When a program has been drawn up, it will be reviewed carefully in order to cut down the use of critical materials to the greatest possible extent through simplification of lines, substitution, and so on. The OPM Bureau of Industrial Conservation will work with and through the industrial branches to accomplish this."

Difficulties Admitted

Defense officials freely admitted the enormous size and difficulty of the all-out allocation plan, but explained that the simpler priorities system—relied on to date to direct the flow of materials to military and essential civilian channels, and the method used throughout World War I—had become ineffective. It was discovered that to assure deliveries, higher and higher priorities ratings had to be awarded, with the result that the "currency was inflated" and the materials flowed only in a haphazard way.

Under the allocation plan, it was explained, the defense agencies would determine the percentage by which each civilian manufacturing industry using critical materials must be curtailed. This arrived at, the attempt will be made to guarantee all "essential" civilian industries sufficient raw materials to meet the reduced quota.

Hitherto, with the exception of the farm machinery and equipment industry which is to be used as the first "guinea pig" under the new plan, OPM curtailment orders merely had set a top limit to the number of autos, washing machines, etc. that could be produced. It did not, at the same time, give those industries "purchase tickets" to the amounts of materials necessary to reach the ceilings allowed.

It was believed that scarcely one of the 184,000-odd American manufacturing enterprises would not be affected in some way by the allocation plan. Each one that uses any critical material—ranging from such common sinews of manufacture as iron and steel, lead, zinc, copper and rubber to such rarities as iridium, hexamethylene tetramine and polyvinyl chloride—will eventually —in a matter of months—become dependent on a Government allocation to permit the continuance of manufacture.

Analysis of the figures, however, revealed that the schools could easily meet the consumption increase.

Names of none of the schools, public or parochial, was divulged by the advisory committee, pending final approval of the city-wide plan. They are scattered over all four sections of the Capital.

All of them, according to the committee, comply with the S. M. A. rule that at least 65 per cent of the enrollment must be dependent upon public or private relief or from homes whose heads are on WPA or in the lowest third income bracket.

The only free milk available to undernourished, impoverished school children at present is that provided with WPA-SMA lunches, plus a relatively small amount distributed by parent-teacher associations. Approximately 8000 free school lunches are being served daily. Another 1000 children, at the most, are getting free half pints at recess time through P.-T. A.

Establishment of a 1-cent program, its cost borne jointly by the District and Federal Governments, would raise the number of beneficiaries from 9000 to more than 20,000. If the parochial schools come in, the total would exceed 25,000.

District funds now available are sufficient to accommodate the public school consumption increase. The reason is that the public welfare department now pays 3 cents a half pint for the milk given with the 8000 free lunches. Under the proposed SMA-sponsored program the District would have to pay only 1 cent a bottle, the difference in cost being borne by Federal subsidy. Hence volume could be increased three-fold without added cost to the municipal coffer.

Mrs. Lucian Jordan, a member of the Haycock committee, appealed for speed in sending the approved program along toward fulfillment.

Speed can be made if the individuals involved are so disposed.

A subcommittee was appointed yesterday to submit the school roster informally to Surplus Marketing Administration officials. The conference can be held early next week. Protracted consideration of the plan at SMA is unnecessary, since it was painstakingly drafted to meet every requirement.

A decision can be made, it appears, in plenty of time for the Board of Education to approve the program and make a formal application at its November 19 meeting.

Members of the subcommittee are A. K. Savoy, assistant superintendent of schools; John Ihlder, executive officer, Alley Dwelling Authority; Morris Zelditch, head of the District public assistance division; James E. O'Hearn, representing Msgr. Lawrence J. Shehan, director of Catholic Charities; Mrs. Lucian Jordan, vice president of the District P.-T. A.; Mrs. Louisa Roberts, executive secretary, Council of Social Agencies, and Haycock, who is first assistant superintendent of schools.

Mrs. Roberts reported that two child welfare centers are eligible for penny half pints and wish to participate. The amount they would serve is comparatively small.

Haycock asserted that at least two junior high schools besides the one tentatively included are being considered for participation.

Persecution Claim In Langer Probe

convict," his voice rose to shout, he leaped to his feet and his fist smacked his desk for additional emphasis.

"There is no jury in America but would convict under such circumstances," Burdick declared. "When the judge hit the desk I got a conviction."

As a result of the testimony of J. M. Hanley, former North Dakota State judge, that no one has been able to find out who sent the platoon of Federal troops that suddenly appeared at the Langer trial, the committee instructed its investigators to make inquiry at the War Department.

The troops, he said, marched "in military formation" through the courthouse, stood guard in the courtroom during trial sessions, and escorted Judge Miller to and from his hotel and the courtroom.

The witness, who appeared as counsel for Judge Miller when his confirmation was before the Senate Judiciary Committee, quoted the court as saying during a trial conference in his chambers:

"Well, you know, I think anyone who defends Langer in this case is getting hot money."

"I don't believe Bill Langer ever ran for public office but what he was called a crook," Hanley declared.

"I believe you opposed me at one time Bill," said Hanley, recalling his own candidacy for office. The remark brought from Langer the only audible statement he has made in the hearings thus far:

"I did all I could to beat you."

Burdick testified that Judge Miller impounded the jury list before the Langer trial and refused to make it available to defense attorneys.

Burdick stated that the Governor's decision to declare a debt moratorium for North Dakota farmers, "started trouble for Langer and most of us." The witness was asked by counsel for North Dakota citizens who have petitioned the Senate to deny Langer his seat, if he was removed as assistant district attorney at the request of Judge Miller.

"No, I spoke against prohibition," Burdick replied, "and President Hoover said that embarrassed him and I figured if I could embarrass anyone like Hoover I ought to resign."

Committee members yesterday began consideration, informally, of whether, in view of the circumstances under which Langer took his oath, a report recommending that he be sent back to North Dakota must be approved in the Senate by a two-thirds vote or a simple majority.

When Langer was given the oath of office, Senator Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, the majority leader, told the Senate the oath-taking was subject to investigation of charges in the petition. The point to be determined is whether by this procedure Langer actually was seated. If he was, it will take a two-thirds vote to unseat him.

District's Public Dental Service To Be Expanded

Expansion of public dental services under the Health Department program was announced yesterday by Dr. George C. Ruhland, district Health officer, with establishment of a special dental bureau.

Dr. A. Harry Ostrow, a health department dentist for more than 12 years and former director of the public school dental program, was named to head the new bureau.

Nine school clinics will be operated under the new policy to care for indigent adults and preschool children. Adults will be admitted only to the northwest and southwest health centers and children only at the schools.

Group to Weigh Compulsory Parking Proposal

Projected plans to compel public and private builders to provide off-street parking facilities in future construction projects will be discussed soon at a joint meeting of three special committees of the Board of Trade, it was announced last night.

At a meeting yesterday, the group's highway committee named John Ihlder, of the Alley Dwelling Authority, to head its special conference delegation. The public and private buildings committee already had named George B. Graham as chairman of its subcommittee. The traffic committee has yet to designate representatives. No date for the joint meeting has been set.

The recent question of establishing railroad commuter service into Washington from nearby suburban areas was referred by the highway committee to a special subcommittee after considerable discussion.

Railroad Strike Set for Dec. 5 was trying to deny labor its rights of collective bargaining.

The railroad brotherhoods rejected the wage compromise advanced by President Roosevelt's Fact-Finding Board after it had been accepted by the railroads.

This board recommended a temporary 7½ per cent wage increase whereas the unions had demanded a 30 per cent raise. Present scales vary among the different roads.

December 5 is the earliest date for which a strike could be ordered since Federal statutes provide that 30 days must elapse between the report of a fact-finding board and a strike.

There was no immediate comment from Government officials on the brotherhoods' action, but the belief was widespread in Washington that some step to avert a strike would be taken soon.

Other labor developments:

The C. I. O. United Automobile workers declared no more axles would be shipped from the Ford Motor Co.'s River Rouge, Mich., plant to its Canadian plant at Windsor until the Ford Motor Co. of Canada recognized the C. I. O.-U. A. W.'s bargaining rights. Ford of Canada is turning out many vehicles for the British armed forces.

Welders Close Plants

In the midst of this dispute, a strike by a small group of welders forced closing of some units of the River Rouge plant, making 20,000 idle. The welders said they were asking wage adjustments, but details were not disclosed.

The C. I. O.-U. A. W. struck the Linden (N. J.) assembly plant of General Motors Corporation, affecting 4,000 workers. Strikers said they were protesting discharge of older employes and their replacement by new men.

A jurisdictional dispute threatened a work stoppage at the Nevada Consolidated Copper Corporation, Ely, Nev., which has 6,000 employes. The Labor Department, certifying the threatened strike to the Defense Mediation Board, said it arose from transfer to ore delivery crews of certain work which the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers contended belonged to assembly yard workers and pit crews.

In Kearny, N. J., the C. I. O. Shipbuilders Union was demanding discharge from the Navy-operated Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Company of union men behind with their dues. The Navy referred the demand to the Defense Mediation Board which appointed a special investigator to inquire into it.

Stanwyck and Fonda Fight It Out on Earle Screen

'You Belong to Me' Is a Marital Farce, With Lady Doctor Curing Hubby's Money Ills; Pinky Tomlin Headlines the Stage Revue

"YOU BELONG TO ME." Columbia picturization of a story by Dalton Trumbo, adapted to the screen by Claude Binyon, costarring Barbara Stanwyck and Henry Fonda, with Edgar Buchanan, Roger Clark, Ruth Donnelly, Melville Cooper, Ralph Peters, Maude Eburne, Mary Treen, Gordon Jones and Fritz Feld. Directed by Wesley Ruggles. At the Earle Theater.

THOSE WHO ATTEND the Earle Theater this week looking for a "moral" in "You Belong to Me," will come away with an armful. They will not be too difficult to manage because they are all pretty light and flimsy, but among them will be, "If you are a man, don't be an overgrown baby," "Don't marry a lady doctor," "Don't be jealous," "Don't own 10 million dollars, unless you expect to do something useful to society with all that inherited swag," "Don't filch an honest workingman's job" and, above all, "Don't go skiing."

The screen comedy Claude Binyon has extracted from the Dalton Trumbo fiction begins with that skiing business, when Peter Kirk spies a handsome number on the mountainside, enjoys a trick spill to attract her attention and then discovers that she is a distaff doctor. She gets the case. She also gets married to her patient almost before she can say "bring a bandage" and from that moment finds herself hitched to a temperament just one thin hair this side of the psychopathic ward.

There is the foundation here for a better marital farce than Columbia has maneuvered, this time out. It is shoddily written and repetitious in action. The dialogue frequently is such as no two literate young people ever would speak in the given circumstances and Mr. Kirk is made out a pretty thorough-going cad, shot through with childish jealousy which he is willing to express in acts for which a 6-year-old would be stood up in the corner without his supper. But despite this distinctly juvenile approach, there is a great deal at which an audience laughs uproariously. It is sometimes doubtful whether they are laughing with or at the characters and their predicaments, but there it is. They laugh. Since laughter is what comedies are for, one suspects that "You Belong to Me" will chalk itself down as one of the box-office's most popular items.

There is still some doubt in the critical mind, however, that the spectacle of a young millionaire, sticking branches of trees in his hat as camouflage while he spies on his wife at the party given by a former rival as much in his honor as in hers, thereby scaring the daylights out of the ladies, marks the high tide of adult humor. Or that mauling his wife's innocent male patients as an outlet for his own petulance is the stamp of normal young manhood, either. The critical mind, obviously, is the one that is unseated, for the audience howled at these episodes. When Millionaire Kirk decides to buy a hospital and conduct it as a social service, instead of selling neckties for $22.50 a week, to the immense irritation of the employes' association with an eye single to the underdog in need of a job, "You Belong to Me" gets on a considerably straighter track. At any rate, there it is and I hope you like it.

Cast Better Than Its Material

Barbara Stanwyck, as the youthful medical practitioner harassed by her own personal attractiveness, and Henry Fonda, as the sort of Peter Kirk he probably would be the first to bust in the jaw, instead of vice versa, play valiantly to overcome the handicaps of Mr. Binyon's script. Some of their lines are impossible, but, even so, they lend them a sort of specious credibility. That admirable character actor, Edgar Buchanan, who did so much to lift "Texas" out of the ruck, performs a similarly valuable service in "You Belong to Me," in the minor, but important, role of the gardener, fountainhead of the most sagacious advice his master ever gets. Roger Clark is competent on the receiving end of Mr. Fonda's punches and both Melville Cooper, as a discerning butler, and Ruth Donnelly, a bewildered nurse, are helpful on the side of the picture's legitimate comedy.

On the stage this week, Harry Anger has pitched a circus revue that takes its keynote from the remarkable feats of the Great Gretonas on the tight wire which, to them, is as substantial a footing as the maple planking of the stage itself. They do many things on their slender thread that most of us can't do on the ground—thank goodness! What good is a broken neck, anyway? Geraldine and Joe contribute an acrobatic dancing interval that is not without its circus aspects and only Pinky Tomlin departs from the sawdust-and-red-lemonade implications of the rest of the bill. Mr. Tomlin, familiar to stage, radio and screen audiences, headlines the "in person" entertainment with a quietly sung cycle of songs, most of which he wrote himself, and scores emphatically in the process. The radiant Roxyettes, of course, are in there, achieving their most notable hits with the "Circus Idea" and R. A. F. gun drill routines.

Jo Lombardi's orchestral overture, plus Gene Archer's splendid barytone; the newsreel, with first air shots of an actual 60-ship convoy, and an enlivening and enlightening Technicolor issue of "Popular Science" complete a program that neither soars to the highest peaks nor plunges to the lowest depths in its effort to reach every popular taste.

Palace

Ever since Mark Twain set his Conneticut Yankee down in King Arthur's court, Yanks in England have been a potent entertainment inspiration. Latest of these to capture the public imagination is Tyrone Power's current film, "A Yank in the R. A. F.," which Thursday began its second week at the Palace.

Two matters set "A Yank in the R. A. F." a couple of notches above the usual adventures of the bright, brash Yanks in Olde Englande. More impressive of these are the action shots of the great air force, incorporated into the purely fictional film to make a finale you won't soon forget. The evacuation of Dunkirk is reproduced for a gripping climax. Second of these admired matters is a determination to keep things on a bantering plane, not getting so heroic that its nobility stifles you. While Power certainly seem to have incarnated the manly virtues in this broadly written role, he also manages to be a credible heel whose regeneration is by no means certain at the fadeout.

Inspiration not only to Power, but to a new player, John Sutton, is embodied in Betty Grable, for whom "embodied" is the word. Her voice and gams lend a feminine yet vigorous touch that is neatly in key with the action of the film. She plays an American dancer in blitzed London, trying to choose between the boyish Power and the reticent Sutton. Reginald Gardiner is on hand as a bantering referee.

Altogether, though, "A Yank in the R. A. F." exists for its force and vigor.

Arresting Tale

Drama, suspense are mixed in an arresting style in "Suspicion," new Cary Grant-Joan Fontaine costarring vehicle, directed by Alfred Hitchcock. The unusual story deals with a strange marriage and its even stranger outcome.

Hollywood, Nov. 7.

When I went over the hill to Twentieth Century to talk with Ginger Rogers (who can throw herself into a part more readily than almost any girl I know) she talked about nothing but her farm up in Oregon, three miles of which is beside the Rogue River. They're already milking 20 cows, and in a fortnight expect to have 20 more. "And what it's done to Lela you'll never know," Ginger said. "Lela was opposed to my buying it—now I can't get her to leave it. I expect to join her for the Christmas holidays." So saying, Ginger hopped right back into the scene, playing the frizzy-haired murderess, Roxie Hart, in a Chicago jail, and went into the battle of the century with Helene Fortescue Reynolds that's going to make the row in "The Women" look like a dress rehearsal."

GINGER ROGERS

And George Montgomery, who's done yeoman service in lots of Zane Grey's stories, has now graduated from westerns, since he's appearing opposite Ginger, and is lined up for two top roles in "Beautiful Dope" and "Vicki and Her Ego."

Before they reached Balboa, boys admitted they had only an hour and a half to make their ship, so Preston kept going and got them under the tape. Pretty nice for the boys, but did Preston catch it when he boarded his OWN boat!

Broadway Glossary

New York, Nov. 7.

DISCORD: Saturday afternoon William Green, as president of the A. F. of L., gave a cocktail party for the delegates from 33 nations, who are in New York attending the International Labor Organization convention. One of those invited was David Dubinsky, head of the I. L. G. W. U. . . . When Dubinsky arrived, he saw the notorious Joseph S. Fay, vice president of the International Union of Operating Engineers—the man who slugged him at the New Orleans convention, after Dubinsky had introduced the anti-racketeer resolutions . . . Dubinsky saw Fay—and left the party.

LECTURE: Norman Cousins, of the Saturday Review of Literature, lectured this week before the Nineteenth Century Women's Club at Oak Park, Ill. He related an anecdote told by Ernest Hemingway's publisher—of the day when Hemingway was a youngster in Chicago, and obtained his parents' consent to enroll at a boxing school where the fee for the entire course was to be paid in advance. The instructor always broke the pupil's nose at the first lesson—so he wouldn't return for any more. Only one pupil ever returned for a second lesson—Hemingway . . . After Cousins related this story, a lady approached him and whispered: "Amusing, but I never heard of that story. And I should know. I'm Mrs. Hemingway—Ernest's mother."

HOPE: To Bernstein's apartment this week came a young actor, Jean Pierre Aumont, who had played in many of Bernstein's presentations in Paris. Aumont had managed to get out of Unoccupied France, to Honduras, and finally to New York. He was worried—because he still doesn't know his family's whereabouts. He was lost—because America is a strange country to him . . . "Do you think I'll do all right here?" Aumont asked . . . "I'll say you'll do all right," said Bernstein. He immediately signed Aumont—who had arrived in America only 25 minutes earlier—to a role in his new play, "Rose Burke," in which Katharine Cornell and Philip Merivale will appear.

RECOGNITION: At the "Financial Follies" show, Saturday night, Leon Henderson sat next to Wendell Willkie. Each of them studied the program cover, which featured sketches of Ickes, Hopkins, Wallace, Henderson, Douglas and others . . . Willkie tried to identify them. "They're all New Dealers," Henderson told him . . . "How can you tell?" asked Willkie . . . "Because," said Leon, "their mouths are open."

ENTERPRRISE: Sam Behrman has been assigned to write a magazine article about George Jessel. The playwright will stress George's constant multi-activities, which once elicited from Eddie Cantor the comment: "Jessel always has so many irons in the fire, he puts the fire out" . . . Jessel currently is starring on a weekly radio program, and is appearing in "High Kickers," the musical comedy which he wrote and produced. . . . Behrman went to Jessel's apartment to get a full report on all these varied ventures. Result: Sam Behrman and George Jessel now are collaborating in the writing of a new play.

CHOICE: Henry Bernstein, the French playwright, confessed to Oscar Levant: "I have told many of your witticisms, at a number of dinner parties, with great success" . . . "I say the witty lines," Levant complained, "but you get the dinner invitations" . . . In New York, one must choose between Wit and Invitations to Dinner," said Bernstein. "I choose the Invitations."

Columbia

Back for a fourth week on F Street has come "Honky Tonk," the Clark Gable-Lana Turner film. Now on view at the Columbia, "Honky Tonk" concerns itself with a boisterous west of an earlier day, an era when a New England lass was considered brave as all get out to wed the most untamed gent west of the Alleghenys. Frank Morgan, Claire Trevor, Marjorie Main and Albert Dekker are the other principals.

From bar to bedroom, "Honky Tonk" wastes no finesse, minces no words in telling its story. Gable is the bigwig of the Nevada boom town, to all appearances a pillar of legality, yet robbing the public right and left. Though her own father, played by Morgan, is little better, Bostonian Turner sets her heart for the fellow, gets him drunk so he'll marry her and doesn't relent when he doesn't reform according to floor plan.

Metropolitan

"You'll Never Get Rich," the dancingest comedy that has found its way from the training camps of the selectees to the screens of the Nation, to date, renews its downtown popularity as chief feature for the new week at the Metropolitan Theater.

With Fred Astaire and Rita Hayworth in the costellar roles, there is no need now to rhapsodize again over the quality of the dances with which this tuneful and amusing frolic is peppered. Not much need, either, to go into the ramifications of the plot that concerns itself with a young musical comedy star who prefers the army to an equal partnership in his boss' eternal squabbles with his wife. The army, for once, didn't help him much. His boss' shenanigans and his own love troubles followed him into the service. That is how it comes about that Robert Benchley, Frieda Inescourt, Osa Massen and John Hubbard get in on the guardhouse goings-on.

Realty Boards Solidly Back U. S. Defense

By Thomas M. Cahill.
Post Real Estate Editor

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 7.—Fully recognizing that efforts involved will require great sacrifices on the part of all members, their associates and employes, the National Association of Real Estate Boards at its closing convention session here today pledged loyal support to National Government in protecting America and the institutions of democracy.

In a statement of policies the association expressed belief that national defense must now take first place in thinking and planning and all personal interests be subordinated, adding this unity of purpose assures a victorious outcome.

Deeply concerned that acceleration of the defense program shall not result in the ruin of small business enterprises, through priorities and award of contracts to large firms, the association urged the Government that in building Government-financed defense housing, small private home builders be used on a parity with large contracting firms. In this connection, it indorsed Senate bill creating a bureau in the Office of Production Management to assist small businessmen in obtaining necessary information procedure with respect to governmental contracts.

Government Ownership Hit

A resolution was adopted condemning further expansion of Government ownership, operation and management of real property in competition with private enterprise as a grave menace and negative influence on the progress of society. It stated promotion and development of real property by a tax-endowed agency, such as the United States Housing Authority or an agency of similiar purpose for creating housing for one class at expense of another class of citizens, establishes a breach in the proper functions of Government and should be terminated.

It also declared the association shall act in every way within its power to maintain the institution of free property ownership and quality of distribution of the burden of taxation. It instructed officers and committees to undertake an active educational campaign to further the purposes of the resolution and pledged use of all the association's influence in combatting the tendency of State and Federal Governments to usurp the field of real estate operation.

Union Monopoly Assailed

Government agencies were urged to use their influence to obtain during the emergency, alteration of local building codes insofar as they tend to establish artificially high cost levels in the building field, and seek to curb monopolistic practices of trade unions and material distributors.

The association deplored the present trend in the Federal Government to increased use of its own employes in real estate activities in connection with the defense program which should normally and properly be executed by private business. This statement of policy especially referred to use of Federal employes in land assembly work now carried on by the War and Navy Departments and to a large amount of appraisal work in connection with phases of the program now being done by employes of the Home Loan Bank System and the FFederal Housing Administration. It voiced belief that such work can best be left in normal private channels with benefits to the Government as well as business.

"If Government continues to absorb to an increasing degree the functions of private enterprise," it emphasized, "the American way of living, which is based on private enterprise, will soon be endangered by the very process of defending it."

Wary on Rent Control

Believing attempts to control some prices without controlling wages and all other elements entering into prices is unfair, unsound and cannot succeed, the group held any attempt to control rents by law must also control all factors contributing to cost of ownership and operation of property, especially wages and property taxes.

Reporting as proving eminently successful the present Government policy based on formation of quasi-public local fair-rent committees for arbitration of landlord-tenant differences, the association offered continued support to their operation whereever these may, in the judgment of office of price administration, be in interest of the defense program and public.

This statement warned that any attempt to freeze rentals will inevitably result in slowing of the home-building process thus causing greater shortage and postponing relief of crowded conditions.

President Philip W. Kniskern announced the association will continue to oppose a rent-control bill pending in the Senate on the ground that it does not conform to the parent body's idea on this matter. Congress has been asked by the associatino not to pass the bill or to limit its operation to two years, if passed.

The association will keep up its fight for over-all limitation of property taxes. St. Louis was chosen the 1942 convention city.

Leblanc, Creator Of Arsene Lupin, Dies in France

Vichy, Unoccupied France, Nov. 7 (AP).—Maurice Leblanc, 77, detective story writer and creator of Arsene Lupin, died yesterday at his son's home in Perpignan.

Leblanc caught cold in an unheated train when coming to visit his son, who was ill. Only two weeks ago his sister, the singer, Georgette Leblanc, long associated with the Belgian author, Maurice Maeterlinck, died at Le Cannet, France.

Ieblanc, who had a world-wide reputation as a pioneer of the detective novel in France, was known as the French Conan Doyle and in one novel pitted his own brain child, Arsene Lupin, against the English novelist's Sherlock Holmes.

This work, entitled "Arsene Lupin Against Sherlock Holmes," was published in 1908. Others included "Arsene Lupin, Gentleman Robber," "The Hours of Mystery," "The Crystal Stopper," "The Golden Triangle," "The Three Crimes of Arsène Lupin," "The Lady With the Green Eyes," and "The Teeth of the Tiger."

Spy Suspect Told Nazis of Ship Sailings

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 7.—Axel Wheeler-Hill, one of 15 men on trial charged with espionage conspiracy, testified today that he broadcast messages to Germany concerning movements of British ships out of New York Harbor.

He said he built a 100-watt short wave transmitter in collaboration with Josef Klein, another defendant, but, he said, Klein did not know what messages had been sent.

"I told him a phoney story about sending business messages to Germany," Wheeler-Hill said.

Under cross-examination by Assistant U. S. Attorney T. Vincent Quinn, Wheeler-Hill said he was commissioned by a Frederick Schroeder in Hamburg to report British ship movements here, and that he met Schroeder through his brother, Kurt Wheeler-Hill, once in the German diplomatic service. Another brother, James, was convicted of perjury in connection with his activities as secretary of the German-American Bund.

FBI Got His Code

He said that following his arrest he had refused to disclose to the FBI the secret code used in communicating with Hamburg.

"But you don't regard the code as secret any longer?" asked Quinn.

"No."

"That was a code known only to you and somebody in Germany?"

"And the FBI."

"Where did the FBI get it?"

"In Germany. William Sebold (counterespionage agent) got it there."

"What was your purpose."

"Germany wanted to know what goods were being shipped to England." (He said yesterday he reported sailings and cargoes of 300 or 400 ships between January, 1940, and May, 1941.)

"Wasn't your purpose to have Germany torpedo the British ships you reported?"

"No."

Mdway Island Employe Seized

Honolulu, Nov. 7 (AP).—A 46-year-old World War veteran who worked as a chef at Midway Island the past year was held today for the Federal grand jury on a charge he had attempted to send maps showing vital defenses of the mid-Pacific outpost to his wife in San Francisco.

The man, Edward John Coquelle, testified before the United States commissioner yesterday that his nephew, Alfred Munson, had inadvertently put the maps in a suitcase while helping him pack.

Lieut. Wendell F. Brooks, of the Midway Base, said the maps, issued to Coquelle as a member of the volunteer fire department, show complete details of the naval station as well as bombsight locations, gasoline storage tanks, water wells and other details.

The maps were found in Coquelle's luggage when it arrived here two weeks ago. He was arrested upon his arrival Tuesday.

Dollar-a-Year Men Aid Big Business, Coffee Charges

By the Associated Press

Representative Coffee (Democrat), of Washington, chairman of the House liberal bloc, said in a statement yesterday the bloc intended to "expose the connection of dollar-a-year men in defense agencies with big corporations" with a view of separating them from Government work.

"Some of the highest officers in the Office of Production Management, not dollar-a-year men, in executive sessions of the liberal bloc have revealed such startling facts that we are determined to pursue a course to the end that no dollar-a-year men shall hereafter be on the Government payroll," Coffee said. "We should pay them a reasonable salary so their loyalty will be to the Government and not to some big corporation."

Coffee said Army and Navy contracts were concentrated in the hands of big corporations in a way that "will startle the world." He said the ordnance departments of the Army and Navy refuse to permit subletting of contracts.

D.C.'s $55,133,147 Budget Submitted

$14,333,600 under the Commissioners' action.

But even with the cut, schools will get $249,502 above current appropriations. Proposed purchase of ten sites for new buildings were eliminated and only one new school was provided—a junior high for Negroes at Forty-ninth Street and Washington Place Northeast.

Future necessity for new schools to care for Washington's increased population, the Commissioners hope, will be cared for under the 150-million-dollar Lanham Act for aid to defense communities. The District would get six million dollars.

Park officials had asked for an immediate fund of one million dollars to start work on 30 proposed recreation areas and approval of 18 million dollars for a long-range development of park sections.

The Commissioners vetoed both proposals, contending that only vital and immediate necessities should be recommended.

Welfare authorities wanted an increase of more than two million dollars for rising relief needs, but were granted $8,349,090—barely $200,000 above current money. Total asked by the welfare department was $10,235,119.

There are no provisions in the new budget for an estimated $115,000 to grant automatic pay raises to District employes under the Ramspeck-Mead Act and funds for a new Home for the Aged and Infirm also were left out.

Deficiency appropriations are expected to be requested for these items later on.

Possibly in anticipation of at least partial Congressional approval of the 44 million dollar Whitehurst plan for highway improvements, the Commissioners cut the highway fund by $365,0041 over present appropriations.

The city heads approved a total of 5,845,083. The current figure is $6,210,124 and the highway department had asked for $5,943,783.

A request for $3,530,788 was made by the Health Department. The Commissioners cut this estimate to $3,143,410.

Roosevelt Orders Stettinius to Rush Soviet Aid Plans

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt last night directed Lend-Lease Administrator Edward R. Stettinius, jr., to draft plans for transmission of defense supplies to the Soviet Union "as quickly as possible."

A letter from the President to Stettinius was made public by the White House shortly after the lend-lease administrator and one of his aides, Oscar Cox, had conferred briefly with the Chief Executive.

"I have today found that the defense of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is vital to the defense of the United States," the President said in his letter, which was regarded as the first immediate follow-up to the billion-dollar lend-lease credit to Russia which was announced Thursday night.

"I should appreciate it if you would work out as quickly as possible the details of this program with representatives of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics," he said.

Roosevelt Asks $86,280 for Upkeep Of Capital Airport

In a message to Congress requesting $58,160,725 in supplemental appropriations for the Commerce Department, President Roosevelt yesterday included an additional amount of $86,280 for maintenance and operation of the Washington National Airport during the current fiscal year.

Budget Director Harold Smith stated in an appended note to the message that the sum "will permit the administrator of civil aeronautics to operate the Washington National Airport with the proper degree of care and efficiency."

Reuben James Sunk While Aiding Tanker

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 7.—The American destroyer Reuben James was torpedoed and sunk while mercifully aiding the torpedoed American Navy tanker Salinas, passengers of the Icelandic steamer Godafoss said today on arriving after a harrowing 16-day voyage marked by submarine attacks and the constant dropping of depth charges.

Collectively, the 31 pasengers pictured the section of the North Atlantic patrolled by American ships as being "alive with submarines," an area so dangerous that the convoy went almost 1000 miles off the normal course.

Aboard the 1542-ton herring boat, passengers stayed up at night and slept in the daytime, for submarines seldom attack then. They wore lifebelts 24 hours a day and said they lived in dread after seeing the distress flares from the Salinas.

News Cameramen Tell Of Attack on Convoy

New York, Nov. 7 (INS).—In the light of bursting star shells two American newsreel cameramen from a convoy guarded by warships and harried by Nazi U-boats saw the U. S. destroyer Reuben James steam to her doom as she went to the aid of the torpedoed U. S. tanker, the Salinas.

The eyewitnesses of the attack on the convoy—who did not, however see the actual sinking of the Reuben James with a toll of 100 dead and missing, are Neil Sullivan and Larry Kennedy, cameramen, who arrived here today from Iceland on board a drab, chunky one-stock merchantman, the Icelandic liner Godafoss.

The Godafoss was the closest ship to the Salinas in the convoy of 43 ships. Here is the tale told by the two photographers:

"We—the Salinas, the Godafoss and three American freighters—left Reykjavik, Iceland, on October 23. A little way outside the harbor we picked up five United States destroyers. One of them was the Reuben James.

Stalked by U-Boats

"We sailed 480 miles south from Iceland for a rendezvous two days later with a British convoy of 38 merchantmen, mostly tankers. We continued to a point about 800 miles south of Iceland, apparently trying to get out of the danger zone, but the submarines were dogging us almost from the start. We could not see them, but we knew they were there.

"The convoy could only make 6 miles an hour and we knew the subs were zigzagging behind us.

"The destroyers prowled up and down and in and out of the formation of merchantmen.

"Everyone aboard the Godafoss had been told to sleep with lifebelts on and to stand by the lifeboats if anything happened. We did not get much sleep, except in the daytime; and three times during the voyage we were ordered to stand by the lifeboats.

"The tanker Salinas was the closest ship to us in the convoy. Of course even that was some distance away and the Salinas was attacked at night when everything was blacked out.

"Some time late on October 29 or early on October 30, we heard a single loud report and then a single deep vibration. We knew a ship had been torpedoed. We knew it wasn't just a depth bomb being dropped on a sub, because ashcans (depth-bombs) are always dropped four at a time and go off in a series of four explosions.

"After the single explosion, star shells and flares were sent up to light the vicinity of the damaged Salinas. Then we saw a destroyer circling around dropping ashcans. It must have dropped 16 or 20 all told. Every time they went off our boat rocked and vibrated.

"The Reuben James and another destroyer went to the aid of the Salinas, falling behind the rest of the convoy, and the following night the Reuben James was sunk.

"We on board the Godafoss didn't know what had happened to the Reuben James and the Salinas until we heard over the radio that the Reuben James had been sunk and that the damaged Salinas had made port."

Speed on Rents

The Senate District Committee showed a commendable appreciation of Washington's acute housing problem when it conducted hearings, drafted amendments and tentatively approved the rent-control bill in one day. The customary practice of referring such bills to a subcommittee was dispensed with to hasten the measure to the Senate floor. There is, of course, ample reason for this prompt action. A survey as of November 1 indicates that only one out of every thousand apartments is vacant. Houses for rent are believed to be equally scarce. In normal times vacancies would be 50 to 70 times as numerous as they are today. This critical situation should induce the Senate to act with no less dispatch than the District Committee has manifested.

Fortunately, the committee has eliminated the one indefensible feature of the bill as it was passed by the House. That is the Patman amendment. Representative Patman attempted to make the adjustment of exorbitant rents contingent upon findings by the rent-control administrators as to the value of the property and the service rendered. Witnesses before the committee were unanimous in believing that this provision would be unwise and some think it would make the bill unworkable. Apparently, this amendment was accepted only because its author threatened a quorum call. By that stratagem he could have brought about indefinite postponement of action on the bill. For, according to Congressman Randolph, there was not a quorum of the House in Washington last Monday.

The Senate Committee has properly given more flexibility to the rent-freezing requirements as applied to hotels. Probably its decision that employes of the Rent-Control Administration should be confirmed by the Commissioners is also reasonable. But certainly it would be a bad precedent to have the Senate confirm the rent-control administrator appointed by the city fathers. That provision would simply tie the local government more securely to the apron strings of Congress. Less and not more Congressional interference in the administration of District affairs is the object to be sought. The Commissioners will be under obligation to appoint the most competent public servant available to this post. But there seems to be no good reason why the rent-control administrator or other officials appointed by the local authorities should be confirmed by the Senate.

Bioff And Browne

Bioff and Browne, the archracketeers, who insinuated themselves into control of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, have been convicted of extorting over half a million dollars from the heads of four leading motion picture companies. Their total takings from the industry are estimated to have been more than twice that sum, but that is no matter. What really counts is that the organized labor movement has been rid of two dangerous gangsters who occupied positions of great power and influence in the A. F. of L. Westbrook Pegler performed a great public service in calling attention to the underworld connections of Browne and Bioff when they were "riding high" and in unearthing the fact that Bioff was a fugitive from justice. It is quite possible that, but for Mr. Pegler's revelations, these two gangsters might still be picking the pockets of movie czars instead of awaiting sentence for offenses carrying maximum penalties of 30 years' imprisonment. It is to be hoped that the punishment meted out to the miscreants will be severe enough to inhibit other pseudo-labor leaders who live by exploiting working men and women. And it is also to be hoped that the publicity attendant upon their trial will make President Green and his associates in the A. F. of L. more careful in the future about the company they keep.

However, as we pointed out recently, there is another side to this sordid story that has received insufficient attention. That is the craven role played by the heads of the motion picture industry. They have given testimony in the Browne-Bioff trial that casts doubt upon their personal fitness to occupy the responsible and important positions they now hold. Books were doctored in order to cover up the graft paid to Bioff and Browne. Judge Knox remarked that "no one likes the idea of these movie magnates falsifying their books and records, as they testified during the trial, but remember," he added, significantly, "that the movie magnates are not on trial." Could this be a hint that they ought to be forced to give an accounting of their stewardship? Again Mr. Pegler has anticipated the issue by a current recital of his abortive efforts back in 1938 to make contact with the Hollywood bribe-givers. We share his certainty that more will be heard about the business morals of the men in the movie industry after the convicted gangsters have been removed from the spotlight.

Virtue Of An "If"

It is not, as our readers may have noticed, our invariable habit to take the public statements of Comrade Stalin at face value. His assertion, for example, that Hitler has already lost 4,500,000 effectives—or more than half the estimated total of his forces—in the Russian gamble, had best be read with a somewhat fishy eye. And yet, in saying that Germany is bleeding to death and that her resources are giving out, Comrade Stalin may, for once, have come fairly close to the truth. Anyway, he gives Hitler's Germany "another few months, another half year, one year maybe" before—and here he must have cleared his throat—bursting "under the weight of her crimes." At least, it may now be taken as certain that Hitler's political star has reached its zenith and now is in decline.

It has been widely prophesied that the decline of Hitler's star would be even more precipitous than its rise. But, thus far, the war has confounded all prophets. So, for guidance, we shall turn to Dr. Josef Goebbels. In a magazine article, which is to be published this week, Dr. Goebbels speculates upon what may happen to the German people if Germany loses the war. The "Anglo-Saxon" powers (note the plural) will reduce their condition, he says, to a "living inferno beside which all past hardships will pale." Therefore, the Germans have no choice but to resign themselves to the prospect of a hard and relentless war, costing gigantic expense of national strength from which no one can be spared. Now this statement contains some plain and astonishing implications; viz: (1) that victory is not only not imminent; it is not even certain; (2) that complete American participation in the war is taken for granted; (3) that any idea of surrender or abandonment of the Nazi leadership is precluded by the certainty of vengeance in which all Germans would share.

Most astonishing of all is the fact that a precis of Dr. Goebbel's article was given in advance of publication to foreign correspondents at Berlin. By them it was dutifully cabled to America. Since it is the habit to attribute Machiavellian motives to all Dr. Goebbels' actions, we may well wonder what was the motive of this one. Why is Dr. Goebbels anxious to have us know that Germany is no longer certain of victory, that it is now fighting not so much for a "New Order" or for the preservation of "Christian civilization" as for its "elemental existence"; that the German people are bound to their leader not so much by belief in his triumph as by fear that if he is beaten, they must share his fate?

We do not profess to know the answers to these questions. But there is at least this much truth in what Goebbels has to say: that there is danger that the collapse of Nazi power will be followed by utter anarchy not only in Germany but in all continental Europe, enervated by terror, hunger and the wreck of all traditional institutions. It will take statesmanship of the highest order in both London and Washington to forestall this danger. The task of preparation for peace is no less stupendous than the task of preparation for war.

District Budget

Washington's budget for the fiscal year 1943 has been confined to bare essentials by the Board of Commissioners. Requests of the various departments have been severely trimmed to avoid any increase in local taxes. From the viewpoint of national policy there is much to be said for this rigid conservatism. With Federal taxes much higher than they were a year ago, local taxes certainly ought to be held in check. At the same time many public improvements must be postponed until the heavy demand for raw materials in the manufacture of war supplies has subsided.

When these stern realities have been given due weight, however, the new role in which the Capital has been cast should not be forgotten. Washington is the fulcrum of the defense program. Within a few months it has been transformed into a hustling city filled with manufacturers seeking defense orders, with new Government employes, selectees from nearby camps and thousands of others who have come to serve this army of defense workers. No one can step into a hotel, or watch the surging crowds on any downtown street without realizing that the city has experienced an enormous growth in population overnight. And thousands of additional residents are still coming.

In these circumstances it means little to say that the Commissioners have approved the largest budget in the city's history. Obviously huge cities require huge municipal budgets. The really disturbing fact about the table of expenditures proposed for 1943 is that in many instances it will entail actual cuts in the service that can be rendered to individuals. The Commissioners appear to have made ample allowance for the city's rapid growth in asking for 195 additional policemen. But the estimates for public health and welfare, for example, will probably involve a letdown in standards as compared with the present year.

This outlook would be less serious if a high quality of municipal service had been maintained in the past. But few District agencies have ever been permitted to attain standards befitting the Nation's Capital. In many instances the new demands for public service are imposed upon institutions already suffering from long neglect. The Commissioners as well as Congress ought to realize that they are not dealing with a static situation. The desire to keep new taxes and public improvements at a minimum during the emergency must be balanced against the imperative requirements of public health and safety in a city that is experiencing mushroom growth.

Gov. Sulzer

Probably no public figure of this country has been so thoroughly forgotten by the public as William Sulzer, who died the other day at the age of 85. To most of those who came of age in the 1920's the name means nothing, but 28 years ago it appeared for months in the big bold type of front page headlines in nearly every city of the land. Sulzer was the handsome, long haired, rather theatrical reform Democrat who was swept into the exalted office of Governor of New York in the same election that swept Woodrow Wilson into the Presidency. It was the height of the reform wave; it was the day of the New Freedom when words like "liberal," "progressive," "forward-looking" had a talismanic value. All these adjectives could be applied to Sulzer and for a time it looked as though the finger of a great destiny might be on him. He thrilled the Nation with his open defiance of Boss Murphy of Tammany Hall. Then, ten months after his inauguration, he left office in disgrace. He had been impeached on charges of perjured testimony concerning campaign expenditures by the very Legislature that he had called into session for the purpose of putting more teeth into the Corrupt Practices Act.

Few men in American political history have had such a rapid rise and fall. Sulzer still had some following, especially on New York's East Side, which once again returned him to Albany as an assemblyman. But after one brief term he disappeared forever from the political stage and from the public consciousness. Now and then he could be noticed in the law courts—a lost and lonely figure invested with some of the tragic dignity of a man who had defied fate in the person of Boss Murphy and thus had wrought his own ruin without having fully deserved it.

Senate Vote

Last night marked an event in our history the significance of which cannot be over-emphasized. The Senate, by a vote of 50 to 37, resolved upon a revision of the Neutrality Act so comprehensive as to be tantamount to repeal. If, as is confidently expected, the House agrees, then the President will be empowered both to arm our merchant vessels and to send those vessels into belligerent ports. Such a step would bring about that alignment between the Executive and the Legislature in our positive defense against Hitlerism which has never yet been completely attained. The alignment would be due to the Senate's own volition. All that the President requested was the arming of our merchantmen. To this request the House agreed by a vote of 259 to 138. Mr. Roosevelt hoped, to be sure, that Congress would itself initiate the removal of the ban upon our merchantmen entering combat zones. But on this hope the House took no action. The Senate's initiative was due in no small measure to the revolt against Republican isolationism which was sponsored by Wendell L. Willkie. In the main, however, the efflux of events was responsible for it. Hitlerism has come to be recognized throughout the country as a menace which must be obliterated before there can be any hope of a return to our accustomed ways of peaceful living. In common sense we must contribute to the removal of that menace with all the resources at our command. At last this realization seems to be coming over Congress.

QUAIL-CRY

It is the quails' cry, lonesome sound
From far-off bushes near the ground;
Sound of Autumn when the quails call,
Of frost, and dropping leaves and fall
The covey rises with a bound
At some hunter's hunting hound
And flies with quick tight wings
Through little leafy rings,
Like a magician's ball.

Like little bubbles gray they fly
And burst against the leafy sky,
And leave the forest quiet and queer
And Autumn palpitating near!
When, suddenly, from fields nearby,
You hear that lonesome whistling cry
Defying dogs again
To break their fragile strain,
"Come here, come here, come here."

Liquor Question

Does the present crisis justify the efforts to bring back national prohibition? Such a campaign has been launched by a preliminary measure which is now pending in a Congressional committee. It provides for outlawing all alcoholic beverages in military areas and adjacent cities.

"Men," declared Plato, "should be trained to self-command against pleasures as they are against pains not by keeping out of the way of temptation but by regulated exposure to temptations, with motives at hand to help them in the task of resistance."

How modest the drys have become! The secret endeavors of various anonymous individuals have supplanted the sensational publicity of their historic leaders. But no matter how much the prohibitionists may change, they still seem to remain at variance with the fundamental laws of human nature as interpreted by the greatest sages from Plato to the present day.

Do the prohibitionists hope to turn the clock back on the liquor question? Our experience surely demonstrates what the folly of such a step would be. In 1917 national prohibition was sneaked in as a war measure. It was the opening wedge for the eighteenth amendment, resulting in the lawlessness and immorality of the bootleg period. A recollection of those deplorable times must make us shudder at the faintest prospect of returning to them.

The American people must be on guard against any hidden devices designed to curtail their personal freedom. Eternal vigilance is still the price of liberty. If we would protect the whole Nation from a return to the shameful conditions under the eighteenth amendment, we must save our soldiers from the attempt to make them teetotalers forever by a Federal statute.

Conscientious Patriotism

In its recent statistical report on aliens residing in the United States, the Census Bureau showed that the largest number of these—about 684,000—are Italians. With the exception of refugees, most of these came here because of a belief that the United States offered a better opportunity of obtaining the blessings of life and liberty. However, many have been subjected to so much pressure during the past 15 years of active Fascist propaganda as to give them a feeling of dual nationality. These are placed "on the spot" because of the antagonistic nature of the differences between the two nations, conditions which tend to force them to make a decision as to which nation should receive their true allegiance.

Of late, owing to public opinion, the trend has been to express open allegiance to the United States. Declarations have been made by organizations, such as the Sons of Italy, at their latest conventions. Many of these declarations have been made under duress. In the past these people have given their best help and sympathy to Mussolini and Fascism, and the possibility of armed conflict between Italy and the United States has placed them in a most difficult position.

Conditions such as these are generally caused by old and stupid interpretations of what constitutes patriotism and nationalistic duties. The real fact is that the "mother country" is the country in which one lives and of which one is a citizen. When a situation arises where the old country is in conflict with the new and the resident of the new does not approve or support the position of his adopted country, he should get out. There is no reason for one to remain in an atmosphere he considers to be antagonistic.

Political Labor Strife

A nationally known news commentator made the statement in his Sunday broadcast that the Steel Corporation in its present dispute with John L. Lewis was determined to prevent, insofar as it could, the formation of a strong labor party that would be able to contribute $500,000 to the next Presidential election fund. This is a truly remarkable statement and deserves some consideration.

Since the United Mine Workers had about 500,000 members in 1935 and rather more in 1936, this contribution represents about $1 or less per member. On the other side of the slate, Lundberg published the contributions of America's 60 families to the Republican fund of that year. A solitary family, the Du-Ponts, alone furnished $855,520, while the remainder contributed $2,146,472 publicly, with a much larger amount that was sub rosa. Sixty families versus about 200,000 families represented by that more than $500,000.

If this news commentator is correct in his statement, the United States Steel Corporation, representative of about half a dozen families and undetermined billions in money, would jeopardize the safety of the United States by immediate curtailment of steel operations in order to prevent the participation of the common people in the election of their President, when the dollar contributions they make from their pitifully small wages is devoted to a candidate to whom they, the steel companies, are opposed. This is a situation that deserves the attention of our Senators and the people themselves. No more un-American, subversive, disloyal, destructive attempt to overthrow our democratic traditions of free elections has been made in recent years.

Aside from his regrettable refusal to accede to the wishes of the President, the letter of John L. Lewis is a fair statement of the situation existing between the coal miners and the United States Steel Corporation. Instead of Senatorial blasts at Lewis, these should be directed toward the corporation whose relations with labor constitute one of the blackest records in our history. Housecleaning should always start at the top and not at the bottom.

America First Party

If certain signs are correctly interpreted, the evidence is at hand that the 1942 elections will be seriously complicated by a third party coalition (or cabal) to be called the America First Party, or if no called by that name, at least under that banner.

The America First Committee has announced that it will work for the defeat of all Senators and Representatives who are on record as having voted for the repeal of the Neutrality Act. They will support anybody in any party who stands for isolationism; this they will do long after the policy of the Nation has been voted upon in the Congress. It is a direct refutation of their promise to support this Nation wholeheartedly in a war effort if and when that becomes necessary.

The true purpose of their recent propaganda that there would be no elections in 1942 is now clear. They are determined to throw a monkey wrench into them, and are even now winding up for the throw. Their platform will be: Let's stay home, mind our own business, send no ships out on the ocean, give the Axis free play anywhere it likes, and "take over" South America as Hitler took over Europe.

Their slogan might well be: "See nothing, hear nothing, know nothing."

Pay Increases For Service Men

In regard to the editorial regarding "service pay." I would like to refute the argument against increases given by The Post on November 3.

I heartily agree with this remark, "and there is no doubt that civilian jobs of comparable responsibility pay better." That is the truth, but I do agree that this is not exactly the issue at hand. The issue is whether men and officers of the armed services can exist on the present pay.

Let us take the pay of an ensign or second lieutenant as an example of the present pay deficiency. This pay, $183 per month, includes all allowances—and incidentally there is no allowance for clothing. The wife of an officer in this rank apparently is not supposed to eat, since there is no food allowance for her. Take any representative "Navy city" in the U. S. A. and one will find that a respectable (some not too respectable for this price) house plus utilities will cost $90 a month—food ashore for the wife and children or perhaps dependent mother $50, mess bill afloat $50, laundry and other household expenses $10. Without going any further simple mathematics show that we have expended $185 and have been paid $183. This does not begin to include such expense incurred as moving the family when not under orders. This often happens since ships move from one ocean to another without changing the home port, or from San Diego to Bremerton, etc.

Pay has never been the inducement to enter the service, and certainly an increase of $100 to $300 a year to an officer's salary will not be sufficient inducement. It is true that most service personnel have a genuine liking for their work. Is that not also true in civilian occupations?

I do not understand what is meant by the service having greater security. Certainly one's life is not secure even in peacetime much less in these times. One's job is not secure because of the high competitive spirit in the service combined with the whims of the selection board. "Among other factors" offered are such as these: (1) away from one's family for weeks, months and sometimes years; (2) never being able to buy a home because service people do not stay long enough in one locality; (3) paying excessive rents because of unscrupulous prices in "Navy towns;" (4) and then being told that we are "beefing," and not being patriotic when we feebly request a slight increase in pay in order to live.

Certainly the armed forces should be patriotic in wartimes. But is that any reason why one should risk his life and still get half the pay which the patriots who are sitting at home padding their purses are getting? We have families who have to live, why should they suffer because we are serving our country? What, in brief, is back of the argument which The Post has written? Why, this pay increase will hardly take care of the increase in taxes for the coming year.

I suggest the editor publish another article championing a pay increase double the one proposed to our legislators.

Little Red Wagon

"Fan mail" comes to every broadcaster. Even I have received tens of thousands of letters! These letters may be divided into three general classes—publicity-seeking, criticism and frank admiration. The letters in that third class come mostly from girls of all ages and from children. And of all the fan mail I have received, most I have enjoyed and appreciated that from children; not because of the class in which it belongs, but because it always rings true!

Take, for example, a grubby little penciled note I received one bright spring morning, signed "Your little friend, David Moran." I hadn't the least idea who David was, but he told me that he was 9 years old and that he couldn't walk. He told me, too, that he always listened to all my broadcasts.

His letter said further that, though he knew I was very busy, he did wish that some day I would call and visit him. And one day I went. I have never regretted it, for I found a friend.

He was a grand little fellow, David. And how delighted he was when he learned, as we chatted, that his birthday was on the same day as mine. The date was already past, but I suggested that we might celebrate our next year's birthday with a joint party at his home. He agreed and solemnly began to discuss who should be invited, what we would do and, more important, what we would eat.

On that last point his mother had to be called into consultation. She apologized to me for her appearance, for she had just come home from her day's work in the mill where both she and her husband worked eight hours every day, five days a week, for an average weekly wage of $17.50 each.

There were three other children in the family. They were all strong and healthy except David, the baby and everybody's favorite. He had never walked—and never would. Shortly after his birth his baby legs had withered and wasted; the rest of his body had grown normally. No doctor had been able to discover a cause, and therefore none had been able to suggest a remedy. David spent his waking hours in a wheel chair donated by some charitable organization, sitting bolt upright with his pathetic little legs dangling grotesquely, painfully.

Baseball was his passion. More than once my voice has faltered at the microphone when describing some thrilling play on the diamond as a picture would flash unbidden into my mind—a picture of little David, sitting in his wheel chair, intently listening to my voice and shouting with the best of them when the play was ended. And how eagerly he would discuss that play with me the next time I called, for I became a pretty constant visitor in that home. I suppose it was because, like all men, I enjoy hero worship; it flatters my vanity; though God and David alone know how or why he should make a hero out of such as I!

I got him, after a while, into the habit of calling me Uncle Jay, and he used to do it with a shy pride that, somehow, hurt.

About the middle of the baseball season, I started the practice of calling for David on my way to the ball park and carrying him with me to the broadcasting booth. How he loved those outings, and how his body quivered with excitement the day I asked him to "tell the folks out there in radio-land" what he thought of the game. Even now I can recapture in memory the tremor in his voice as he said "Oh gee—oh gee, Uncle Jay—it's swell!"

The season waned, ended and was succeeded by football. I took David to one or two of the early games, but he had to discontinue those trips: the cold was too severe for him. Winter, his father told me, had always been hard on the boy. The winter of 1937 was unusually severe in that part of the country, and he grew rapidly and noticeably weaker.

Christmas, a white Christmas, drew near. A week or so before that great festival of the children I sat by David's bed one evening and read to him the immortal story of that other little, gay crippled boy. As I read the closing words of Dickens' masterpiece, little David's eyes were bright with excitement and he whispered: "Oh gee—oh gee, Uncle Jay—it's swell! So Tiny Tim walked! Gee, I'm glad." He paused for a moment, then went on. "D'you think—d'you think—I might walk, too, some day, Uncle Jay?"

So eagerly, so wistfully he asked the question my own eyes matched his for brightness, though not from excitement, as I answered, "Yes, old man—yes, I'm sure you will, some day."

That day was not far off!

Before I left that evening I asked him what he wanted Santa to bring him for Christmas, and I was amazed when he told me he wanted a little red wagon. I suppose my amazement must have registered on my face, for he added, quickly: "Silly isn't it! I know I can't play with it or ride in it, but—well, I just want one for my very own—to look at."

I told that story over the microphone the next morning, and even I was surprised by the result—even I, who have such good cause to know how rich, how warm, how generous is the heart of the radio audience—which is the heart, after all, of America. For cash and money orders and checks added up to more than a hundred dollars (mind you, this was just a small, local radio station), and every letter brought a request to me to buy something for David.

On the day before New Year's Eve I was preparing my late broadcast when my telephone rang. It was David's father. "Can you come over?" he said. "David's going and he's asking where you are."

The news was not altogether unexpected, and I was there within 15 minutes. For the next hour I sat by that little bed, with David's fragile hand almost lost in mine. His eyes had been closed, and I had thought he was asleep. But he opened them with a smile and murmured: "Oh gee—oh gee, Uncle Jay—it's swell!" And his glance went to the foot of the bed, where proudly stood a little red wagon, unscratched, unsoiled—unused.

He sighed, a broken sigh—and then a light spread over his face that must surely have been like the light that filled a stable in Bethlehem two thousand years ago.

Today And Tomorrow

Congress And Japan

A SPECIAL ENVOY is on his way from Japan as Congress approaches the final vote on the amendments to the Neutrality Act. The two events are closely related. We face, according to the semiofficial declarations from Tokyo, a showdown in the Pacific in which if the negotiations are a failure, the result may well be a vast and dangerous extension of the war. This is a very grave matter. There is very little doubt that if the policy advocated by the opposition in Congress were to prevail, the chances of avoiding war in the Pacific will be seriously reduced.

LIPPMANN

For the effect of a defeat of the amendments would not be merely psychological in the sense of encouraging the Japanese war party and of discouraging the nations which are resisting in Europe and Asia. It would be bad enough for Congress to tell the world that it was afraid of Hitler, thus encouraging Hitler and the Japanese to think that they can proceed without effective resistance by the United States. What is even more serious is that the failure of this bill would in fact make it much easier for Japan to extend the war in the Pacific. The failure of this bill would not only indicate that the American people lacked the will to resist aggression but in fact it would also deprive them of a very necessary practical means of resisting it. The strategical directors of Japanese policy would see what apparently the Congressional opposition does not see at all, that a failure to abolish the combat zones of the Neutrality Act will greatly weaken the American naval position in the Pacific.

IT IS a grave misunderstanding of the real import of the issue before Congress to think that what is at stake is the right to send merchant ships to British ports under the American flag. Humiliating as it is to use the subterfuge of the Panama flag, as a practical matter the amendment of the Neutrality Act would not increase in any important sense the cargo space available, or that can be made available, for carrying supplies to Britain. What would be increased, if the combat zones are abolished, is the effectiveness of the British navy and of the American Navy. For the American Navy is authorized to operate wherever American ships have a right to go, and if the legal inhibitions on American shipping are removed, the important effect will not be on merchant ships but on the Navy, which will then be free to operate wherever it can operate most effectively in the north Atlantic.

The practical effect of the work the Navy is already doing in the Atlantic has been to release for service elsewhere powerful units of the British navy. The practical effect of giving the Navy a free hand in the north Atlantic will be to make available for service elsewhere still more of the British fleet. This is of absolutely critical importance to the maintenance of peace in the Pacific, or failing that to a successful and economical defense of the Pacific.

FOR THERE is urgently needed in the Pacific, for the efficient protection of the vitally important region from the Philippines to Malaya and Australia, a powerful British fleet based on Singapore. The American Navy, strong as it is, is based on Hawaii, and has no adequate base in the Philippines or anywhere near enough to deal easily with a Japanese movement to the south. It would be unsound to divide the American fleet by sending some part of it to Singapore, where the installations are technically adapted to British ships. For the successful defense of the Pacific, there are needed two fleets—one operating from Hawaii with advanced bases at Manila and one from Singapore with advanced bases at Hong Kong. Under these conditions it is extremely unlikely that Japan would strike, and it is certain as anything can be that if Japan struck, Japan would be defeated.

To make British warships available for Singapore, it is desirable to use with maximum effectiveness and economy the British, the Canadian, and the American war vessels now in the north Atlantic. The restrictions of the Neutrality Act, which in fact operate as a restriction upon the Navy, do not make the mission of the Navy less dangerous. But they do make the Navy less effective. Neither we nor the British are able to use the warships we possess as efficiently as they could be used if Congress allowed the American Navy to use its own judgment about how best to repel the submarines. Thus we are in effect wasting sea power which, if it were properly employed and not wasted, would give us in the Pacific a margin of superiority great enough to preserve peace or to insure victory.

THAT IS why the vote on the neutrality bill is of such tremendous practical significance now that a showdown with Japan is impending. If Japan were not allied with Nazi Germany, and if the Japanese navy were not poised for an aggression that would surely mean war, the maintenance of the combat zone would have no great practical significance. The cargo ships available would be in effect the same, with or without the zone. The cooperation of the three navies, in which there is a division of spheres and the contribution is now approximately one-third American, one-sixth Canadian, and three-sixths British, would be not too unsatisfactory in its results. What makes it urgent to remove the restrictions of the zones is that British warships are needed in the Far East, and the best way to make them available for the Far East is to use all the ships in the Atlantic more effectively.

The matter is urgent because it is essential that the Japanese should know before they take an irrevocable decision that there will be available, if they attack, a powerful British fleet at Singapore. If Congress defeated the neutrality repealer, it would not be as certain as it should be that the British will have warships for Singapore, and therefore the moderating effect on Japanese policy will have been sacrificed. We shall have given the Japanese war party reason to think that it is safe to attack, and we shall have given the hard-headed Japanese strategists reason to think that the adventure could succeed because there will not be sufficient naval power in the southern Pacific to oppose them.

THESE ARE the immediate practical realities which are at stake in the impending votes in Congress, and in all seriousness it must be said that while passage of the repealer may not avert war in the Pacific, the defeat of the repealer would greatly increase the likelihood of war in the Pacific.

Fuel and Material Shortages May Close French Factories

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, Nov. 7.—A few weeks ago M. Francis Lehideux, secretary of state for industrial production, let it be understood that certain French factories would have to close either because of shortage of fuel or raw materials. An article in the Review L'Usine (the Factory) shows that the situation is not yet critical for many industries, but that for others the future will depend, to a large extent, on how much material and fuel the occupying forces can or will release for use of the industry of France.

In a great many branches of French industry there are still stocks sufficient for several months operation, the French magazine declares. In addition to their stocks, a good many of them can count on deliveries assigned to them on back distributions which have been delayed in repartition.

The most serous problem at the present time, as winter begins, is that of heavy industry whose production is dependent on deliveries of coal and coke. The French supply of fuel is 50 per cent below normal and if operation depends on French fuel available, a large number of plants will soon have to close. If this is necessary the government will endeavor to shut such factories as are located in rural regions first, so that the labor thus released will more easily find work in agricultural jobs. L'Usine repeats that many industries which have made arrangements with the occupying authorities for fuel and raw materials can still count on deliveries for some time.

The Nazi Maps

WELL KNOWN is the intense nationalistic pride of the nations that form Hispanic-America. Their fierce spirit of individuality as independent nations characterizes each one of their moves when concerted action is taken.

With this in mind, it is easy to imagine that the carving of Latin-America into five vassal states, as contemplated by the Hitler regime and as bared by President Roosevelt, caused a storm in the press of the neighbors. Since the President mentioned that one famous map in his possession, the people of Latin America have been confronted with not one but at least five different versions of such a map and the color scheme of the South American facade has changed with the frequency of a chameleon's!

In spite of desperate efforts of Nazi propaganda to ridicule such plans, scanning of the more important newspapers of South America reveals a uniform acceptance of the existence of such designs by Hitler, indorsement based principally on the disarrangement of the European map since Hitler began his world drive. The South American countries have gone ahead studying calmly the why's and how's of nations thrown together by the Nazi mind. The answer should give papers of those countries enough material to fill editorials for months to come. It is interesting to note that the religious angle of the Nazi scheme, as uncovered by President Roosevelt, attracted less attention among the other nations of the Americas in spite of the fact that they are predominantly Catholic and in one country, Paraguay, the head of the cabinet is the Archbishop of Asuncion.

ALTHOUGH South America has much to offer to the American tourist, only a very few countries have taken any steps to attract the traveler from this country. Most of those governments hate the thought of promoting schemes in the American style. Still, there are no people more susceptible to open admiration of their lands, and, accordingly, there are no people more eager to make American visitors' stay a pleasant one. In fact, the best and perhaps the most efficient advertiser of the attractions of those countries is the American tourist himself. What some of those nations lack in comfort, they make up with individual attention which sometimes reaches embarrassing proportions.

Some of the most lasting memories are caused by Americans' ignorance of old Spanish customs. For example, Americans have returned from their South American trips with the oddest mementoes and only because they commented upon a particular object in someone's home. They admired politely some painting or object in the drawing room of their host and, much to their consternation, they found the object of their attention in their hotel room on their return, with a lovely note begging them to accept it as a token of their esteem! It is the spirit behind such gestures and also the atmosphere of those countries and their people and the often unrivaled scenic beauty that make Americans enthusiastic boosters of their neighbors.

The natural tact of the people is best featured by two instances which concern two world-known individuals, both of them visitors to Chile some years ago: Admiral Richard Byrd and the Duke of Windsor. Both, incidentally, wished to be quoted as remembering their visits to South America.

Having been feted by many countries in Europe as an aviator and explorer, Admiral Byrd was received in Chile after one of his South Pole expeditions. The attentions received there by the American were, he claims, only exceeded by the tactful consideration the Chileans showed toward a man who had been through many exhausting and trying experiences. In all these years that very lionized man never has forgotten the delicate hospitality of the Chileans! "The best in the world!" he claims.

Because of snowstorms in the Andes Mountains, the at-the-time Prince of Wales was prevented from continuing his voyage from Chile to the Argentine. His official visit terminated, he remained several days as Edward of Windsor in Vina del Mar, guest of the minister of finances, Gustavo Ross. The prince became automatically a private citizen, fond of polo and every other entertainment characteristic of a rich young man. While playing polo with members of the Vina del Mar Polo Club he had a spill. The only notice the heir of the British Empire received then or ever was a shrill whistle call from the umpire. He made the rounds of the social clubs and private homes for cocktails like any other "eligible" bachelor, and he loved it. When the railroad path to the Argentine was cleared for his official reception there, Edward of Windsor left Vina del Mar with the remark, "Well, it certainly was fun; now I have to go back to work!"

THE RECENT NOTE delivered to Germany by Chile's foreign minister, Juan B. Rossetti, protesting against the treatment of civilians, war prisoners and hostages in Europe shows not only a humanitarian feeling typical of the American nations but also a detached view which crystallizes the attitude of the Americas confronting European totalitarians.

Among other things the note says, "The sacrifice of hostages cannot be accepted as an element of what some people call 'total war,' as none of the American countries profess such theories."

Such a statement presented officially to the German government may not have any practical results, but Hitler undoubtedly will realize that much propaganda money has been spent in vain in South America and that his war of nerves is back-firing. Germans hate to feel that all the world is against them.

Restraint In The Versailles Treaty

SO MUCH has been said of the deliberate cruelty of the Treaty of Versailles, particularly by Adolf Hitler in his appeal to the self-pity of the Germans, that this document might seem to have been written with the sole intention of inflicting hurt on a beaten but gallant and honorable foe. The wisdom of the treaty will always be open to discussion, but the contention that it was wantonly cruel fares badly when it is considered against the conduct of the Germans in the first World War. Incidentally, then, as now, the point was made that the German people, of course, were not at fault, but were only carrying out the orders of their bosses. Today, again, when 100 Frenchmen are selected at random out of a pen, as a farmer grabs chickens for the ax, and shot in reprisal for the unsolved murder of a German officer, the German people are innocent. But, in the presence of this new horror, the thought naturally occurs that the German people are a great menace to all non-German peoples for the very reason that they are forever being driven by such bosses as the Kaiser and the Fuehrer.

PEGLER

But the attitude and conduct of the German armies is all that the victims have to judge the German people by in these recurring tragedies and certainly the terms imposed on the Germans after 1918 were not harsh by comparison with the actions of their soldiers when Germany was riding high. That conduct was not repeated at their expense by the victorious armies of the allies, for there is in the record of the limited occupation nothing comparable to scenes described by Hugh Gibson, who was the secretary of the American Legation in Belgium in 1914. Mr. Gibson kept a diary which was published in book form later which strongly suggests that whether they serve one master or another the German military men retain certain characteristics and ideas that are inherent.

VISITING LOUVAIN after the sack and slaughter, Mr. Gibson reminded the German officer who was conducting the party that the Hague convention forbade collective penalties for the lawless acts of individuals.

"He dismissed that to his own satisfaction," Mr. Gibson wrote, "by remarking that 'all Belgians are dogs and would do these things (sniping) unless they are taught what will happen to them,'" an attitude which has now been openly adopted toward the Poles by the Nazi invaders.

"With a hard glint he told us the purpose of his work; the burden of what he had to say was something like this: 'We shall make this place a desert. For generations people will come to see what we have done and it will teach them to respect Germany and think twice before they resist her.'"

"When the German government realized the horror and loathing with which the civilized world learned of the fate of Louvain, the orders were canceled and the story sent out that the German forces had tried to prevent the destruction. Never has a government lied more brazenly. When we arrived the destruction was being carried out in an orderly way that showed careful preparation. It was only when he learned how civilization regarded his crimes that the Kaiser's heart began to bleed."

"IN ANDENNE and Seilles," Mr. Gibson wrote, "the Germans killed about 300. According to the inhabitants who remain there was a reign of terror during which the Germans rendered themselves guilty of every sort of atrocity and barbarity. It seems to be generally believed that the massacre was due to resistance of retiring Belgian troops. Whatever the provocation, the German conduct was that of savages."

In Dinant, he wrote, "the Germans set out to pillage and shoot. They drove the people to the streets and set fire to the houses. Those who tried to run away were shot. The congregation was taken from the church and 50 of the men were shot. All the civilians who could be rounded up were driven into the square. The women were lined up on one side. On the other side the men were lined up in two rows, the first kneeling. Then two volleys were fired. The dead and wounded were left together until the Germans got around to burying them, when practically all were dead. This was only one of several wholesale executions. The Germans do not seem to contradict the essential facts."

These are only samples of Mr. Gibson's diary, the whole of which strongly urges the conclusion that the Treaty of Versailles was remarkable for its civilized restraint.

The Third Winter

By J. B. Priestley

Efforts Need Sharper Focusing

London.

NOW THAT we are into November, the third winter of the war may be said to have begun. What will be the character of this third winter? The first winter was that curious period of "Sitzkrieg" when every bit of war news was immensely magnified and there was an orgy of complacent talk on our side. Last winter was a very different affair, for it was a season of severe bombing, smaller rations and rapidly disappearing stocks of unrationed goods. It was a time of danger and great inconvenience (for heavy bombing interferes with every kind of transport) yet I think most of us preferred it to the long idiocy of the first winter.

And here is winter No. 3. So far the bombing has been on a very small scale, though you never know where you may take a dose of it. Thus, the other night a friend insisted I should run down for the night to his house in the country "just to be quiet" and I found myself in the first air raid I had been in for weeks.

Then a pleasant little town I know in the northwest, regarded as a completely safe area, received two heavy bombs the other night. Again, not long ago, a whole stick of bombs fell quite near the remotest, loneliest of children hostels, run by my wife.

EITHER the bombing crews of the Luftwaffe now left in the west are very inefficient or they have been instructed to drop bombs anywhere, for in spite of the tiny scale of attacks there has, I think, never been more stupid, random bombing than there has been lately. Probably the Luftwaffe is trying out some comparatively new crews.

The food situation appears better than it was and Lord Woolton (minister of food) seems to be keeping his promise to introduce more variety into the menu. We are sending enormous stocks of textiles, boots, etc., to Russia, but so far, I think, the ordinary citizen here has not suffered from our depleted stocks. The shortage of cigarettes, which was one of the great nuisances of this last summer, is not now so apparent, though I cannot speak from first-hand experience as I am a pipe and cigar smoker.

I hear a lot of talk about the ordinary British folk being "complacent" now that Hitler is fighting so desperately in Russia. I have not myself seen much of this complacency (and I get about a great deal) and suspect the talk of it is much exaggerated. The fact is, some of our people—notably among the more comfortable and official classes—were monuments of complacency even before Hitler invaded Russia and will remain such monuments to the very end.

But most ordinary folk I have come across are not more complacent now than six months or a year ago. Indeed, I think they are less so because now they are anxious that the fullest possible aid should be given to Russia and are very conscious of the fact that now it is the Red army that is fighting our battles for us. The sooner British troops are in action, the better.

THOUGHTFUL PEOPLE everywhere are chiefly preoccupied by the same problem—that of production. Any failure there may have been in production has nothing whatever to do with the skill and energy of the individual workers. It is a question of organization and manpower.

In my view, our chief trouble has been that the war started badly under a government that was extremely reluctant to make any drastic changes in the economic and social system. Indeed, I fancy that the foolish optimism of the first seven or eight months of the war was really a by-product of this deep-seated reluctance to make changes. It was easier to intend that we should not be called upon to make the supreme effort.

The present government has no such illusions, but it has not yet recovered from that bad start. Moreover, as it is fighting a totalitarian system, it has always been naturally reluctant to appear totalitarian itself, in spite of the fact that gigantic powers were freely voted to it. Thus, it never really acted on the principle that our sole object now is to fight and win this war and that as long as we do that it does not matter if the whole prewar economic and social system is set aside or put in cold storage.

Let me give you two examples that affect production. Firms doing essential war work are often allowed to think too much about what is going to happen to them after the war. They should be told brutally that such long-term planning now is disastrous and that unless they concentrate entirely on the work in hand there may be no postwar for them.

SECONDLY, too much manpower is still being wasted on what is not essential to our wartime life. There are still too many clerks at work on accounts in ledgers that could be closed and forgotten for the duration of the war. On the other hand, many activities essential to our wartime life, of which agriculture is perhaps the best example, are now being dangerously starved of adequate manpower.

But all such problems are now being narrowly considered both inside and outside the Government. We are, I feel, entering this third winter less clouded by dreams, illusions and wishful thinking than ever before.

Wanna See A Horse?

The National Horse Show is on for the fifty-sixth year at Madison Square Garden, New York, N. Y., and it must go pretty hard with a newspaper photographer who is sent to the show and comes back with nothing but pictures of a horse.

* * * *

It is the most colorful horse show in years, with ermine, canary diamonds and shimmering metallic gowns predominating.

* * * *

Perhaps never before have so many silk hats been linked up with the livery stable business.

* * * *

A horse show is one of the few places where you can see society people sitting around quietly for three hours without drinking or fighting.

* * * *

The national horse show started 56 years ago when anybody who was anybody had a horse. This was away back in the days when a man could stand being delayed at a cross street for ten seconds without setting a new profanity record for the distance.

* * * *

Then Hank Ford came along and the horse began to disappear with the bustle, the long-sleeved bathing suit and American patience. The horse show was continued, however, down through the years. At first it was merely a gesture of defiance at the internal combustion engine.

* * * *

This was followed by a period when nobody was sure why the horse show was perpetuated, and when it seemed inconsistent to do so without perpetuating the flannel petticoat, hoopskirt and magic lantern. And this was followed by a long interval when the only purpose of the show seemed to be to prove that the bale of hay still had a modest public.

* * * *

But within the past two years the horse show has been pepped up and given so much smart showmanship that we wouldn't be a bit surprised to hear that Norman Bell Geddes was going to design next year's horses.

* * * *

Today crowds flock to the show to meditate in part on the strange customs of their ancestors who could have as much fun on a few hundred dollars, a sack of oats and a buggy whip as we get today with a complicated time-payment system, a constant supply of costly gasoline, lots of ignition trouble, an annual set of special licenses, frequent litigation and all sorts of taxes.

* * * *

You can see that 80 per cent of the spectators think a martingale is a bird and that a whiffletree is something you get from a nursery. They are astonished to discover that a well-bred horse has more grace and style than any sedan ever designed.

* * * *

And a visit to a horse show is good for a motorist. It does him good to meditate on the old days. Imagine it! The reins were in the same place every season and no engineer developed a system for steering the horse by coordinating the buggy whip with the axles!

District WPA Funds Due for One-Third Cut

The House District Committee next Monday is expected to slash at least two million dollars from the six-million-dollar defense public works allotment to the District from the Public Works Administration.

A District subcommittee under the chairmanship of Representative Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio, passed the measure on to the full committee following a hearing last Tuesday without specific recommendations.

The chief item the committee is expected to cut will be new school buildings in the Northeast and Southeast areas. The schools are not considered necessary strictly because of national defense demands, it is understood.

Dropped by the committee probably will be a new eight-room elementary school at Nichols Avenue and Atlantic Street Southeast, costing $213,950; a junior high school at Forty-ninth Street and Washington Place Northeast, $1,220,200, and an eight-room elementary school at Forty-ninth and Hayes Streets Northeast, $352,050.

Improvement of water projects items, costing $1,102,150, are expected to meet with the approval of the committee.

Other projects which probably will meet with approval include sewer improvements, costing $846,750; fire alarm extensions, $114,000; additions to the Taft Junior High School and two other school additions, $90,000, and a maternal and child ward addition to Gallinger Hospital, $884,400.

District government heads have been called to appear at the committee's Monday meeting.

The Gallup Poll

Roosevelt Foreign Policy Probably Helped In Pa. Vote, Hurt LaGuardia in New York

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 7.—Tuesday's election results in two areas—the Fifteenth Pennsylvania Congressional District, and New York City—have started a train of speculation among political observers as to the light which these elections shed on the popularity of the foreign policy of the Roosevelt Administration.

In the Fifteenth Congressional District the Republican candidate won, but by a smaller percentage of the major party vote than the Republican candidate received in this same district just a year ago. In New York City, LaGuardia, stanch supporter of Roosevelt's foreign policy, was reelected but by a majority greatly reduced from the majority he received in his previous election.

Since elections always involve personalities as well as many issues, they are frequently misleading as a guide to public sentiment on any one specific issue. Because of the interest at the present time in foreign policy the Institute of Public Opinion made studies in both these areas just prior to the election.

Foreign Policy Approved

These opinion samplings in both areas indicate that had the voters been able to register their sentiment directly on foreign policy in an official referendum they would have undoubtedly approved the present policy of the Roosevelt Administration.

The following question was used to determine the general attitudes of voters towards America's position in respect to the war:

"Which of these two things do you think is more important?—that Germany be defeated, or that this country keep out of war?"

	15th Penn. N. Y. City	Cong. Dist.	Entire Nation
Germany be Defeated	54%	61%	68%
Stay out of war	46	39	32

The undecided vote was only 5 per cent in New York City, 5 per cent in the Fifteenth Pennsylvania District, 7 per cent in the Nation.

N. Y. More Isolationist

The above table reveals the fact, often overlooked, that New York City is surprisingly more isolationist than the country as a whole. This fact undoubtedly accounted for the greatly reduced LaGuardia majority, despite the fact that foreign policy as an issue was not openly debated in the campaign.

On the other hand, the Administration's foreign policy undoubtedly helped Wagner, the Democratic candidate in Pennsylvania, because this policy is far more popular than the Democratic Party in this area, as judged by its previous record in Congressional elections.

One interesting sidelight in the New York City election was the breakdown of party lines. LaGuardia running on the Republican and Labor tickets got a substantial majority of votes from persons who voted for Roosevelt in 1940. O'Dwyer, on the other hand, running on the Democratic ticket, got the votes of a majority of persons who voted for the Republican Presidential candidate last fall.

Analysis of those voting for LaGuardia in sampling surveys by the Institute, show that persons who voted for Roosevelt last fall gave LaGuardia 62 per cent of their votes, O'Dwyer 38 per cent. On the other hand, voters who cast their votes for Willkie last fall gave LaGuardia 38 per cent of their votes, O'Dwyer 62 per cent.

When "working women" register for volunteer defense work about half of them really will report for duty when called.

"Housewives" and men are not quite so responsive, according to experiences of the Civilian Defense Volunteer Office of the District Civilian Defense Council.

A brief survey made yesterday of the office's activities since 20,000 Washingtonians signed up for defense work in June showed that almost two-thirds of the housekeeping registrants fail to be available when the calls come. An idea of how the men respond is found in the case of Volunteer Fire Auxiliary now being formed.

Two thousand and four men volunteered for fire-fighting work, but only 800 are taking their physicals. A few were eliminated in interviews, and many letters were returned unclaimed—due to the city's "transient" nature.

Far from being discouraged by these percentages, the office and Col. Lemuel Bolles, executive director of District Defense, are highly encouraged, both by the numbers who show up and the caliber of volunteer work obtained.

Contacts have been made with about half of the 20,000 volunteers to date. Of these, almost 5000 were men needed for the fire and police battalions now being formed. Six hundred of them, mostly women, have been assigned to work with 83 social agencies in the District. Names of 500 women have been given to agencies interested in finding hostesses and partners for dances held for soldiers.

Three hundred women signed up for police duty, but only 195 of them were accepted—or could be found—for training, which will be given under direction of Rhoda Milliken, head of the Women's Bureau of the Police Department. Miss Milliken will begin interviewing these 195 within the next few days.

The largest block of women—almost 2000—signed up for motor corps work. Their names were given to the Red Cross, and 1500 of them responded to cards sent out by that organization. The Red Cross has one class going for them and will have others soon:

Nine women have completed a Red Cross first-aid course. Three other courses are now in progress, one at night. Getting night training started has been one of the local difficulties. But such training is made imperative by the high percentage of volunteers who are holding down regular daytime jobs.

Types of work being done by little groups of volunteers, or individuals, range from those of playground helpers to those of translators of "all conceivable languages."

At the Library of Congress, for instance, are working 15 translators—of Japanese, Russian, Chinese, Spanish, French, Hebrew, Polish and Arabic—in compiling a bibliography of air-raid precaution and civil defense work done in other countries.

The office is accustomed to receiving requests such as for someone who speaks Russian "in as many dialects as possible." Such a request can be filled as rapidly from the District files as can a request for someone who "can maintain decorum" among children at a settlement house. Just this week the office was able to fill an order for a volunteer who could speak Chinese "in the dialect used in Chungking," and one for a German-speaking individual whose loyalty was "unquestionable."

Another general registration of volunteers will be pushed next Thursday as part of Civilian Defense Week. Volunteers have continued to come into the volunteer headquarters at the rate of four or five daily. The office will be open next Wednesday night until 9 o'clock instead of Tuesday night, as has been customary. It is in the old National Hotel at 501 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest.

TOO MANY GIRLS IN OUR COLLEGES?

SEE "PARADE'S" PICTURE-ARTICLE IN SUNDAY'S WASHINGTON POST

Two co-eds of the University of Connecticut cling to the husky arms of ROTC Officer James Henry Eacott. Parade's picture story on college life explains the beaming smiles.

College girls elsewhere may try to laugh off Parade's picture forecast of what may happen to them—if and when the Army takes the lads from 18 to 21. Girls in man-scarce Washington will understand! Four picture-filled pages give you a preview of life on the campus of 1945—with the lonely hearts club the most active sorority of all.

Come what may, there's one girl who will not lack admiring escorts. She's blonde Alexis Smith. Parade's full page portrait of her is labeled "Hollywood's dynamite girl." But all pretty girls do not go to Hollywood. Parade discovered a lot of them in Western rodeos. When they aren't perched atop the paddock gate reading fan mail, they are in the arena doing a fancy bit of riding and cattle cutting. For another kind of rodeo, see Parade's pictures of fair Texans and the galloping turkeys.

There's more than the usual dash of humor in Parade this week—life in the football stands sketched by John Groth, Frank Sullivan's explanation of the inflation process. And a picture story on Peter Arno, humorist, cartoonist, and now America's best-dressed man. Thirty-two pages of sparkling picture entertainment—all in one section of Sunday's Post!

ANYTHING GOES at the juke box "clubhouse"—informal sweater and slacks for the boy, sports clothes for the girl. 300,000 roadside amusement places are hosts to 10 million young Americans. Parade shows life at one of them: the people who attend, the dances they do, the food they eat, the clothes they wear—a picture story as interesting and colorful as teen-age slang.

Travelogue on ARGENTINA—battle ground of democratic and Nazi ideas

A four-page picture-article describing Argentina's army, exports, politics, education, agriculture, and a superb air view of Buenos Aires.

Parade's other reports on world affairs include an article on Japanese-occupied Nanking harassed by Chinese guerrillas . . . a visit to a Royal Canadian Air Force training center . . . and a picture comparison of England's women war workers in 1914 and 1941.

D. C. Subway Plan Held 'Impractical'

Sponsor of Belt-Line System Clashes With Whitehurst At House Hearing

The theory that a subway system should connect the downtown area with railroads crossing the District was blasted yesterday by Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, as a Senate District subcommittee concluded its second week of hearings on the off-street parking bill and the House-approved 2-cent gasoline tax increase.

Dr. Waldo Schmitt, who has taken temporary leave from his duties at the National Museum to pursue Washington traffic problems through Congressional hearings, was the proponent of the subway system—the result of many years of personal study and research.

To his proposal Capt. Whitehurst replied: "The plan is thoroughly impractical."

Brings on a Clash

The question of whether to dig or not to dig a subway brought Dr. Schmitt and Capt. Whitehurst out of their chairs in a sharp clash. It brought a gentle reminder from the chairman, Senator Burton (Republican), of Ohio, to Dr. Schmitt that Capt. Whitehurst is a recognized highway planning engineer.

Dr. Schmitt said Capt. Whitehurst had told him "I'm not interested," when he approached the latter with his subway idea.

This Capt. Whitehurst indignantly denied.

Dr. Schmitt's plan was the same that he advanced last month before a House District subcommittee investigating traffic conditions. Aimed to relieve traffic congestion downtown, it would:

Set up a commutation system on railroads into the District from outlying areas. Run a subway from the railroad at Twelfth Street and Maryland Avenue Southwest, through the Federal building area along the Mall, and possibly connect with the Georgetown freight branch railroad on the western fringe of the District, where a commutation system might also be set up.

Puts Cost at Three Million

The system should cut the heavy auto traffic flow of commuters into the District, said Dr. Schmitt. He estimated that it could be accomplished at a cost of three million dollars.

"In spite of the fact that we're primarily highway engineers, we see the entire transportation problem as a whole," Capt. Whitehurst said after Dr. Schmitt had left the stand. "We are truly interested in the improvement of mass transportation systems, whether street car, bus or subway."

Stating that he did not believe the District was yet ready for a subway system—a possibility his office has thoroughly explored, he said:

"One trouble here today is that we're too inclined to give mass transportation too much door-to-door service."

Cites Plan's Weaknesses

After consultation with railroad officials, he said the highway department had found these weaknesses in Dr. Schmitt's plan:

The commutation system in force by the railroads today has almost passed out of service. "The railroads say the commuters left them; they didn't leave the commuters."

Additional commutation service on the railroads would result in slowing down freight and long-distance passenger facilities.

It would take 15 minutes for a commuters' train from Maryland to pass through Union Station and arrive at the Southwest station connection of the proposed subway advocated by Dr. Schmitt.

A subway would call for complete electrification of lines.

The recognized cost of subway construction, not taking into consideration underground conditions, is five million dollars per mile.

John H. Connaughton, general counsel of the National Association of Hot House Growers, indorsed the two-cent gasoline tax at yesterday's hearing. He favored rapid completion of the Whitehurst highway improvement program.

Mrs. Nellie O. Fletcher, announcing that she represented "the traveling public trying to get to work," urged keeping the Old Dominion Railroad in Virginia in service and proposed an electric railroad crossing Key Bridge into the District.

The hearings will continue next Wednesday at 9:30 a. m. in room 301 of the Senate Office Building.

Zoners Forbid Housing Unit Planned for Upper Section of Street

Residents of the fashionable upper Sixteenth Street section yesterday won their long and bitter struggle to prevent construction of a $700,000 apartment house at Sixteenth and Shepherd Streets Northwest.

The District Zoning Commission, after several weeks spent in scanning testimony taken at a recent public hearing on the question, voted to rezone the area from 60-foot A residential to 40-foot A restricted.

Their action blocked all plans to build the apartment building and upheld objections presented by scores of citizens at the hearings October 8.

Petitioners against the apartment told the commission that the apartment, if permitted, would be the only one north of Piney Branch Bridge and would act to decrease property values in the area.

So important did zoning authorities consider the matter that they twice postponed decision until a full commission was available. The return of Commissioner John Russell Young from a protracted illness paved the way for yesterday's action.

Testimony at the hearing disclosed that the builder, Harry Poretsky, had already entered into a contract agreement on the property concerned and would stand to lose some $70,000 if his application was denied.

Although no announcement of the vote was made, it was learned that members of the commission were not in unanimous accord.

Woman Flier Wins a Plane All Her Own

A red-haired woman of 25, who in the last few months has seen hundreds and hundreds of airships land and take off, Sunday will negotiate that happiest of all steps in the life of a budding pilot: from ownership of a fraction of a plane to ownership of every bit, 100 per cent, of a plane.

Miss Cheshire Cox, daughter of Gen. and Mrs. Albert L. Cox, 3019 Ellicott Street Northwest, and traffic representative at National Airport of Transcontinental and Western Airlines, is the girl. She has 15 solo hours.

Miss Cox's airplane ownership has been one-twentieth of a plane, which which is almost no ownership at all. This fractional ownership, in fact, has cramped her style because she is always wanting to make cross-country trips to see her friends.

To solve her problem she entered a slogan contest conducted by a cigarette company, with a Piper Club plane as the weekly prize.

Last night she received notice that one of her slogans had won for her a whole plane.

Presentation of the plane will be 2 p. m. Sunday at the National Airport.

Miss Cox's friends over the country may now get ready for company.

Blimp Hangar Is Moved to New Airport

There was some difficulty in finding an acceptable spot for it, but the Goodyear blimp Enterprise's huge hangar is now ensconced at the National Airport, where it was moved, piece by piece, from its former site at the old Washington Airport.

Ground for its reerection was first broken at the southeastern end of the new airfield, near the radio beam control towers.

Then it was discovered that spot would not do at all—for two reasons. First, the land did not belong to the Government, as originally believed, but to the Smoot Sand & Gravel Corporation. And second, the Civil Aeronautics Authority objected because of the hanger's proximity to the radio beam, which aids planes in landing. The metal structure, it was feared, might throw the beam out of line.

Consequently, a new site was selected—at the southwestern end of the airlines' hangar line, and the blimp was moved to its new quarters there last Friday. All parties concerned are reported satisfied with the location.

Although finishing touches are still being put on the reconstructed hangar, the blimp is expected to resume operations early next week.

While the hangar was being moved, the blimp was tied to a portable mooring mast at the old airport.

For Service Men

D. C. Offers Full Weekend Of Diversion

Diversion aplenty is promised service men coming to town today and tomorrow, and whether they prefer beer, Bach or bingo, somewhere around Washington there is sure to be something going on.

Dances are especially plentiful. Nearly 1000 service men and hostesses are expected to attend a "Sadie Hawkins" dance tonight, beginning at 9, in the National Catholic Community Service Club, 918 Tenth Street Northwest, sponsored by the U. S. O.

Jack Rollins will be on hand there at 3 p. m. today to help the left-footed lads to learn more "moochin" and less "marchin" when he holds his weekly dancing class. Tomorrow a tea dance will be staged in the N. C. C. S. Club from 3 to 6 p. m., with a free dinner being served to the first 200 men to register. The Ladies Sodality of St. Mary's Parish is sponsoring this affair.

"Block" Dance Moved Indoors

Dancing, recreation and refreshments will keep a number of men entertained tonight at the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club, 1015 L Street Northwest, at 8 p. m. In place of the "block" dance, previously held on E Street, between Fourteenth and Fifteenth Streets Northwest, the Women's Battalion will hold the affair tonight in the Departmental Auditorium on Constitution Avenue, between Twelfth and Fourteenth Streets Northwest.

From 9 p. m. until midnight an opportunity to dance will be found at the Central Y. M. C. A., 1736 G Street Northwest, tonight.

For the Negro service men, dances have been planned tonight at 8 in the Phyllis Wheatley Y. W. C. A., 901 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, and in the Twelfth Street Y. M. C. A., 1816 Twelfth Street Northwest.

A sightseeing tour sponsored by the Metropolitan Presbyterian, Christ Episcopal and First Methodist Churches will be conducted at 2 p. m. today, meeting at the Supreme Court Building, First Street and Maryland Avenue Northeast.

Two Hours of Sightseeing

The auxiliary group, Red Cross Motor Corps, will pick up men tomorrow at 10 a. m. from the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club, 1015 L Street Northwest, and carry them about the city for two hours of sightseeing.

At 11 a. m. tomorrow auditions for a new defense entertainment unit will be heard. Service men have been invited to come to the Earle Theater at that time and either try out or listen to the performers.

At 8 tonight a community musicale, with D. Sterling Wheelwright, chapel director and organist, in charge. The program will be in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, Sixteenth Street and Columbia Road Northwest.

The Washington Hebrew Congregation, Eighth and I Streets Northwest, will hold an entertainment tomorrow at 2 p. m. A dance will be held tomorrow at 8 p. m. by the Council of Jewish Women at Adas Israel Congregation, 600 I Street Northwest. The Jewish Community Center, Sixteenth and Q Streets Northwest, will hold a dance tonight at 8 p. m.

Capital Parks Tour Scheduled

Buses will leave 1416 F Street Northwest tomorrow at 1 p. m. to visit Fort Foote and Fort Washington, on a tour conducted by the National Capital Parks. Today at 2:30 p. m. a group will meet at Sixteenth and Madison Streets Northwest to go on a nature hike through Rock Creek Park.

St. John's Service Club of St. John's Episcopal Church, Sixteenth and H Streets Northwest, will offer dinners tonight, followed by square dancing. The League for Men in the Service of the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church will also have a supper and dance tonight at Fellowship House, 3563 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest.

Foundry Methodist Church, 1500 Sixteenth Street Northwest, will have a dinner, followed by games and dancing, while Mount Vernon Place Methodist, 900 Massachusetts Avenue, will have free movies at 8 p. m.

New Traffic Penalty Plan Bogs in Court

The Commissioner's new plan to prod motorists into better observance of traffic regulations by drastically boosting collateral fees bogged down a bit in Traffic Court yesterday and Commissioner John Russell Young admitted he was not at all pleased.

Three defendants were fined $3 each for double parking, after posting $20 collateral, and another, with nine parking charges, was required to pay only $3 for each.

Commissioner Young said he was "disappointed" in the action by Judge John P. McMahon, explaining the judges had agreed to cooperate at a conference earlier in the week.

Young said the "double parking" collateral had been boosted because of contentions by traffic authorities that the offense was "particularly dangerous."

The Commissioner emphasized that he was not criticizing Judge McMahon because he did not "know all the facts in each of the cases," but said he hoped the new scheme would find support in flagrant instances.

It is known that the Police Court judges are fearful that the increased collateral policy will tend to bring more persons into court because they would be reluctant to forfeit the heavy bail.

Depositors Upheld in Bank Interest Fight

Justice Oscar R. Luhring yesterday upheld contentions of depositors and creditors of the United States Savings Bank, which closed its doors in 1933, that they should not be held to an agreement they made with the bank's shareholders limiting interest payments due them.

The agreement accepted a 3 per cent limit for interest payments on the depositors' claims against the bank, and was signed by only a portion of the depositors.

The justice ruled that they signed with the understanding that all claimants, whether signers or not, would receive only 3 per cent. Actually, nonsigners would receive a full 12.55 per cent.

There are said to be about 5000 of the nonsigners.

The depositors' claim was made in a suit filed against the shareholders by the late Frederick J. Young, receiver of the bank until his death two weeks ago.

The compromise agreement was originally drawn up in order to settle the bank's affairs and prevent further claim litigation, the court was told.

Petition Reveals Judge Aukam Left $8550, No Will

The late Judge George C. Aukam, who died on October 23, left an estate valued at $8550.44, but no will, District Court was informed yesterday in a petition for letters of administration filed by his widow, Mrs. Edith H. Aukam.

Friends of the judge, eulogized as the founder of the District's Municipal Court system, attributed the small amount of the estate to his many secret philanthropies.

Mrs. Aukam told the court that she had made a thorough search for a will but had not been able to find any. Among the property which he left was $750 in insurance, a $25 defense bond, his dogs and a boat which he used to cruise Chesapeake Bay.

The judge's charitable undertakings were revealed by Attorney H. Winship Wheatley, former president of the D. C. Bar Association, in a recent District Court memorial service. Wheatley said Judge Aukam frequently paid out of his own pocket the rent of tenants about to be ejected from their homes.

Holtzoff Calls For Increased Crime Solution

Discussing mandatory sentences for habitual criminals and the proposed new Federal Indeterminte Sentence Act, Alexander Holtzoff, special assistant to the Attorney General, yesterday called "certainty of punishment" the greatest need in law enforcement.

"Suitable punishment alone is not a complete cure," he warned.

Addressing the Corrections Committee, Council of Social Agencies, in its first fall meeting at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest, he said "there must be a considerable increase in the percentage of crimes solved in order that the criminal may feel that the chances of his escaping detection and punishment are slim.

"Certainty of punishment promptly inflicted has a much greater deterrent influence than severe punishment imposed only occasionally," he stated.

Holtzoff advocated extended uses of parole.

"It would be exceedingly helpful to the public if every prisoner were kept on parole for a reasonable period after his release," he said. "If he offends against the law during that interval, he can promptly be returned to the institution. . . . If he leads a law-abiding life parole supervision will not harm him. . . . This result can be accomplished by imposition of a longer maximum sentence by the court, thereby giving the indeterminate sentence and parole board an opportunity to keep the released prisoner under supervision for a considerable period after he has served a term commensurate with the offense and the surrounding circumstance."

He commended the pending legislation to consolidate the Municipal and Police Courts here. "This far reaching step will undoubtedly be a marked improvement in the administration of justice in this jurisdiction," he asserted.

Holtzoff said he had "full confidence" in Washington's superintendent of police, Edward Kelly. "He should receive hearty support by being given a sufficient number of well-qualified and trained police officers, as well as suitable and sufficient modern equipment, accompanied by an opportunity to exercise initiative and independence.

"There is no reason," he asserted, "why the Nation's Capital should not develop a Police Department that would be as successful locally as the Federal Bureau of Investigation has been in the national field."

He cautioned civic groups against advocating any criminal legislation "without a thorough study of the problem involved."

Neil Burkinshaw, the committee chairman, presided. The meeting was attended by about 40 committee members.

Randle Highlands Citizens Hear Clark

Morris Clark, deputy air raid warden for the Randle Highlands community, last night urged members of the citizens' association there to support the civilian defense program fully. Every citizen, he said at a meeting in Orr School, should find some job to do.

He called a committee meeting for next Wednesday at his home, 2160 Alabama Avenue Southeast.

Artists' Sale Opens Today At Corcoran

A special exhibition opens today at the Corcoran Gallery of Art. This one is different from most in that the artists represented hope to receive more than just praise or loving cups out of it.

Sales—that's the object of the show. Sales mean money and money means more canvas and oils—and coffee and cakes, too—for the two score exhibitors. All are advanced students or alumni of the Corcoran School of Art.

This is the school's fourth annual sales show. A few ceramics, sculptures and etchings are included, but most of the 107 items are oils and watercolors. Prices range from $1.25 to $50.

Although the exhibition room was closed yesterday, a few curious gallery visitors slipped inside and, beating the gun, bought two pictures. One is Susan H. Adamson's "The Blue Ridge" ($10) and the other was, appropriately, "Just Fine," by Inez Leinbach, cost $15.

The art works were selected by a jury composed of C. Powell Minnigerode, director of the Corcoran; John Oliver LaGorce, vice president, National Geographic Society; Eugen Weisz and Kenneth Stubbs, of the school faculty, and Oke Nordgren and Paul Arlt, alumni.

Britain Visions Lasting Peace, Chalkley Says

Peace, when eventually attained, must be preserved by the combined sea, land and air power of the United States and Great Britain with the help of all countries rejecting a Hitler peace, Sir Owen Chalkley, Commercial Counselor of the British Embassy, declared last night.

Speaking at Armistice Day ceremonies sponsored by Department of Commerce Post, No. 45, American Legion, held in the Commerce auditorium, Chalkley said: "We are fighting, with the mighty help of America behind us, to insure that our conception of peace, our ways of living, our freedoms, and our civilization shall triumph and that Hitler's conception of them will perish with him—utterly and completely."

Undersecretary of Commerce Wayne Chatfield Taylor, a guest speaker, said, "It is our major job to become so strong and so determined on our course that no one will dare dispute the road with us."

Miss Dorothy Shorb, who was elected "Miss Defense" in a city-wide competition recently for the benefit of the Bundles for Britain campaign and who was sponsored by the Commerce Legion Post, was presented.

Most of the local Legion posts were represented in the massing of the colors with Capt. Arthur L. Thomas commanding the guard of honor. Installation of post and unit officers was conducted by Department Commander Hayward Saunders and staff and Department President Margaret Carroll and staff.

Jurors Take But 15 Minutes To Decide Case

A District Criminal Court yesterday erected a milestone in whirlwind justice, when a jury listened to a housebreaking and larcey case, deliberated and found the defendant guilty, all in less than 15 minutes.

The jurors, in fact, indicated their ability to reach a verdict without leaving the court, but were motioned to retire by Justice F. Dickinson Letts. They stayed out only long enough to choose a foreman and then came back to declare Arthur F. Newlin, 20, Negro, guilty as charged.

Newlin was accused to having broken into the quarters of a fellow roomer at 1527 T Street Northwest and taking a quantity of clothing.

Men of 29th to Move North Next Month, Wait Yule Leave

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Morven, N. C., Nov. 7.—District, Virginia and Maryland men of the Twenty-ninth Division will leave the Carloina maneuver area for Fort George G. Meade, Md., between December 1 and December 11, it was learned today.

The division, based farthest south of those along the Atlantic Seaboard in Second Army Corps, will be the last to leave here and will be preceded by corps troops as well as the Twenty-eighth and Forty-fourth Divisions. For that reason, it was believed the Blue and Gray Division would probably begin moving after December 8, arriving at Meade between December 11 and December 13.

Under First Army orders, furloughs for Christmas will be granted to 70 per cent of the division's strength. The remaining 30 per cent will be required as camp guards and house keeping detachments.

Leaving here, the Twenty-ninth will travel over two routes, one column moving northward over U. S. Highway No. 1 through Raleigh, N. C., the other over route 15-a through Durham, N. C. It is expected that one brigade combat team will take the western route through Durham, while the other brigade combat team with the medium artillery and the 121st Engineers, with their heavy equipment, will move by the eastern route.

The east column will bivouac at the end of the first day near South Hill, Va., the west column at Finchley Airfield near Clarkesville, Va. The two columns will converge at A. P. Hill Military reservation, Carolina Couty, Va., at the end of the second day and will reach Fort Meade at the end of the third day.

Men of the division spent today cleaning and servicing equipment and making ready for their final weekend before start of general headquarters maneuvers November 18.

"BRINGING IN THE SHEAVES"
- - - KNOWLES SHAW - - -

Sowing in the morning, sowing seeds of kindness,
Sowing in the noontide and the dewy eve;
Waiting for the harvest, and the time of reaping,
We shall come rejoicing, bringing in the sheaves.

This popular harvest hymn was inspired by the 126th psalm "They that sow in tears shall reap in joy . . . he that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him."

D. C. Churches Will Observe Chest Sunday

More than 400 Washington churches of all faiths are being urged by religious leaders to unite in the observance tomorrow of Community Chest Sunday.

In a proclamation issued to Catholic churches in Washington and the surrounding area, Archbishop Michael J. Curley urges "the heartiest support of the Community Chest.

"With the rapid growth of Washington, the demands made upon all our agencies are steadily increasing. This coming year they will need your help more than ever before," the archbishop's message continues.

"I earnestly ask every Catholic therefore to contribute to the drive to the limit of his ability, and I would urge each to designate our Catholic agencies as the beneficiaries of at least a portion of his gift. Give generously, in the spirit of true charity and for the sake of Christ and His poor."

In an appeal issued by the Washington Federation of Churches, signed by 14 Protestant ministers, churches of every faith are asked to "join in a city-wide effort to call to church members the needs of the underprivileged."

"This year, in spite of increased wages and increased prosperity in our own city, we have two special difficulties in Washington: one, there are so many temporary residents here whose community responsibilities are elsewhere; and, two, the demands for help abroad are so great that our own charities are apt to suffer," the letter states.

"We hope that you will preach about this matter, that you will write about it in your parish bulletin, and that you will lead the prayers of your people for the success of it," the message continues.

Party to Open Novel Program At D. C. Church

The four-day "Religious Emphasis Program" of the Cleveland Park Congregational Church will open tonight with a young people's banquet in the church dining hall. A hundred young people are expected to gather for a turkey dinner, and to hear brief addresses by the Revs. Clement, Dempster, and Homer Yinger, visiting ministers, and brothers of the pastor of the Cleveland Park Church.

The four Yinger brothers will also sing several quartette numbers, reminiscent of their college days, when they paid a large part of their expenses by their singing. Mrs. Homer Yinger will present a feature which she calls "Color Harmony," with the aid of the quartette. She draws, in chalk, a scene or a portrait, while the quartette furnishes the background music.

There will be four outstanding services Sunday: The Rev. and Mrs. Dempster Yinger will present a special service for the church school at 9:45 a. m. At the 11 o'clock family worship service, the Rev. Clement B. Yinger will preach. At 8 p. m. the Rev. G. Dempster Yinger will preach, the quartette will sing, Mr. Clement B. Yinger will present one of his original dramalogues, and Mrs. Homer Yinger will make a chalk copy of Hoffman's head of Christ from "The Rich Young Ruler."

Besides numerous group meetings on Monday and Tuesday, there will be a public service on Tuesday at 8 p. m. The Rev. Homer V. Yinger, of La Crosse, Wisconsin will be the preacher. He will speak on the theme: "They Hold the World Together." Special music by the quartette and dramalogues by Mrs. Clement Yinger will also be included in the Tuesday night service.

Blessed Sacrament Services Held At Catholic U.

Daily exposition of the Blessed Sacrament in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception on the Catholic University campus was inaugurated this week by the Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of the university. The special services of adoration, which will continue the balance of the academic year, are open to the public.

Each day designated religious and lay students of the university spend stated periods in the adoration ceremonies. The schedule, which is in charge of the Rev. John J. Reilly, director of the shrine, is so arranged that constantly groups of priests, seminarians, nuns, or lay students, will devote stated periods to prayer and special supplications.

When each group begins the daily adoration, one member reads aloud the prayer for the university, followed by the prayer for benefactors of the institution, and finally the prayer for peace. At no time during the day is the crypt in the Shrine, where the Blessed Sacrament is exposed, without members of the Catholic faith present. The daily devotions terminate each evening at 7:30 o'clock with Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament.

Sheed to Lecture On Church's Place In Europe Today

Frank J. Sheed, author, publisher and lecturer, who has just returned from Europe, will give a public lecture on "The Church in Present-Day Europe," at the Willard Hotel Monday at 8:15 p. m., sponsored by the Catholic Daughters of America.

SHEED

It is intended not only to convey a historical picture, but that the courage and the valor and the faith of a people persevering among bursting bombs may be a spiritual fortification for us against an uncertain future that is before us. This "call to service" lecture is meant to mobilize our spiritual forces to meet the needs of this critical hour.

Sheed, by birth an Australian, is one of the most versatile and accomplished figures in the world of thought and letters. He is best known for having introduced, as publisher, many of our best writers to both the English and American book-reading public. He himself is the author of the widely read book, "Communism and Man," also "The Map of Life."

Capt. Milliken To Get Social Work Award

Capt. Rhoda Milliken

The corrections committee, Council of Social Agencies' award for outstanding achievement in work of crime prevention will be made this year to Capt. Rhoda Milliken, of the Women's Bureau, Metropolitan Police, it was announced yesterday by the selections committee at a meeting in the Y. W. C. A.

The certificate will be awarded at a later time, it was said by the committee chairman, Mrs. Pearle Klein, chairman of legislation for the Council of Social Agencies. The other committee members are Dr. James A. Nolan, of the Washington Criminal Justice Association, and Ray Everett, executive secretary, Social Hygiene Society.

Previous recipients of the award were Justice David A. Pine and Justice Bolitha J. Laws.

For Reward as a Whole

Mrs. Klein said that the selection of Capt. Milliken was not on the basis of any single performance, but on her record in the Police Department over a 20-year period. Particularly emphasized were her activities on behalf of children coming within range of Women's Bureau work, Mrs. Klein said.

The bureau has a special province of children and family troubles and in the children, whose homes were endangered in many instances, Capt. Milliken from the beginning of her service took a peculiar interest, said Mrs. Klein.

"She steered many of them right," it was said.

Served in Navy

Capt. Milliken attended Barnard College and Columbia University, and on outbreak of the World War joined the Navy as a yeoman. She was appointed to the Women's Bureau as a private on January 21, 1919, and was promoted to rank of sergeant a year later. Promotion to acting captain came on February 16, 1933, and to captain on August 1, 1936.

In June, 1939, during the visit to Washington of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth of England, Capt. Milliken was commended for her services in protecting the Royal couple, both by the President and the King.

Rumors Hint Amundsen May Be Alive

ROALD AMUNDSEN

By the Associated Press

Rome, Nov. 7.—Stefani carried a roundabout and wholly unconfirmed report from Stockholm today that a man resembling the long-missing Norwegian explorer, Capt. Roald Amundsen, and bearing his surname had been seen living among Eskimos at Fort Bay, Greenland.

The Stefani account quoted the German-edited Norwegian newspaper Deutsche Zeitung as saying information to this effect had come from "an officer of the North Alaska Trading Corporation."

"It is not possible to say if the story is an invention," the Italian news agency added.

Baptist Guest Speaker

Mr. Haley Scurlock will be the guest speaker at the Temple Baptist Church at both the morning and evening services tomorrow.

Mr. Scurlock is the former president of the Baptist Student Union of the District of Columbia and Maryland.

House to Get Billion-Dollar Waterway Bill

By the Associated Press

The Rivers and Harbors Committee will send to the House next week legislation to authorize navigation and hydroelectric works estimated to cost a billion dollars.

They include the St. Lawrence Seaway, described by President Roosevelt as vital to defense.

The committee approved the bill yesterday and directed Chairman Mansfield (Democrat), of Texas to report it favorably despite doubt expressed by supporters and opponents alike that the House would approve it.

While the measure would make no appropriation, opponents contended that this was not the time even to authorize nondefense works.

President Roosevelt asserted at his press conference yesterday he would like to see the St. Lawrence project authorized and funds appropriated now because, he said, its power development phases are vital to defense.

Florida Ship Canal Included

He made that statement during a discussion of the omnibus rivers and harbors bill.

Development of the navigational features of the project are desirable, but not as urgent from the defense standpoint, Mr. Roosevelt asserted.

Reminded that the bill also would authorize resumption of the Florida ship canal project, Mr. Roosevelt said the canal was not as vital for defense as the St. Lawrence development and probably should be given a second priority, rather than first.

If possible, the Chief Executive declared, he would like to see an immediate start on the St. Lawrence project.

Explains the Difference

He urged newspapermen to make it clear to the public that there is considerable difference between authorization and an appropriation, a fact which he said was not generally realized.

(After Congress has authorized a project, it may subsequently appropriate the funds to carry out the authorization. On the other hand, if the money is not appropriated, the project may never be carried out.)

The President repeated what he has said previously, that he favored the building up of a pool of authorized projects which would take care of the employment shift at the time of an eventual change from defense to peacetime conditions.

Replying to a question, he said he believed the canalization of the Beaver and Mahoning Rivers project, third largest in the bill, had a defense character because it would help the steel industry. The 48-million-dollar project is in Pennsylvania and Ohio.

New Operation Halts Ulcers Of Stomach

By the Associated Press

Boston, Nov. 7.—A surgical operation which prevents stomach and other digestive tract ulcers from recurring was reported to the American College of Surgeons here today.

The operation is new, not so much in technique as in the fact that it removes from human stomachs the major part of the area which produces the acid of digestion.

It is excess of this acid, and probably of that alone, the college was shown in a series of sensational animal experiments, which causes this major human digestive disease.

All the reports were made by a group of four physicians of the University of Minnesota School of Medicine and the Mayo Foundation, Lyle J. Hay, Charles F. Code, Richard L. Varco and Bernard Lannin.

Produced Stomach Ulcers

They produced stomach ulcers in animals that never have them. They even made them in the gizzard of a chicken. They caused these ulcers in from three days to three weeks, and always the ulcers were just like the long-standing human ones, which are supposed to develop slowly.

Every one of the animal ulcers, furthermore, was caused by the animals' own digestive juices. The Minnesotans discovered a new way to cause this stomach acid production by use of histamine, a chemical which is made naturally in the bodies of humans and animals.

Histamine is known to cause an excess of stomach acid. But the effects of injection of histamine never have lasted long. However, by mixing the histamine with beeswax the Minnesotans got a slow, long-time stimulation of excess acid production in the stomach.

The animals that got the ulcers were monkeys, swine, guinea pigs, chickens, ducks, woodchucks, calves and rabbits.

The operation has been used on a good many human cases invariably with good results and in nearly 100 per cent of these human cases the production of acid has been cut way down.

Although the operation removes three-fourths of the stomach, the Minnesotans reported patients have been able to eat anything, that is, did not find a diet necessary.

Remedy For Flatulence

Meanwhile, it was reported an almost instant remedy for the well-known feeling of being swelled up like a ham actor's head has been discovered at the Mayo Clinic.

It is a compression chamber, where the air pressure is 45 pounds a square inch, three times that of normal sea level. Step into this chamber, and the inflations due to gas simply flatten out completely.

There is, however, no sensation of pressure, Dr. W. R. Lovelace, of the Mayo Clinic, said today. The chamber feels just like any ordinary room.

Important medical possibilities, particularly in preparation for surgery, are involved, he said. Many troubles inflate human cavities with gas, and some of these make surgery risky.

Women to Inaugurate Defense Bulletin Plan

The United Women's Organizations of the District yesterday voted to assist the Office of Civilian Defense and to start a system of defense bulletin announcements at meetings of individual clubs, beginning next week.

Col. Lemuel Bolles, executive director of civilian defense in the metropolitan area, told the group yesterday that the program of civilian defense must rest on strong and energetic community organization.

He addressed the meeting at the apartment of Mrs. Curtis Shears, president of the U. W. O., at 2101 Connecticut Avenue.

Pointing out that some 60 civilian defense committees had been organized in communities here, he urged that the women's organizations put their force into cooperation with them.

Effective System Of Communication Urged

Col. Bolles' appearance followed a letter from him which Mrs. Shears had presented earlier in the meeting in which he said:

"You can accomplish a very useful thing against the time when it might be necessary to mobilize all of the members of the organizations which you represent if you will undertake within yourselves the development of an effective system of intercommunication.

"This is to be carried out in such a manner that by an initial contact with some designated individual all of your component organizaztions can be promptly contacted within the day, and without loss of time or undue confusion."

The representatives in attendance yesterday voted unanimously to present civilian defense bulletins, originating from Col. Bolles' office, at their meetings.

Value of Messages For Unity Is Stressed

Mrs. Shears pointed out the unifying value of such messages being "echoed around the District" through many groups.

Organizations which are cooperating members of the U. W. O. will be asked to make small contributions to cover cost of mailing these bulletins to presidents of the groups, it was voted at the meeting, but such contributions will be voluntary.

Among organizations represented at yesterday's meeting were American Legion Auxiliary, Business and Professional Women's Club, Catholic Daughters of America, Council of Jewish Women, District Congress of Parents and Teachers, Dames of the Loyal Legion, Grace Darling Seibold Chapter of the American Gold Star Mothers, Junior League, League of Republican Women, Near East Lecture Series, Soroptimist Club, Twentieth Century Club, Washington Assembly of C. I. O. Women's Auxiliary, National Women's Party, Pilot Club, Washington Chapter of Hadassah, Women's Bar Association, Women's City Club, Wheel of Progress, Women's Auxiliary of B'nai B'rith, Washington branch of American Association of University Women, Political Study Club, American Women's Voluntary Services.

Women Offer Civics Display

The civics section of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase, Md., held an exhibition and demonstration of its activities in community service yesterday at the clubhouse.

The exhibition, spread on 19 tables, was placed around the walls of the auditorium. Committees on applied education, public welfare, defense, Red Cross, motion picture, resolutions and legislation took part in the program. Mrs. Edgar Fowler, chairman of the civics section, was in charge.

The Red Cross unit, whose chairman is Mrs. Joseph T. Maguire, presented two skits, one on first aid and the other on home nursing.

Ball of Junior Assembly Set For Nov. 15

Thomas Campbell Washington, jr., the new chairman of the S. A. R.-D. A. R. junior assembly, has announced that November 15 has been set for the assembly's fourth annual ball to be held as usual at the Sulgrave Club.

Detailed arrangements are now being made by the executive committee, and will be announced in the near future. With Mr. Washington the chairman, the executive committee this year is comprised of Miss Ailleen Gorgas Wrightson, secretary; Walter Reynolds Powell, jr., treasurer; Miss Edna B. Millward and Robert Farnsworth Howard.

In addition there is an advisory committee consisting of the two past chairmen, Miss Marguerite Culver and Clarke P. Cole, 2d.; Mrs. Frank Heller, chairman for junior activities for the District of Columbia Society, D. A. R., and Mrs. Edward L. Everitt, past chairman for junior activities of the D. A. R.

This assembly, consisting of junior members of the Daughters of the American Revolution and of the Sons of the American Revolution, and of those who have established eligibility to either, was organized at a tea dance in 1938, and has given a ball annually since that time. After thoughtful consideration the committee has decided not to abandon plans for a ball this year despite world conditions and the fact that a number of members are absent on active duty with the Army and Navy, and to allow members to nominate eligible friends for membership to fill these vacancies.

Interlining a Coat

WITH GIRLS pouring into Washington from all over the country to work for the Government or private industry, here is a common problem. A girl from Texas has never before had the need for a heavy winter coat. Having spent a sizable amount on accessories and other costumes, she asks if there are any stores who would interline her dark spring coat.

Upon inquiry the fashion editor finds that the interlining of lightweight coats is a common practice in the alteration departments of local stores in the city. If the coat is simply tailored, an all wool lining will be put in the entire coat for as little as $8 or less, if the coat is only partially lined.

Since this is a very busy season, however, it is necessary to give a store from two to three weeks to complete the job. Alteration departments are occupied at this time with repairs on fur coats and other storage items.

Use of Wedding Gown

A YOUNG MATRON who has been married four years recently turned practical and had her sleek-fitting wedding gown made into a smart evening dress. The train was cut off and the high back was cut out, but the long sleeves were left in. Now, although the youthful "married" admits the gown is very chic, she wonders if it would be appropriate to wear this time of year because it is made of heavy cotton and silk lace.

From the description given, the gown appears to be more of a wintry lace than the summery cotton type. In this case, it could be worn appropriately at present. As a matter of fact, white lace is good almost any time of the year. It has a tendency to appear very formal, so the wearer should be certain the affair warrants formality. The long sleeves give a "cover up" feeling, however.

Fur Coat Length

A woman who goes to business asks: "What is the proper length to wear my fur coat this year?"

The old faithful rule of judging the length of a garment according to individual proportions still holds. A few generalities can be made, however.

As a general rule, the smartest fur coats are two, three, or even four inches above the dress. This length range applies to boxy coats as well. These have a tendency to look clumsy if they are any longer. But the dressy coat is an exception. It should cover the costume and reach to one-half inch below the frock of an even hemline.

Blitz Black With White Pique

That touch of white is already appearing on black dresses this winter. Here is a version designed by Arthur Weiss with a detachable collar of pique and appliqued with batiste. Novel bands of tiny tucks accent the jacket and pencil-slim skirt, giving at once the effect of a peplum and a tunic, but being neither.

Special Exercises Necessary If Your Back Is Weak

By Ida Jean Kain

IF YOU have a weak back, you'd better be strong-minded about the exercises you do. It takes very little of certain types of calisthenics to give you a backache.

For you, all backward bending exercises are out and there are others which you should not attempt. These include bending down to touch your fingers to your toes, or rising from a prone position to touch your fingers to your toes. The favorite of lying on the back on the floor and raising and lowering the legs, knees stiff, is also taboo.

Sit Correctly

You can help the good work along by sitting correctly. You should sit with the backs of the hips pressed against the back of the chair, with the lower abdominal muscles pulled up. Slumping weakens your muscles.

Make a habit of keeping your back straight as you do your housework. This will save a lot of backache. In picking up articles from the floor, keep your back straight and bend your knees.

If your kitchen sink or table is not exactly the right height for you—so that you neither stoop nor bend—sit on a high stool to work.

Do not sleep on too soft a mattress or the sag will throw your spine out of alignment. It is even a good idea when resting on your back to place a small pillow or rolled towel just under the bend in the knees to relieve any strain on the back. In some extreme cases, the doctor advises sleeping with a board under the attress to prevent any sagging.

Special Exercises

Today's streamlining exercises are worked out especially for the woman who has to be careful in her choice of exercises. You will find them excellent for overcoming sway back.

POSITION: Lying on back on floor, knees flexed, soles of feet on floor.

MOVEMENT: Pull upward with the lower abdominal muscles in an effort to press the small of the back down against the floor. Follow this by flexing alternate knees to chest.

POSITION: The same, except that you start with both knees flexed to chest.

MOVEMENT: Using your leg muscles, pull alternate knees down to chest—hard.

Here's another:

POSITION: Lie face forward on a table, legs straight down, feet on floor.

MOVEMENT: Raise alternate legs slowly backward in straight line with trunk, and lower to floor. This slims the hips without placing any strain on the back.

Stretching exercises never hurt anybody—but if you stretch on a bar, be careful not to let the small of the back sink inward. And if there is any doubt as to whether or not you should exercise, go to someone who can supervise you.

Some 'Two-Somes' For Cool Weather

It's time to get out some of those "two-somes" so popular at this season. Here are some tried and true ones as well as some new mates: Spiced doughnuts and coffee, fried mush and strained honey, sliced apples browned and served with sausages (link or cake), baked beans and Boston brown bread with nuts in it (try Brazils or cashews, sliced very thin), crumbled bacon mixed into scrambled eggs and tart cranberry sauce perched atop pancakes or waffles.

Make Breakfast Important

Breakfast is an important meal that shouldn't be allowed to degenerate into a grab and run affair. Alluring menus are one way to lure the family up in time to eat properly. Table cooking appliances add to the precision of cooking and serving—a table biscuit baker, a waffle griddle, a glass coffee maker, a toaster that really is a toaster, such as the new toaster with a tester that makes it easy to have toast light or dark brown to taste without extra bother.

Mary Haworth's Mail

New to Washington, College Girl Has Been Asked To Naval Academy Hop and Army-Navy Game; She Wants to Know Her Financial Obligations as Guest

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Since coming to Washington several months ago I have been reading your column, and now I would appreciate your advice. I am a girl 18 years of age, a college student, now making my home with an aunt here. I have been asked to the Naval Academy to a hop, and also to the Army-Navy game. I would like to know how much of the expense is mine; and, also, if chaperones are out of fashion. Does my date make room reservations for me in advance, for which I pay? And if my aunt accompanies me, should she ask him to dinner with us before the hop? I shall be eternally grateful for full directions on "what to do." Sincerely, DUMB DORA.

DEAR D. D.: It is customary for a midshipman's "drag,"—either to a Naval Academy hop or to an Army-Navy game,—to pay the costs of transportation both ways, and, also, the room-and-board bill for her overnight stay. When inviting a girl to Annapolis, a midshipman assumes responsibility for finding her a place to stay. If a certain hotel or boarding house has been recommended to the girl, and she wishes to stay there, she tells him her preference and he makes the reservation. The cost of a room for a weekend varies from $1.50 to $3,—the average being about $2.

Chaperones are not "out of fashion;"—particularly not for a young girl who is visiting Annapolis for the first time. And in the event your aunt wishes to go, you may choose to stay at Carvel Hall,—the most modern and attractive hotel in Annapolis. This will prove more expensive than a boarding house, of course;—and while it may lack some of the cozy informality that characterizes the rooming houses most favored by the Naval Academy's seasoned party-goers from out-of-town, your aunt might be more comfortable there.

If your aunt decides to see you through your first visit to Annapolis, no doubt she will be considerately self effacing for the most part. But it would be entirely proper for her to invite your midshipman beau to have dinner with you two before the hop. However, it is likely that he will want you to be his dinner guest, in a small party composed of one or two classmates and their "drags." Thus, your aunt's invitation to him might evoke a flustered "regret," followed by a counter-invitation to her to dine with his party of friends—an invitation which she should graciously decline, by suggesting, perhaps, that so much festivity would be too much festivity for her.

If, for the Army-Navy game, you would be meeting your midshipman in Philadelphia,—which is to say, making the trip there and back "on your own,"—it would be good form to have your aunt go along. You would check in at a hotel conveniently close to the one where the midshipmen will be staying; and perhaps see the game in company with your aunt. Your beau will provide your ticket; and it would be correct to suggest that if he can get two seats together, your aunt will appreciate the favor, and insists upon paying for her ticket, of course. After the game, she would fade out of the picture and your date with your beau would proceed.

I might explain, however, that your aunt as chaperone would be superfluous, either at Annapolis or Philadelphia, in case your beau makes arrangements to have you come with, and/or stay with, other girls who will be dating other midshipmen for the same event. And perhaps I should further state that The Log, the student publication of the United States Naval Academy, distributes a pamphlet titled, "The Drags' Handbook," which affords full "sailing directions for drags." Its breezy, 40-page contents are presented under such subheadings as "What to Bring," "Your Weekend Home," "Getting to Annapolis," "Saturday Afternoon," "Saturday Night and the Hop," "June Week," "Addends," "Sightseeing in Annapolis" and "For Better Understanding."

A courtesy copy has come into my possession, but it is my impression that the booklet is furnished on request—at a cost of 25 cents or less—to those who wish to get the midshipmen's slant on the social life of Annapolis. You might have your beau get a copy for you; or you might write to the office of The Log, asking that a copy be mailed to you (and inclosing 25 cents to cover the cost). Or you might get from the public library a copy of Kendall Manning's book, "Annapolis Today," which gives a really comprehensive picture of the Academy's background, set-up, traditions and social relationship to community. M. H.

Frivolous Women Best Remembered, Lecturer Finds

Don't worry about your feminine foibles. They may give you immortality.

This is the advice of Sam Pearce, authority on the history of the theater, who has been lecturing here this week on Sheridan's "The Rivals," soon to be presented in Washington by the Theater Guild.

Mr. Pearce's delvings into drama, fiction and history have convinced him that the funny, silly and superficial women are often the ones longest remembered. Take for instance Mrs. Malaprop, of "The Rivals," famous for such expressions as "He is the very pineapple of politeness." Nearly everyone knows Mrs. Malaprop, Mr. Pearce finds, and what is more can point out a present counterpart.

"I heard of a great many Mrs. Malaprops in Washington," said Mr. Pearce, "particularly of one who spoke of someone's going to a costume party in 'the garbage of a monk.' Of course, the social climber who is in over her depth is always a familiar character. It is also astonishing how other types, such as setters of fashions, number of glamour debs, matrimonially designing mothers, dominant female relatives, etc., repeat themselves."

"Debs of the late eighteenth century as portrayed in comedies of manners were amazingly like those of today in their interest in clothes, sentimental novels (it's movies and night clubs today) and the making of advantageous marriages," Mr. Pearce finds.

For the benefit of clothes-crazy women, Mr. Pearce points out that Marie Antoinette is remembered chiefly as a style setter and that Mme. Pompadour put herself into the dictionary by the way she fixed her hair.

Improved Diet Will Keep Your Nails Healthy

Two coats of polish are better than one, says Miss Ruth Hawk (above), former John Powers model. The first coat colors the nails, and the second gives added protection.

By Carolyn Abbott.

ARE YOUR fingernails weak and brittle? Do they break easily? If so, stop blaming your polish and look to your diet. This is the advice of Miss Ruth Hawk, a former John Powers model, who is at a local store today to give advice on the care of hands and nails.

"Lack of calcium and minerals are the chief cause of brittle, weak nails," explained Miss Hawk. "Other contributing factors are glandular disturbances and insufficient sunshine."

To supply calcium to the diet, Miss Hawk suggests milk, cheese and cauliflower. Calcuim in wafer form may also be taken, she pointed out, but only after consulting a doctor.

Need Sunshine

"In the summertime," she said, "brittleness in nails has a tendency to lessen and often disappears entirely. That is due to the warm sun that supplies needed Vitamin D to the system. In winter, this vitamin may be supplied by cod liver oil."

Once the fingernails are in a good healthy condition, Miss Hawk suggests the following protective measures:

"Don't dial telephone numbers, open a bobby pin or put a key into the lock with the tip of the nail; learn to use the cushion of the finger.

"Don't gouge the nail bed with an orange stick or metal instrument. This weakens the base of the nail and causes it to break more easily. Instead push back the cuticle and wipe away the surplus skin with a towel each time you dry your hands.

Cream Massage

"Massage a cream around the base of the nails every night to discourage dryness. File your nails in one direction. Keep them square at the sides and file them into almond tips from that point.

"When you don rubber gloves for dishwashing or other household tasks, apply a rich lubricating cream or hand lotion to the hands and nails. Besides protecting them, it's a good reconditioning treatment.

"If your hands are too bony and the veins protrude conspicuously, build them up with coco butter. Coco butter is 100 per cent fat and helps to fill out too thin hands."

Miss Hawk thinks that two coats of polish are better than one. "You need one coat for color," she said, and one for protection." Contrary to general belief, nail lacquer protects the nails rather than increases brittleness.

(From the Truthtown Torch.)

Alarmed over the threatened paucity of large parties this season, Truthtown socialities have called a mass meeting for this afternoon at the Plush Sofa Club. Mrs. Badminton Bellwether, ranking dowager, will preside.

"What is this country coming to?" asked Mrs. Bellwether yesterday in a statement to the press. "We're getting just like Russia. It was bad enough to do away with the official receptions, but now I understand many large dinners and receptions are to be called off. If this continues, how can we ever keep up the morale of our leisure class? These people no longer can go to Europe and if they remain at home they must be kept occupied. Otherwise they will disintegrate."

Mrs. Bellwether especially decried the fact that so many debut parties had been called off. "How can these girls make suitable alliances unless they get the proper publicity?" she asked. "And how can they get any dignified publicity without their debut parties?"

Call to the Colors

Truthtown's exclusive Fencers' Club, disbanded in 1921, is to be revived, Col. Armitage Van Stiff, brother of the dowager Miss Jennie Van Stiff, and former president of the club, has announced.

The revived club will meet weekly in the ballroom of the Descendants of Robber Barons' Clubhouse. Count Siatica, European refugee, will give instructions in the "sport of gentlemen." Man About Town Delaphaine Spavin is acting secretary of the Fencers.

"We feel that at this crucial time we should get in condition to defend our country," said Col. Van Stiff yesterday, while sipping champagne at the Mausoleum League headquarters.

Home Finish Repairs

Perhaps you've been advised to use mercurochrome, iodine, red ink, vinegar and such to doctor unsightly marks on your furniture. One of the best things about such recommendations is that they usually do diminish the unsightliness of marks without doing further damage, and are safe in the hands of inexperienced persons. If a mahogany piece is valuable and the damage serious, however, by all means have it repaired by an expert.

The Young Visitor

He arrives without warning for the weekend, honking his motor horn imperiously as he drives up in front of the house.

After strewing his possessions over the guest room, he departs to "see a fellow" and returns 45 minutes late for dinner.

He has a date for the evening and has forgotten to bring the right tie. Borrows one from the man of the house.

He returns in the early morning hours and awakens everyone slamming bathroom doors.

He is too sleepy to respond to polite breakfast calls from outside the door and finally has to be tactfully but firmly routed by the man of the house—from whom he borrows a pair of socks.

He has to see a "lot of people" and requires assistance all morning tracking them down in the telephone book.

He departs, saying he will not return for lunch, then barges in just as the woman of the house is snatching a bite in the kitchen.

He goes riding with a girl friend and arrives an hour late for dinner.

He has a formal date and borrows shirt and cuff links from the man of the house.

He finds his own motor car is on the blink and borrows the family car.

He leaves word he will not get up for breakfast, then wanders into the kitchen an hour after everyone else has dined, looking gaunt and ravenous.

He sits in the best chair under the best light, throws his newspapers on the floor, leaves his gimcracks all over the living room, talks on the telephone for an hour when the man of the house is expecting a call, and finally disappears (temporarily, unfortunately) just as dinner is ready to serve.

He airs opinions at the table, vociferously indorsing all the things that make the man of the house mentally apoplectic and denouncing all the things that the woman of the house regards as the Foundations of Society.

He finally departs, wearing another borrowed shirt, and leaving the bathroom and guest room as if struck by a hurricane.

He does not write a thank-you note to his hostess but—two weeks later he sends her a letter saying he had such a fine time he is coming back that very weekend.

King Turkey and Consort High Light Dinner

ONLY a gastronomic revolution could rule out King Turkey and his faithful consort cranberry sauce at this time of the year. No longer do we wait until Thanksgiving to use these delicious foods, for poultry fanciers now offer the king bird the year around. Then too we always have the cranberry with us, for this saucy food is being packed in cans.

These two traditional foods were high lights on the menu of the dinner given by the Home Economics Women In Business at the Garden House, Dodge Hotel Friday night at a dinner.

The menu was so well balanced that it did not leave one feeling like the proverbial upholstered sofa after the dinner was over. Discerning cooks will find an inspiration in the food and color plan of this meal. Here is the menu:

Dinner Menu

Fresh Fruits in Lime
Roast Turkey, Dressing,
Cranberry Sauce
Scalloped Sweet Potato and Orange
Spinach a la Dodge Hot Rolls
Avocado, Grape and Persimmon Salad
Raspberry Sherbet Pound Cake
Coffee

Scalloped Sweet Potatoes and Oranges—Cook sweet potatoes to make 2 cups cut in ¼ inch slices. Put half the potatoes in buttered baking dish cover with one-half cup thinly sliced oranges, sprinkle with 2 tablespoons butter, and dot over with 2 tablespoons butter, and sprinkle with salt. Repeat with another layer, using the same amount of ingredients. Bake 1 hour in moderate oven, 350 degrees. Serves 6.

Debutante Of the Day

Notables Throng Debutante's Fete At Lippmann Home

By Carolyn Bell

In a season fraught with parties of international significance it was with a sigh of relief that guests arrived at the Walter Lippmans' Georgetown home yesterday afternoon to greet the one and only reason for the fete—a pretty, titian-haired debutante, Miss Gregor Armstrong.

Between the hours of 5 and 7 o'clock shoals of guests from the residential, diplomatic and official sets dropped in to see the bud, home for a brief holiday from her studies at Bryn Mawr. With Mrs. Lippmann, her mother, Miss Armstrong received in the long drawing room filled with fall flowers and lilies. Eschewing the usual debutante-white, she wore a black velvet frock with a net bodice and tiered skirt. Her arm bouquet was of yellow roses. Mrs. Lippmann selected a gold lame gown, cut on simple lines, and accented with a cluster of gardenias.

Also enjoying a holiday from their studies at Bryn Mawr College were two of the debutante's classmates who had come down to be her house guests and attend the festivities. They are Miss Rosalynd Wright, of Chicago, and Miss Ann Coulson, of New York. Pretty in their bright colored frocks, the girls assisted the young hostess. Tonight they will be among the guests attending the dinner given by the Lippmanns for Miss Armstrong at Pierre's and later the group of ten will go dancing.

Mme. Fotitch Pours Tea

In her second year at Bryn Mawr, the bud is well known in Washington where she was feted at a sub deb party given last Christmas by Mr. and Mrs. Lippmann. She is the daughter of Hamilton Fish Armstrong, editor of Foreign Affairs.

Having greeted their host, who wandered about, guests found their way into the dining room where punch as well as tea and coffee were being served. Huge bouquets of lilies and pink roses, gifts to the debutante, were used charmingly against the blue walls of the rooms.

Pouring tea throughout the afternoon were Mme. Fotitch, wife of the Yugoslav Minister; Mme. Bruggman, wife of the Minister from Switzerland; Lady Salter, wife of the head of the British Shipping Commission; Mrs. Robert Patterson, whose husband is Assistant Secretary of War; Countess Van Rechteren Limpurg, Mrs. Archibald MacLeish, wife of the Librarian of Congress; Mrs. Robert Lovett, Mrs. Dwight Davis, Mrs. Charles A. Baker, Mrs. Hendrick Eustis, Mrs. Hamilton Bryan, Mrs. Thomas Finletter, Mrs. D. T. Morgan and Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding, jr.

Many of the guests were either fresh from the Soviet Embassy party or just ready to take off for that "significant" event. But meanwhile they were enjoying the excellent hospitality of the Lippmanns . . . the nice, dry champagne . . . turkey sandwiches . . . and frivolous conversation.

Seemingly in earnest conversation were Justice Frank Murphy and Mrs. Arthur Fowler, she in all beige and a tiny feather hat. A late arrival was the Minister of Norway and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne. He, of course, was being asked to tell ALL about London, having returned from England only this week. Mrs. Adolph Berle was there as were Mme. Hurban, wife of the Czecho-Slavak Minister, and the Minister of Portugal and Mme. Bianchi.

Mrs. Stettinius Attends Party

Handsome Mrs. Edward Stettinius came in with her mother, Mrs. Wallace, and others there included Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mrs. Felix Frankfurter, in a smart wool suit, Mrs. Nathan Wyeth, seeing that everyone had plenty of champagne; Mrs. Jouett Shouse, Mrs. George Pettengill and Mrs. Ted Acheson. Although guests gathered for the most part in the drawing room and adjoining sun porch where the bar had been set up, many gathered in the charming, candlelight dining room and in a smaller salon, filled with lovely autumn flowers of bronze and yellow that blended with the Pompeian red walls.

Glimpsed here and there: Countess Palffy discussing this and that with the Swiss Minister . . . Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Vice President, and Mrs. Stanley Reed threading their way through the crowded rooms . . . Handsome John Foster, of the British Embassy, towering above everyone . . . Baroness de Gruben, whose black ensemble was set off with a jersey snood . . . Mrs. Samuel W. Bell in a bottle green suit . . . Representative and Mrs. Foster Stearns . . . Mr. and Mrs. David Finley chatting with a group . . . Miss Joan Dodd and her fiance, David Robertson, talking with pretty Mildred Dunn . . . Blond Mrs. William Burden in a deep purple ensemble . . . Miss Francis Van Schaick sipping a glass of champagne . . . Mrs. Livingston Hartley in a blue and black ensemble and dozens of others.

Bards Entertain at Dinner For Mr., Mrs. Artemus Gates

The Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Ralph A. Bard entertained at a "family" dinner last night in their apartment at 2101 Connecticut Avenue in honor of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air and Mrs. Artemus L. Gates.

The informal dinner was strictly a "family affair" in that it was made up entirely of top-ranking Navy Department officials. The other guests were the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Frank Knox and the Undersecretary of the Navy and Mrs. James V. Forrestal.

A commuter from her home on Long Island since her husband became the first to hold the position of Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air in September, Mrs. Gates plans to move down to the Capital before Christmas. Her husband, who has been living with his wife's brother and sister-in-law, Col. and Mrs. F. P. Davison, in their home in Georgetown, has been out scouting for houses and has one lined up for next month. Mrs. Gates will bring down with her their two early 'teen-age daughters, Cynthia and Diane.

Before he was appointed to his present position, Mr. Gates was president of the New York Trust Bank. He will accompany his wife to Baltimore today when she christens the new naval bomber Mars.

Among the other parties given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Gates during her sojourn in Washington this week was a dinner given Thursday night by the Assistant Secretary of War for Air and Mrs. Robert A. Lovett.

Dr. F. P. Hannon And Bride Live On Church Street

Dr. and Mrs. Francis P. Hannon, who have recently returned from their wedding trip, are making their home at 1741 Church Street. Mrs. Hannon is the former Miss Rose K. Farrell, R. N., daughter of Mrs. Mary E. Farrell and the late Patrick Farrell, of Mahoney Plane, Pa.

Some 300 guests were present at St. Matthews' Cathedral when they were married by the Rev. Philip M. Hannon, Dr. Hannon's brother, on October 11. He was assisted at the altar by two other brothers, Jerry Hannon and Dennis Hannon. The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, was gowned in faille taffeta with a sweetheart neckline and fitted bodice which flared into a full skirt and long train. Her full-length veil was held by a garland of lilies of the valley and she carried a shower bouquet of white roses and bouvardia. Miss Kathryn Brennan, a niece of the bride, was her only attendant. She wore a gown with aqua skirt topped with a bodice of velvet.

Dr. Hannon, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. P. T. Hannon, lifelong Washingtonians, had John Hannon, a brother, for best man. William Hannon, also a brother, sang during the mass, and ushers were Thomas Hannon, Paul Hannon, Aenus Collins and Dr. Robert Mahoney. A reception was held after the ceremony at the home of the bridegroom.

Gates, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air, will be the sponsor of the flying boat. James Ivins to Entertain At Hobo 'Jungle' Party

If there are enough tin cans to go around, the "knights of the road" who have been invited to James Ivins' "jungle" tonight will get a hand-out in the style to which they would be accustomed—if their regular eating habits matched their clothes.

Lawyer Ivins does not know just how many will be there in answer to his brown paper sack invitations, nor whether many of his friends possess the overall outfit he designed for his "hobo" party. But if his supply of tin cans turns out not to equal the number of guests, he may have to get out the prosaic china and glass after all.

The unusual invitations to the gathering read, "Hi, Broad—If you are 'C. H. and D.' why not unleash your dogs and ankle down the pike to the jungle on Saturday, November 8." (For the uninitiated C. H. and D. means cold, hungry and dry.)

Mrs. John Ralph H. Wootons Greet Old Friend

Entertaining informally at their new home in Georgetown yesterday afternoon, Col. and Mrs. Ralph H. Wooton set their party for "after 5:30" to give their guests a chance to stop by the Soviet Embassy first.

Mrs. Ellis Fetes Mrs. Keyes Upon Publication of New Book

Complimenting Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, whose nineteenth book, "All That Glitters," has just been published, Mrs. Wade H. Ellis entertained at a large luncheon yesterday at the Sulgrave Club. The event followed a review of the book by Mrs. O. W. McNeese.

Yellow and bronze chrysanthemums and scarlet leaves from Rippon Lodge, the Ellis home on the Potomac, decorated the long table, which was lighted with clusters of tall white tapers in silver candelabra.

Mrs. Keyes, who has been ill with influenza for the past few days, had thought she would not be able to attend. But as the time for the party approached, she began to improve, and by the hour set for the review she was among those present. Not only was she there, but she was also part of the program, and gave a very entertaining talk about some of her experiences as a novelist.

Mrs. Ellis is mentioned in the "Author's note" of the current book as the one who inspired Mrs. Keyes' use of the term "high particular" to designate the object of one's affection. Several others among those at the luncheon yesterday are also mentioned in thte "Author's note."

Climaxing the program for the day, Mrs. Ellis took over the spotlight at the close of the luncheon to introduce each guest, with a biographical bit about each one.

Those at the head table included Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mrs. Charles McNary, Mrs. Claude Pepper, Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, Mrs. George Barnett, Mrs. William D. Connor, Lady Chalkley, Mrs. Wilbur Carr, Mrs. James E. Watson, Mrs. R. R. Sayers, Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, Mrs. O. W. McNeese and Mrs. Frank Mason Dillard, to whom "All That Glitters" is dedicated.

Miss Prochnik Will Sing At Pall Mall Room

Capital night-life society will have an opportunity to hear Patricia Prochnik sing again starting Thursday in the Pall Mall Room of the Raleigh Hotel. She has never really had any lessons, but pretty, fair haired Miss Prochnik, who is the daughter of the former Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik, has had the singing career most 1940 debs longed for, since she made her bow to Washington society that year.

Her last engagement was at the Troika where she sang for 18 weeks. That ended in April, and since then she has been half-vacationing and half-job-hunting. Before then she dashed about the country singing sweet and low and hot and fast with the orchestra of Meyer Davis, who heard her sing one night when his orchestra was playing for a private party. He asked her for a trial appearance and it was then that her deb-dream came true.

Kenyon.

Guests at the luncheon were the prospective bride's mother, Mrs. Kenyon; her sister, Miss Doris Kenyon, and the mother and sister of the soon-to-be bridegroom, Mrs. John P. Johnson, and Miss Muriel Johnson; Mrs. Alfred H. Rodrick, Miss Mary Statler Jefferson, of Ottawa, Canada; Miss Matilda Boose, Mrs. John Austin Latimer, jr., Miss Grace Timble, of Maplewood, N. J., and Miss Hilda Whitaker, of Chattanooga, Tenn.

Grace Church Ball Features Novel Victory Symphony

Guests from diplomatic, official and residential circles attended the annual autumn ball given last evening at the Sulgrave Club for the benefit of Grace Episcopal Church. Receiving were the Rev. Meade Bolton MacBryde, rector of the church, and Miss Dorothy Ann Rutherford, pretty brunette daughter of Gen. and Mrs. Harry K. Rutherford. Miss Rutherford was gowned in blue tulle and carried a bouquet of pink roses.

In keeping with the general theme of the ball, the dancers gave a colorful rendition of the "Victory Symphony," the first movement of Beethoven's Fifth, the first three notes of which spell out the letter V in the Morse code. Miss Chase did a solo interpretation of Bach's "Sarabande."

Members of the floor committee then distributed red, white and blue balloons, which were carried aloft during the cotillion figure which followed. The figure was led by the chairman of the floor committee, Thomas Rogers Drake, and Miss Rutherford. After it ended in a large V, there was a grand march into the dining room for refreshments. General dancing was then resumed and continued until a late hour.

Many Former Residents Are Returning to City

Maj. and Mrs. Ennalls Waggamann, who have been stationed on the West Coast for several years, have come to Washington and have taken an apartment at the Westchester.

Washington "returners" seem to be turning up here at a great rate. Mrs. Isaac T. Mann, who has been in Denver, Colo., for several months, has returned here and has taken an apartment at the Dresden, for the winter.

Also on the return list are Mr. and Mrs. James Henry Hall, who have been in Massashusetts visiting their son at Groton. The Halls came here from Ridgeway, N. J. They have made their home in Mexico for a number of years but were called to Washington, where Mr. Hall is workking with the oil commission.

Miss Harris Weds D. C. Man

At a simple evening wedding last night in the National Memorial Baptist Church, Miss Kathleen Harris, daughter of Mr. Curtis C. Harris, of Fayettesville, N. C., became the bride of Robert L. Andersen, of Washington. The Rev. Gove Johnson officiated.

The couple was attended by Miss Ina Harris, sister of the bride, and William B. Dawson, of Alexandria. For the wedding the bride chose a blue wool jacket dress with brown accessories. She wore a corsage of orchids. Miss Ina Harris wore a frock of black and gold, a matching hat, and a corsage of talisman roses.

Following the wedding a reception was held at the home of the bride's sister on Lanier Place. When they return from their wedding trip the couple will be at home at Buckingham, in Arlington.

Many Parties Given in Honor Of the Larsens

Col. Henry Larsen of the U. S. Marine Corps and Mrs. Larsen, who arrived in town only last Wednesday for a few weeks' stay, have already been caught in a round of parties. Col. Larsen is here from his station in San Diego, to serve on the Marine selection board, and the couple are house guests of Col. and Mrs. A. H. Turnage in Alexandria.

Among the many fetes planned in the Larsens' honor is the luncheon which will be given tomorrow at the Army-Navy Country Club by Mrs. Ray A. Robinson. A hastily arranged party, it is being kept small by Mrs. Robinson as Col. Robinson is on temporary duty out of town. It will honor not only the Larsens, but also Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Alexander A. Vandegrift. Gen. Vandegrift is soon to leave for a new station.

Another party that jointly honored both the Vandegrifts and the Larsens was the dinner party given last evening at the Army-Navy Country Club preceding the first Marine Corps dance of the season, when Col. and Mrs. Joseph Howard Fellows were hosts.

Earlier yesterday Mrs. Larsen was guest of honor at a luncheon given by Mrs. Holland Smith, wife if Brig. Gen. Smith of the Marine Corps at Quantico.

This afternoon Col. and Mrs. Larsen will go over to Baltimore to attend the Navy-Notre Dame football game.

Rich–Stanley Rites Awaited

Frederic Drakes Forced to Cancel Visit to Capital

An unexpected call back to business in New York cut short Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Drake's wedding trip vacation and made it necessary for them to postpone the visit they had planned with Mrs. Drake's parents, Dr. and Mrs. William C. Gwynn, this weekend. Last night they called Mrs. Gwynn from New York, where Mr. Drake is the publisher of Harper's Bazaar.

Mr. and Mrs. Drake have been spending several days in Charleston, S. C., following their marriage there November 1. Mrs. Drake is the former Mrs. Louise Gwynn Winters, widow of Owen B. Winters. Her first marriage to Lawrence Turnure was dissolved in divorce. The Drakes hope to make their visit here in the very near future.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

On the word of one of the worst pre-game authorities on the subject, we now have it that Notre Dame is going to take a licking from Navy this afternoon at Baltimore.

POVICH

The man who has confided in us is Frank Leahy, the Irish head coach, who was giving the crying towel a vigorous workout yesterday at Griffith Stadium where his extremely healthy-looking squad was flexing its collective muscles.

Leahy was expressing some shock at reports that a dark Navy plot had been afoot, with respect to re-sodding the turf in Baltimore Stadium for today's game. The hint was that a new sodding job would slow up Notre Dame's passing game and favor Navy's running attack.

"I don't believe it," said Leahy. "Navy wouldn't do anything like that. I have too much respect for the people at the Naval Academy to suggest any such move. They wouldn't take an unfair advantage."

And then, Leahy added sadly, "They wouldn't have to pull any tricks to beat us, anyway."

Don't you believe it, men. We mean Leahy's seeming lack of confidence in his Notre Dame team. For years the man has insisted on being unhappy before his football games. During his regime at Boston College, the unsuspecting person would weep at Leahy's pre-game tales of woe. When B. C. was racing through its unbeaten season last year, Leahy was the most miserable human being on the campus, or at least appeared to be.

He isn't the blatant sort of disciple of the crying towel, like Columbia's Lou Little, who with an elephant roar of anguish weekly consigns Columbia to some awful fate before each game. Leahy doesn't quite muster a sob, but his face on Friday night registers a "why does this happen to me" look that would fetch him a Hollywood contract as an eight-reel sufferer.

Wet Field Alarms Leahy

The threat of a wet field, however slight, though, is cause for Leahy to shudder somewhat. Only too fresh in his memory is last week's horrible experience in the mud at Yankee Stadium where the treacherous footing reduced the Irish passing game to empty gestures. He admits that in the last minutes of play he was actually playing for a tie against an Army team that he had figured to beat.

From Joe Beinor, the new Redskin tackle who was an All-American in his junior year at Notre Dame in 1937, we have it that a dry field is absolutely necessary for the success of the Irish against Navy. Beinor, like Wayne Millner, another former Notre Dame hero, was on hand for the workout of the Irish at Griffith Stadium.

"This is a strange kind of Notre Dame team, I think," Beinor was saying. "I've never seen anything like it. I saw their game with Army last week and this is a club that uses its running game to set up its passing attack. Usually, it's the passes that are used to set up the running, but this team is different.

"They've got a great passer in Bertelli and Leahy has given him great protection, but on a wet field those pass-catchers can't make those fast turns that are so necessary. If we have to depend on our running game against Navy it won't be so nice for us. But on a dry field, this team should beat Navy or most any other club."

Bertelli's case is an interesting one. Rarely is it that a sophomore moves into a Notre Dame lineup with such success as the Italian lad. It may be a story analagous to Leahy's success with Charley O'Rourke at Boston College. At B. C. Leahy developed O'Rourke as a sophomore and built the Eagles' attack around him. Bertelli is evidently his choice for the same kind of a key player experiment.

Bertelli Has Enviable Record

Thus far, Bertelli has not displayed the versatile talents of O'Rourke, who ran the ball and kicked as well as passed, but Leahy may bring him out fully by next season. However, with Dippy Evans operating in the same backfield, Bertelli is not called upon to be a work-horse. His passing record is a beaut, with 40 completions in 71 attempts.

Notre Dame's football talent in late years is not measuring up, incidentally, to the type of a half dozen years ago. That is the estimation of Wayne Millner, who graduated from South Bend in 1936. "These kids are younger and not as big as the boys who went to school with me," said Millner. "Elmer Layden told me last year that Notre Dame's football players are coming younger every season, I don't know the answer, but that seems to be the case."

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Baltimore, Nov. 7.—The man who knows the most about the outcome of the Navy-Notre Dame game, to be played here tomorrow, is not one of the hundred scribes and pharisees who have come down here to see the meeting between two of the last major unbeaten teams. The boy in the know is this city's scholarly and bespectacled meteorologist, who thinks that a triple reverse is something you do in order to get into a parking place. But he knows what the weather is going to be tomorrow—and the weather is going to decide this one.

CONSIDINE

You can forget all that nonsense about Navy being the favorite. If the sun shines aggressively enough between now and the time of the kick-off, and does a job of parching on the spongy Municipal Stadium field, the Irish will rule a rather handy favorite to win. And probably will.

If the sun doesn't shine, and if we get more moisture, Navy will be favored to win. And probably will. For it has more wallop than the Army team which hobbled the Irish last week in the mud.

Notre Dame's team effectiveness drops off 50 per cent, at least, if it is deprived of its passing attack. Navy suffers comparatively little in the mud. It is a power team with a minimum of hocus pocus. Its second team is just about as good as its first. Swede Larson can dip down into the third and fourth team and come up with good, strong replacements.

Surprisingly enough, Notre Dame hasn't got that kind of reserve power. Its second line is good enough, in fact it is as good as the first line. But its second backfield is far from outstanding. Its third backfield is non-existent. It has been winning this season because Elmer Layden willed Angelo Bertelli, a lanky sophomore, to Frank Leahy and Leahy built a number of plays around this kid that utilizes his splendid passing ability to the limit. The weather, up until last Saturday, was all in Bertelli's favor.

Bertelli Well Protected

We don't know of any great passing back, including Sammy Baugh, who gets better protection that Bertelli. His completion of 40 passes out of 71, up to the Army game, is proof enough of that fact. Even his center, Ziembra, helps protect Angelo. He looks like a cross between Baugh and Leahy's great Boston College passer, O'Rourke. He throws them hard and low and you can hear them hit the receivers with bass-drum thumps.

That is, he does these things when he has the right kind of ball to throw. Last Saturday in that vile goo which was called the Yankee Stadium he threw the ball ten times, completed only three of the pitches, and Notre Dame gained only 10 yards through the air. He was pushing the heavy ball away from him, instead of slinging it. And he'll be doing just that again without a dry ball to throw tomorrow.

The field here, from all reports, may be bad no matter how brightly the sun shines. The authorities had it sodded not long ago, but what with one thing and another the grass has yet to find an anchor. The underfooting is consequently bad, which is bad news for Moon Evans and Steve Juzwick, and the ball is inclined to be heavy, even under so-called good conditions, which isn't encouraging for Bertelli.

Leahy said today in Washington that he wondered how the wall he builds around his passing sophomore will stand up under the battering charges of 6-foot-3 250-pound Gene Flathman and 6-foot-1 220-pound Bill Chewning, Navy tackles. They're the biggest and strongest tackles Notre Dame has faced this year, and will prove tough for even the elongated Bertelli to pass over.

Navy Relies on Power

Notre Dame doesn't expect much in the way of fancy stuff from the Midshipmen. The Irish seem to know which way Barnacle Bill Busik always runs and how the Navy plays unfold. The one Midshipman they seem to have failed to tag is Sam Boothe, Swede Larsen's southpaw passer. Navy, on the other hand, has great respect for Leahy's spread plays. The tars got in their customary drill against Bertelli's type of passing during this week of arduous training, but it was noticed yesterday that the boys put on their dirty weather clothes and concentrated on stopping Notre Dame's spread-formation running plays—which may or may not indicate that Navy has an inside tip on the Saturday weather.

The Navy-Notre Dame series has been a keen one, but none of the games in the vivalry created more comment than last year's clash. Trailing in the final quarter, Notre Dame marched 78 yards in ten plays, and Bob Saggau put the ball over the line for victory. But en route the Irish were aided by Referee J. R. Trimble, who got mixed up while pacing off a penalty against Navy, for holding, and gave the Irish nine yards too many and a vital first down on the Navy 2[illegible]

Notre Dame Slight Choice Over Navy

G. U. Heavy Choice Over Terps Today At Stadium

Hoyas Picked by Four Or Five Touchdowns Over Courageous but Outweighed Foes

By Jack Munhall

Georgetown, its football star ever in ascendancy, and Maryland, its gridiron strength quickly ebbing away, meet at 2 p. m. today at Griffith Stadium in a game highly significant of the divergent gridiron trends of the long-time bitter athletic rivals.

This is the last game scheduled between these neighboring foes whose 12 games since 1899 have produced many a thrill and drama and even tragedy. Time was when a Georgetown-Maryland football game was a local classic, with both teams and students worked up to a white-hot pitch of excitement. The zenith of this boundless spirit was reached at College Park in 1939 when the crowd rioted after the game in mass fighting over the goal posts.

How different is the picture for today. There has been seen little evidence of fanatical spirit on the part of either the players or the fans and if there are 10,000 witnesses to today's game, officials will consider it a success.

Not in Class

The brutal truth of it is that Maryland is not in Georgetown's football class and has not been for three years. That is the unofficial explanation of why their football teams are not scheduled to meet next year. That, too, is the biggest reason why a pall of apathy shrouds today's game which Georgetown figures to win by four or five touchdowns.

On the one hand is a Georgetown squad, potentially one of the best in the East, despite three defeats. It is an unpredictable team, but yet a team that is capable of extending the best as was proved against Temple and Boston College. The Hoyas are big and tough. They average more than 200 pounds in the line and about 185 in the backfield.

On the other hand is a Maryland squad whose chief claim to gridiron fame is its courage, so splendidly displayed several weeks ago when it bounced off the floor from a 50-0 shellacking by Duke and smote down heavily favored Florida, 13-13, on a last-minute long pass. The Terrapins will give away something like 15 pounds to a man in the line. This handicap alone appears too great to be overcome by the Old Liners, who for three years have been murdered by every big-time eleven they've met.

Maryland's lone and woefully inadequate offensive weapon is an accurate short passing game, led by a sophomore, Fullback Jack Wright, who, if he were given any

G. U. Frosh Star Ran Wild Yesterday, but Not on This Play

Ironically, The Post photographer caught Charley Miller, Georgetown halfback star, on one of the few plunges on which he failed to gain yesterday as his team trounced Maryland's frosh, 18-0. This play was in the fourth quarter and Miller is being held for no gain. Earlier he had run 70 and 30 yards for touchdowns

Pappy Nears Hunter Title At Garden

By Anne Hagner

Post Staff Writer

Madison Square Garden, New York, Nov. 7.—That the 3-year-old champion of Virginia also will be the young hunter champion of the United States became the National Horse Show's best bet of the day as Mrs. E. Douglas Prime's Pappy, of Warrenton, took the green young hunters' outing to earn 5 points for the title which will be awarded Wednesday, the final day of the show at Madison Square Garden.

Although this event was the first one to count toward the juvenile tricolor, Pappy already has won the lightweight green and placed second in the 3-year-old lead-in class. Alex Calvert, who broke the youngster and rode him to the Old Dominion championship in September for J. North Fletcher, is still handling Pappy for his new owner. Mrs. Prime's Irish importation, Ballsbridge, was third in the same class behind Morton Smith's Ace High.

Trained at Beau Val

Second major Virginia victory of the day came when Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh's Big Boy went with eye-catching brilliance in the middleweight hunters' event to have a perfect score over the National's most difficult assignment, course K, with 12 stiff 4-foot fences. Sue Bolling rode the big brown hunter jumper.

Oddly enough, the other three ribbons went to a trio of horses that received their early training on the same grounds—Mr. and Mrs. W.

Young Hoyas Defeat Terp Frosh, 18-0

Pass interceptions proved the downfall of Maryland's frosh eleven yesterday as it bowed to Georgetown's yearlings, 18 to 0, before about 1500 fans in the first game ever played on the Hilltop's new athletic field. The G. U. frosh, having beaten George Washington's freshmen, now are unofficial freshmen champions of the city.

The game was much closer than the score indicates, with the Hoyas getting all three of their touchdowns as the result of errant Maryland passes. In all, the Hoyas intercepted five throws, while Maryland plucked three bad Georgetown heaves from the air.

Star of the Georgetown attack, as usual, was stocky Charley Miller, whose brother, Steve, was a star fullback at Notre Dame a few years ago. Miller electrified the crowd by sprinting 70 yards to a first period touchdown on an intercepted pass, and then he circled right end for 30 yards and another tally in the second period after a pass interception by Robustelli, a Georgetown lineman.

The Hoyas' third marker was carried across in the second period by Al Kowalski, their ace center, who intercepted an enemy aerial and raced 45 yards, with Haggerty's blocking again a big feature. On this play Haggerty cut down Ed Dove, Maryland defensive halfback, and the only player who had a chance of stopping Kowalski. On Miller's touchdown run Haggerty took out two men at a crucial time.

Pastor Gains 10-Round Nod Over Beckwith

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 7.—Cagey Bob Pastor dramatically ended the 17-fight winning streak of Booker Beckwith, 21-year-old son of a Negro preacher, in the Chicago stadium tonight by decisively outpointing him in ten savage rounds.

Pastor, a New York veteran of 56 battles, on the verge of being knocked out himself in the first round, came back to win the next nine by a vicious body attack. He began to pour misery into the youthful, Gary, Ind., Negro's body at the start of the second round and never let up.

In the fifth and sixth rounds Beckwith was virtually unable to defend himself or return a punch. Pastor dropped Beckwith with a short right to the chin in the sixth. When the young Negro got up at the count of nine he was unable to fight back. His face was beaten into a bloody smear in the remaining rounds.

The 27-year-old New Yorker used all the ring wizardry learned in two engagements with Joe Louis, world's champion, to master the terrific punching Beckwith. He leveled his punches to the body and when he found he had his opponent in distress began driving into the chin.

Beckwith spotted Pastor 13½ pounds. He scaled 168½.

66,000 to Witness Traditional Clash At Baltimore Today

Irish Make One Change in Starting Line-Up; Bertelli, Evans Carry Hopes of Notre Dame While Middies Bank on Bill Busik, Their Ace

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Baltimore, Nov. 7.—Before 66,800 thrill-seekers who will swarm to the scene of the collision between Navy and Notre Dame tomorrow, the Irish from South Bend will take the field as a slight favorite to whip Navy's finest team since 1926.

The odds most frequently heard tonight in Eastern football circles quote Notre Dame as a 6 to 5 choice, since there has been assurance that the gridiron will be dry, if not fast. On what had threatened to be a wet field, Navy had previously been rated a slim favorite.

No Navy game in recent years had taken the weather into account as such, a vital factor in the outcome. Notre Dame, shackled by the mud last week and unable to score against Army, demands a dry field for its passing attack. Navy's offense, geared to its power plays, is better adapted to muck.

The Irish and the Midshipmen will be meeting in the college football's game of the week in the national picture. Into the discard, barring a tie tomorrow, will go the unbeaten records of one of the teams. The slates of Notre Dame and Navy are blemished thus far only by scoreless ties in which they have figured.

Against the background of powerful lines may be highlighted tomorrow an individual duel between the backfield prides of the Irish and the Navy—Angelo Bertelli and Barnacle Bill Busik. Frankly admitted by the Irish is that their hopes will be riding chiefly with the forward passing of Bertelli, the sophomore back, who has completed 40 passes in 71 attempts.

Busik Is Answer

Navy's answer to the threat of Bertelli is Busik, multitalented pride of Swede Larson's three-year coaching regime at Annapolis. Busik will be throwing, kicking and running the ball for the Middies in those first and third periods when he is in the lineup.

Baltimore tonight qualifies as the Nation's football capital with hotels clogged with pregame visitors from near and far, and late comers at the mercy of the ticket scalpers. The big municipal stadium's 66,800 seats were sold out two weeks ago and professional ticket brokers for the past few days have been brazenly asking $25 per pair for the cheapest $1.10 seats.

The Baltimore Park Board, with a nod of agreement from the weather man, promises a dry field tomorrow despite a resodding process that was not completed until today. Yesterday's rains forced a two-hour halt in the resodding of the gridiron between the two 25-yard lines but the sod was laid in large carpets and today's winds have been helpful in assuring a good footing.

Navy will be seeking its first victory over Notre Dame in six

Notre Dame Limbers Up At Ball Park

Coach Frank Leahy put the Notre Dame football squad through its usual pre-Navy routine here yesterday in much the same fashion as his Washington visit as tackle for the Irish in 1929.

The 33-year-old coach of the unbeaten Irish faced his first big test as a starting tackle in the '29 game, one of the eight games the late Knut Rockne missed that year with an inflammation of the leg.

The Notre Dame entourage of 35 players and 17 additional party members arrived here at 8:40 yesterday morning and as usual went right to Holy Cross College, on the C. U. campus, for mass and breakfast.

A short sightseeing trip occupied the time until lunch at the Wardman Park Hotel and they went to Griffith Stadium for a 90-minute workout starting at 2 p. m.

Stadium gates were closed to the public and only a small party of newspapermen and alumni watched the pregame drill.

Leahy put the squad through a short dummy scrimmage following the usual limbering up exercises and then followed with a passing drill with Angelo Bertelli and Dippy Evans alternating as the passer. A checkup of offensive and defensive assignments concluded the afternoon session.

The team will leave this morning at 11 o'clock for Baltimore and have lunch on the train. They will go to Annapolis after the game for dinner with the Midshipmen and leave for South Bend tomorrow night at 10:30. The students, who this year picked the Navy game as the trip of the year, will arrive in Baltimore this morning with the 100-piece band.

G. W. Battles Furman Today; Carolinians 8-5 Favorites

Special Dispatch to The Post

Greenville, S. C., Nov. 7.—George Washington University's football squad takes the field against Furman University tomorrow, seeking its first Southern Conference victory. Furman is favored over the Colonials here by as much as 3 to 5, but the feeling persists that George Washington was improved in the Clemson contest and may play its best game of the season tomorrow.

Clemson, located only 30 miles away, is highly respected here, and the Colonials' feat of out-first-downing the Tigers by 6 to 4 last week has given G. W. some support. Those who favor Furman, and they are naturally in the large majority, need only to point to George Washington's scoreless record the past five weeks to bolster the opinion that Furman will win if she scores.

The Colonials will be in better shape for this game than in three weeks. Hank Agusiewicz, star guard, and Paul Nugert, senior fullback and blocking back, will be ready for some action although they will not start Del Vicciio, end, who suffered a shoulder separation in the William and Mary game is improving and may see some service.

In-Again-Out-Again Donelli Back at Duquesne

Says He's Severed All Ties With Steelers; But Has He Really?

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Nov. 7.—"Buff" Donelli, the quick-change artist of the coaching profession this season, rejoined his first football love—Duquesne University—today, but confusion still prevailed.

Donelli stepped off a United Airlines plane after a cross-country dash starting in Pittsburgh last night and reiterated he had severed all connections with the National Professional League Steelers "unless different arrangements are made next week."

He emphasized he was joining Duquesne as director of athletics, but would act as adviser to Coach Steve Sinko for the game here Sunday with St. Mary's College. Donelli relinquished the head-coach berth when he took over the membership of the professional team in Pittsburgh five weeks ago.

Donelli's decision to fly west came as a surprise since he canceled one trip yesterday due to bad weather. He resigned as Steelers' coach after Elmer Layden, league commissioner, ruled

Wilson at Roosevelt, November 14, 3:15.
Central at Western, November 14, 3:15.

Though outplayed by a desperate Woodrow Wilson eleven, Anacostia High's gridmen clinched a place in the Thanksgiving Day playoff for public high football honors yesterday when it held the Tigers to a 0-0 deadlock at Wilson Stadium.

In taking the first eastern division interhigh title in their history the Indians were forced to fight off determined Tiger threats from start to finish. And they were more than pleased at the final outcome.

For Wilson it was a bitter end to its finest performance of the season. With Veterans Charley Voigt and Phil Funk in the line-up for their first full game, the Tigers were easily the best team on the field yesterday.

Voigt's return after six weeks of work to become scholastically eligible was celebrated with the best ball-carrying of the game. Funk, from his end post, shone on the defense, at one time blasting through the Indian line to pin Albie Drecksler on his own 2-yard stripe.

Voigt Breaks Loose

It was Voigt who registered the Tigers' pair of first downs in the first half. Clever dashes of 10 and 17 yards brought Wilson fans to their feet as the Tigers cavorted on Anacostia's half of the field. They went for nothing, however, and Dick Schwab stepped in to kick farther into Indian territory.

The start of the second half saw Voigt and Carl Saine alternate with the carrying job from Wilson's 30 to the Anacostia 25, but it was then that Drecksler intercepted Schwab's pass on the 5 and the drive was over.

Again Wilson came on to the Indian 19. At that point their end-around with Charley Hardison toting the ball, however, was scuttled for a 5-yard loss by John Penn. Again Anacostia took over.

Anacostia's solitary star was Paul Blaine, its smart little quarterback, who played the whole game. He handled all the kicking and passing for the team which replaces Tech as eastern champ, giving them an even break in those departments, despite the poor showiny of his mates in others.

Little Hoyas Win Over Coolidge, 19-0

After three straight beatings, Georgetown Prep gridmen finally found their way into the victory column yesterday when they smashed Calvin Coolidge, 19-0, at Garrett Park.

The Little Hoyas pushed over two touchdowns in the second period and there was no doubt of the outcome thereafter. Coolidge's most serious threat got only to the Prep's 25-yard line in the final period.

Ray Scheider hit the line for 2 yards to start the winners' scoring, after which the Miller brothers, Ed and Don, duplicated the performance. In three tries for extra points Noonan made good on only one from placement.

interference, would be as sweet a line crasher as you'd care to meet on the gridiron sod.

Much emphasis has been placed on this Maryland passing attack which has rolled up 700-odd yards in six games and compiled a completion percentage of over .500. Yet the chances are that, unless the Maryland line can draw on some heretofore invisible power, Georgetown's huge Hoyas will knock these star Maryland passers kicking before they are able even to release the ball.

Georgetown, improving each week after that V. P. I. debacle, should be ready today for its crowning achievement of the season. For three years the Hoyas have had little incentive, lest it be pride for whipping Maryland. This time, it's different. Georgetown will be all out in an effort to start a winning streak that will turn a so far poor season into a fair one. After Maryland come North Carolina State, Manhattan and Xavier. Georgetown will be favored to win all four of these games and is determined to do so.

Both teams are in fine shape for today's game. Georgetown's sophomore fullback, Joe Gyorgydeak, is the only player for either team not likely to see action. Gyorgydeak suffers an ankle injury sustained in the Boston College game two weeks ago.

In his place today will be Frank McLaughlin, a fine looking sophomore of last year who has been bothered all season by injuries, but who will be ready for this one.

Miami Downs W.V. Wesleyan

By the United Press

Miami, Fla., Nov. 7.—The undefeated, untied Hurricanes of the University of Miami tonight defeated West Virginia Wesleyan, 34 to 0, before 20,000 fans in the Orange Bowl.

Miami scored almost at will, tallying two touchdowns in the first period, and one in each of the remaining quarters. A reverse play set up the first two scores.

The longest run of the game was made when Earl Sapp, reserve Miami guard, romped 60 yards to score in the second period after intercepting Paul Glod's pass. A fumble and a sustained drive of 83 yards led to the final two scores.

Miami rolled up 16 first downs to 3 for the West Virginians.

Tie Leaves Central And Western Even In Fight for Title

The downtrodden football forces of Roosevelt High again proved they have Central's "number" yesterday when they fought the Vikings to a 14-14 deadlock despite overwhelming odds against them. Last year the Riders defeated Central for the first time in 20 years.

As yesterday's game neared its close it was a case of Central holding Roosevelt, and had it not been for two successive 15-yard penalties against the Rough Riders in the final minute of play, Carl Sturges, a passing sensation, might have led his mates to victory.

The tie left Central deadlocked with Western, also undefeated in interhigh competition, for the western division interhigh crown. Next week's Central-Western clash will decide the sectional champion.

Central started off as if in the process of making a runaway of the contest, three men nailing Roosevelt's Bill Garner in his own end zone on the first play of the game from scrimmage after a bad pass from center. Roosevelt stopped one march on its 21, but the Vikings soon came smashing back with another 73-yard drive that ended in a touchdown. The score came as Mike Denikos, cutting diagonally across the Rider secondary, took a pass from Horton in full stride and then sprinted 35 yards to the goal line. Samperton's conversion attempt was wide and Central led, 8 to 0.

Then young Mr. Sturges started pitching 'em, and Roosevelt marched the Viking kickoff right back to a touchdown.

When a 19-yard run by Teammate Irvin Lust ended in a 15-yard penalty instead, it only seemed to fire the spirited little Rider back, whose record for the day was 19 passes and 12 completions. With the ball on Central's 37, Roosevelt pulled the game's prettiest play to set up a touchdown.

Throws Perfect Pass

Sturges bullet-passed to Kolker on the 35, and Kolker lateraled back immediately to Lust, who raced to the Viking 8 before being downed. On the next play Sturges calmly tossed to Lust, who took the ball on the 2 and stepped over. Sturges kicked the point.

Late in the third period Central started another march from Roosevelt's 40. This culminated on the second play of the fourth quarter. Denikos started as if to attempt a run around left end from the 13, stopped suddenly and passed the ball to Jim Kurz, standing alone in the end zone. Samperton's placement was again wide.

The final period was half over before the Riders got moving again. But when they did start, they ate up 90 yards in three plays. The march began after Ward had punted out of bounds on the Roosevelt 10-yard line. Sturges hit the line to the 13. Then he faded back and threw a pass to Capt. Dick Koester, who was downed on the 27.

Roosevelt came out of its next hurdle in a spread formation. Sturges took the ball and tossed a perfect pass to Bill Garner, who took it over his shoulder at midfield and outdistanced all pursuit in his touchdown romp.

Friends Wins In Six-Man Football, 48-13

Avenging a 20-14 beating by Brooklyn Friends last year, Sidwell-Friends' 6-man grid team yesterday romped over their New York foes, 48-13, on the Wisconsin Avenue field.

The deluge started on one of the first plays of the game when Cotton Smith hurled 50 yards to Bushmyer from his own 15. Two plays later, Smith hurled to Bushmyer again for the score.

Carroll Smith proved the scoring star of the day with three touchdowns. He also turned in an outstanding defensive game. Single 6-pointers were also registered for the winners by McCuen, Bowie and Loos.

Redskins-Dodgers, Giants-Lions in Clashes Having Important Bearing in Standings

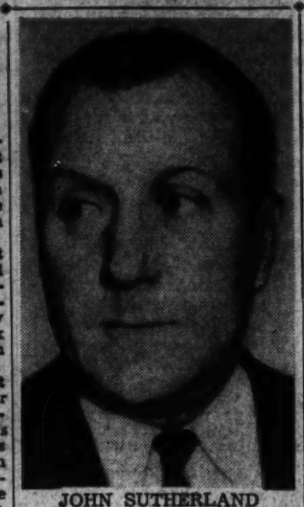
Washington Club Under the Least Pressure Tomorrow

The Redskins, Giants and Dodgers will all have vastly different mental attitudes toward tomorrow's National Pro League cofeatures in New York games which all three figure they must win to remain in title contention.

The Redskins are under the least pressure. They are the new and unexpected leaders of the Eastern Division and with the Chicago Bears, Giants and Green Bay Packers coming up they must look on the Dodgers as the softest touch of the four.

The Dodgers will be the softest touch on paper only, however, for this is the climax game of the season for Coach Jock Sutherland's club. The Dodgers were rated as almost even-money choices to gain the playoff in early season predictions, but out of a clear sky the Redskins, Packers and Chicago Cardinals dealt them three successive defeats and now it's do or die. A defeat will leave them definitely out of the running.

The Monday morning quarterbacks who said the training schedule of the Giants was too much are now boasting. The Giants, too, hit a sudden slump and have lost to the Dodgers and Cardinals the last two Sundays. They're supposed to be on the downgrade and the Detroit Lions are primed to pull an upset which would be the brightest spot of sub-.500 percentage to date.



JOHN SUTHERLAND

If the Redskins and Lions win tomorrow it will be a rosy picture for Coach Ray Flaherty's crew. They could lose to both the Bears and Packers and still win the Eastern title by beating the Giants and Eagles.

Defeat for Brooklyn Will Knock Club Out Of Eastern Race

The Redskins face the Dodgers in the best mood of the season. For the first time last Sunday the dressing room looked like that of a winning team. They were boisterous and generous with congratulations in contrast to the rather doleful manner in which they had been taking the three and four point victories of the four preceding weeks.

Even the various injuries did not have any noticeable affect and through the practice sessions this week they have shown a new zip. They are looking on and off the field like potential Eastern champions.

Joe Beinor, the new tackle acquisition, reported for practice yesterday morning and after the Griffith Stadium workout retired to the Fairfax Hotel for an afternoon session with the Redskin plays. He may be needed Sunday and wants to be ready.

Bill Young may be ready for action in a pleasant surprise to Coach Flaherty, but Ed Justice seems definitely out until the Bear game.

The team will report at 9:30 this morning for a light workout and will take the 4 o'clock train to New York. They have a chalk talk scheduled tonight at the Warwick Hotel.

Landon Bows To St. Albans Eleven, 6 to 0

St. Albans' eleven settled the local private school issue and gained the lead in the inter-State Academic Conference yesterday with a 6-to-0 victory over Landon Prep at St. Albans' field.

Halfback Earl Elliott, who was throwing strikes all afternoon, set up the lone score of the day in the second quarter. Fullback Bozie Laws turned the trick by bulling his way through center for 1 yard.

The first three minutes of the game unveiled a powerful Landon eleven, which rolled up 53 yards including three first downs, immediately after receiving the opening kickoff. But the Saints' defense still not settled, soon tightened up and remained that way throughout the rest of the game, holding Landon to a total of seven first downs for the afternoon.

From the Landon 19-yard line, Elliott threw a 15-yard pass to Left End Jim Trimble, who made a one-hand catch to launch the winning drive. Fullback Bobby Bondy was only able to gain 3 yards through center and was injured on his second attempt. Laws, who replaced Bondy, took the ball over on the next play. Lee Carter's dropkick was short.

The longest gain of the day was made by Landon on the next kickoff. Johnny Sager caught the short kick and began running toward his own goal. He was met by Charlie Cady, who took the ball and continued up the field for about 15 yards and, when about to be tackled, lateraled the ball to Ted Brawner. Brawner, behind excellent interference, continued up the side lines for 35 yards, a total of 50 yards.

Emily McWilliams, of Chi Sigma, rolled a high 138 individual game and her team bowled a 528 high team game and a 1451 high team set. June Roschlett, of Beta No. 1, had the match's high individual set of 322.

Fishing Out In Farmville Section Lakes

By the Associated Press

Farmville, Va., Nov. 7.—Hunter W. Garth, district State forester, has announced that all lakes in the three State forests in this section would be closed for fishing November 15 and remain closed until next June 15 for restocking purposes.

The lakes are Bear Creek and Winston in Cumberland Forest, Holiday in Buckingham and Appomattox, and Goodwyn in Prince Edward.

Garth said G. W. Buller, of Richmond, superintendent of fish propagation for the State game commission, had started the restocking by putting large bream and crappie and some big bass in Holiday Lake.

"Only Holiday Lake and Bear Creek will be restocked with bass," Garth said, "and bream and crappie will also be placed in these two lakes.

"Winston Lake, in Cumberland, which has been dry, has been cleaned out and is now nearly refilled with water. It will be stocked with bream and crappie. Goodwyn Lake, in which no fishing was permitted last year, will be stocked with bream and crappie and opened for fishing June 15."

W.-L. Eleven Faces McKee Of N. Y. Today

With the Eastern-Tech game at Central Stadium robbed of most of its importance by yesterday's interhigh results, schoolboy football interest today switches to Arlington, where the forces of Washington-Lee High face the threat of McKee Vocational School, of Staten Island, N. Y. Game time in both cases is 2 p. m.

The Little Generals will be up against a "weighty" problem in more ways than one. Besides an excellent record, McKee boasts one of the weightiest teams to appear here this year. In the tackle slot alone McKee has six men weighing upward of 195 pounds. Star back, however, is 139-pound Edward Bray, a shifty runner and brilliant pass catcher.

Both Eastern and Tech will be playing their last interhigh games of the year today. Neither has a chance to cop the eastern division title since Anacostia clinched that item in a 0-0 game with Wilson. The game, however, will give both clubs a chance to save something out of a disastrous season. Hostilities should be bitter, to say the least.

Purples, Cadets End Drills

Starting backfield for Gonzaga will probably be Elmer Raba, Reds Murphy, Ronny Waldron and Bernie Nolan against the Cadets' Tom Chisari, Buddy Spiess, Harold Krug and Steve Byrns.

Donelli Is Again Back at Duquesne

he could not rejoin Duquesne on the West Coast and retain the pro job.

The Duquesne squad and Donelli arrived a few hours apart. The Dukes, somewhat train weary, got an hour's workout shortly after arrival. Donelli joined the squad for a longer practice this afternoon.

Another drill will be held tomorrow and the squad plans to take in the Washington-California game at Berkeley in the afternoon.

Haggin Perry's Beau Val Farm, in Virginia. Weather Permitting, now owned by Mr. and Mrs. Allan Ryan, jr., was second, with Mrs. Perry's Hydrogyro third, and another Beau Val alumnus, Lucy Kaufman's Demopolis, fourth.

Dunnottar Pony Farm entries, also from Warrenton, established themselves as tops among show ponies of the Nation as they won two out of three classes today. In the afternoon session, young Jimmy Hamilton rode his Gray Knight, considered by many as the finest pony mount in the country, to victory in the small division shown under saddle, and Peppy Hamilton started off the evening performance by taking the hour-long pony open jumping event over 3½-foot fences.

The little jumpers turned out to be the hit of the show as 10,000 spectators cheered them on at every fence. Unhappily for the Dunnottar hopes, Gray Knight ran out at the fourth fence and tiny Jiminy Cricket, the 2-year-old sensation of the farm, scored two knockdowns in the third jump-off.

Payne Spilled

Additional unfortunate occurrences came when Jack Lee Payne, riding Mr. and Mrs. Greenhalgh's new purchase, Patsy, had a nasty spill after a clean round and sent him flying into the tanbark. He was not hurt, however, and at least had the satisfaction of placing second to Gray Knight in the saddle class earlier in the day.

Second in the jumping was Betty Stettinius, daughter of OPM executive Edward Stetinius, mounted on her roan pony, Juniper.

Biggest surprise of the half-pinters' events came when Francis Gibbs, riding his 1940 open jumper champion of the National, Little Squire, entered the jump-off among the large ponies over 3-foot fences and spilled when his little power house made a particularly big leap. He was uninjured, but was eliminated from further jumping.

Smacko Triumphs

In the battle for the international low score challenge trophy, Maj. Charles B. McClelland's Smacko, now being loaned to the United States team, was one of the heroes of the evening as he combined with Democrat in the pairs of jumpers to score 5½ faults, winning the blue for the evening.

However, the total score of the United States and Peruvian foursomes went into a tie with 34½ faults each in the aggregate score carried over from last night, so each team selected two horses to jump individually and both Smacko, with Maj. Henri Luebbermann up, and Democrat, ridden by Capt. Frank Wing, turned in faultless performances. As a result, the Fort Riley representatives also won the big challenge bowl over the Peruvian delegation. It was their first victory since 1935.

Although he probably is the least spectacular open jumper ever to makes the big leagues, F. H. Taylor, jr.'s, Birdwood Hazard, from Watertown, N. Y., proved himself one of the most consistent horses in the Garden as he won his second blue ribbon—this one a blue in the third phase of the knockdown-and-out competition—in the last class on the card.

D. C. Horses Miss

Two Washington-owned horses, Lieut. and Mrs. Fred Hughes, jr.'s, Hi-Ho and Margaret Cotter's Rocksie, proceeded into the last two jump-offs, but Hi-Ho rushed too rapidly into a double over to score a knockdown, and in the next flight Rocksie toppled the first pole of the triple in-and-out, thus placing third behind Birdwood Hazard and Mrs. E. A. Anderson's Our Mr. Jorrocks.

Fourth was Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Conway's Burma, who a few minutes earlier became the pet of the crowd when he made a tremendous leap over a triple-bar fence that nearly unseated rider Dan Conway, jr., from Oswego, N. Y.

During his attempt to retain his balance, Conway had inadvertently allowed Burma to circle, which results elimination in accordance with horseshow regulations, so that the judges received a tremendous round of booing and cries of "Throw them bums out" from the galleries. The ruling held and Burma was awarded fourth place.

Nation's Grid Leaders Are Favored to Escape Defeat Today

Gophers, Sans Smith, Still Choice Over Nebraska; Pitt No Match for Rams

By Bill Boni
Associated Press Sports Writer

Baltimore, Nov. 7—Tack a football frenzy onto a national defense boom, and you have a picture—a very confused picture, if it is to be a true one—of the city of Baltimore on the eve of the Navy-Notre Dame football game.

A statistician figured out the other day that defense industries have brought a quarter of a million people into this city in recent months. Tomorrow the fifteenth meeting of the midshipmen and the Irish each this time undefeated though once tied, will pack 66,000 people into Municipal Stadium, and fully half of those will be from out of town.

Adding to the clamor is the fact that Navy, for once, is the favorite. The Sailors have beaten Notre Dame three times during their series, but on each of those occasions their victories were considered upsets. They're not given much of an edge for tomorrow, but get what little there is.

Into action with the Middies and the Irish go two other major undefeated but tied elevens (Army and Mississippi State), and the six all-winning elevens (Texas, Minnesota, Fordham, Duke, Texas A. and M. and Duquesne). This corner tabs all of them to come through with Navy, for the following possibly misguided reasons (home team first, probable attendance in parentheses):

Navy-Notre Dame (66,000)—Notre Dame needs a clear day for the passes of Sophomore Angelo Bertelli, and the weatherman's with them. But the Middies have two big, fast lines to disrupt Bertelli's protection, a powerful running game and for one of the few times in the series have a man-power edge. Navy.

Minnesota - Nebraska (40,000)—Even with Bruce Smith on crutches, the Gophers should be able to get by this one. Minnesota.

Baylor-Texas (14,000)—The Steers may try to match Texas A. and M.'s 48-0 count. Texas.

Pitt-Fordham (20,000)—Little hope for the Panthers' single backfield star, Special Delivery Jones, against the Rams' eight horsemen. Fordham.

Tulane-Alabama (45,000)—Keeping up with Tulane is like trying to maintain your balance on a seesaw. Out of a State of utter confusion, Tulane.

Southern California - Stanford (65,000)—In a conference where every other team has lost at least two games, the Indians look better and better. Stanford.

Harvard-Army (50,000)—Under Earl Blaik, Dartmouth always beat the Crimson. Now that Blaik's at West Point, he may have taken the charm with him, since Dartmouth didn't beat Harvard this year. Army.

Texas A. and M.-Southern Methodist (22,000)—The Mustangs were slaughtered so badly by Texas, there may not be much rebound in them. If there is, watch out—but still A. and M. is the choice.

Auburn-Mississippi State (16,000)—State may be heading for trouble, yet gets the nod.

Ohio State-Wisconsin (60,000)—On man power, Ohio State.

Cornell-Yale (16,000)—Another sad day for Eli, Cornell.

Northwestern-Indiana (30,000)—In the battle of the sophomores, Graham vs. Hillenbrand, Northwestern appears to have much more to back up its boy.

Louisiana State-Mississippi (25,000)—Ole Miss isn't the same team that lost to Georgetown in its opener. Mississippi.

Penn-Columbia (50,000)—Despite the Lions' upset of Cornell, picking better-manned Penn to bounce back from that loss to Navy.

Illinois-Iowa (25,000)—Iowa, with Bill Green probably leading the way.

California-Washington (45,000)—By the pin-sticking system, California.

Purdue-Michigan State (15,000)—Purdue.

New York U.-Missouri (15,000)—More trouble for the Violets. Missouri with ease.

Oklahoma-Iowa State (20,000)—The Sooners are Missouri's main Big Six threat, and this should be a soft touch for them. Oklahoma.

Georgia Tech-Kentucky (20,000)—Tech.

Rice-Arkansas (20,000)—Arkansas seems on the way up.

Florida-Georgia (22,000)—Sinkwich gives Georgia the nod.

Temple-Villanova (30,000)—Temple to boomerang from that Boston beating.

Here 'n' there elsewhere:

East—Boston College over Wake Forest, West Virginia over Kansas, Holy Cross over Brown, Manhattan over Boston U., Georgtown over Maryland, Rutgers over Lafaye e.

Midwest—Detroit over Marquette, Kansas State over South Carolina, Oklahoma A. and M. over St. Louis, Tulsa over North Dakota, Texas Tech over Creighton.

South—Texas Christian over Centenary, Vanderbilt over Sewanee, Tennessee over Howard, Furman over George Washington, North Carolina over Richmond, N. C. State over Virginia Military.

Far West and Rockies—Oregon State over U. C. L. A., Washington State over Idaho, Denver over Utah State, Duquesne over St. Mary's (Sunday), Oregon over Santa Clara (Tuesday).

Breaks Help Mounts Beat Upsala, 19 to 0

By the Associated Press

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 7.—Mount St. Mary's took advantage of the breaks to down the Upsala Vikings of East Orange, N. J., 19-0, tonight, avenging a defeat last year.

O'Connor, Mount left tackle, recovered a Viking fumble after only two plays of the opening period for the first break. Upsala held, forging a punt, but the Mounts blocked Lynch's return kick and recovered on the 1-yard line. Byrnes plunged over for the score on the second try. Asip's kick failed.

The teams see-sawed then until the fourth period, when the Mounts shoved over two more touchdowns.

The first came on a 35-yard pass from Hall to Rogan, and late in the quarter Nycz, of the Mounts, intercepted a pass and raced 25 yards over the goal line.

Prep Back Claims 'Futility Record' After Long Jaunts

By the Associated Press

Bogalusa, La., Nov. 7.—Virgil Underwood, scat back of the Bogalusa Lumberjacks, who are strong contenders for the State prep championship, claims some sort of an "all for nothing" ground-gaining title.

He has run 245 yards for four touchdowns this season only to have them called back by officials for rule violations by teammates.

Despite this and although only a substitute, he has scored five touchdowns and an extra point. Had his other scores been allowed he would rank among the leaders for the State scoring title. His two longest runs of 85 yards each were ruled out.

Lewis Downs G.W. High, With Passes

By the Associated Press

Salem, Va., Nov. 7.—In a game permitting 1000 shivering fans to see 51 passes tossed, the Andrew Lewis eleven defeated George Washington High, of Alexandria, 19-6, tonight on the Roanoke College field.

Harold (Gob) Garrett led the Wolverines' offense as he scored two touchdowns and passed for another.

Big Buck Johnson, Lewis' defensive stalwart, took Garrett's toss for the other marker.

Leon Chisholm, a triple-threat man, was the standout in the George Washington secondary. Not only did he pass and kick, but the speedy back of Coach Al Dogan's eleven snagged the lone touchdown pass of the Presidents.

Making a determined bid for his second successive berth on the All-State eleven, Henry Grimm, a powerful 170-pound guard, was a standout in the Alexandria forward wall. Their center, S. W. Eason, played a bang-up defensive game, while Jack Beach was impressive on his flank.

Rudolph Wins, Ties Crane For Cue Title

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Nov. 7.—Edwin Rudolph, veteran Cleveland cue expert, and Irwin Crane, youthful Livonia, N. Y., player, tied for the 1941 world's pocket billiards championship in the playoff of a three-way tie here tonight.

Rudolph had defeated Willie Mosconi, Philadelphia, defending champion, in an afternoon match but Mosconi then turned back Crane. Tonight Crane won over Rudolph, 125-109, in 16 innings. Mosconi was eliminated on total points and Rudolph and Crane went into an extra playoff of 125 points to decide the new titleholder.

In the Crane-Rudolph playoff, the New Yorker ran 13 his first inning, while Rudolph collected 32 in his third to take a temporary lead. Play see-sawed from then on to the end of 12 innings when the count was deadlocked at 78-all.

Rudolph ran 19 in the thirteenth and Crane 9, Rudolph clustered 12 more in the fourteenth and Crane 22 before a safety to tie the totals again at 109. Crane caught a point in the fifteenth to a safety, then 15 and out in the sixteenth.

Fight Card Completed For Joe Turner's Show

Harkins Meets Furr in Top Bout Monday; Two 6-Round Fights and 2 Fours Also Carded

By Tony Neri

Local talent will be the vogue in Monday night's boxing show at Turner's Arena. The main event will find Phil Furr, Washington welterweight, facing Wicky Harkins, of New York, in a ten-rounder.

On the supporting card will be no less than seven District products. Here's the way the show will line-up:

Phil Furr vs. Wicky Harkins, welterweights, 10 rounds.

Ray Landis vs. Fred Fernando, lightweights, 6.

Carroll Alexander vs. Wayne Stewart, featherweights, 6.

Roscoe Perry vs. Tommy Hoover, lightweights, 4.

Jimmy Hill vs. Horace Jones, middleweights, 4.

Landis, Alexander, Stewart, Perry, Hoover, Hill, and Jones all are from the District. The opening four-rounder between Hill and Jones, a pair of colored boys, will mark the debut of both in professional ranks.

Furr needs no introduction to D. C. boxing fans. The veteran welterweight has been around since Custer made his first stand. But like good wine, Furr improves with age. In his last outing the old war horse defeated Al Franklin at Griffith Stadium.

Philbert, who has been training at the arena the past week, asserted yesterday that he was in the pink of condition. And his workouts bear that out.

Harkins boasts an outstanding record and will probably enter the ring a slight betting favorite. Among his victims are Jimmy Leto, Mayon Padlo, Yussell Goldstein and Vic Dellicurti. Harkins will drill at the aerna at 2 o'clock today.

Jack Laken is staging a Baltimore card Thursday night, November 13. Julie Kogan and Mike Evans will appear in the top spot with Bob Smith and Willie Reddish, a pair of heavies, fighting in the semiwindup. The Sugar Robinson-Marty Servo bout has been rescheduled for Tuesday, November 18, in Philadelphia. Looks like a heluva fight. They fought a close one in their first meeting with Robinson getting the nod by a shade. Claudio Villar, Spanish heavyweight who fought Lee Savold on the Blunt-Poland card, is now residing in Washington and will see action here soon.

Eagles Sign 3d American Born Player

Montreal, Canada, Nov. 7.—Coach Redvers Mackenzie laughed off superstition today when he selected Friday on which to sign the thirteenth player placed under contract by the Washington Eagles for the 1941-42 Eastern Amateur Hockey League season.

Odie Hallowell, a versatile center or winger and the third American-born player on the squad, is the newcomer. He was born in Portland, Me.; is 20 years of age, stands 5 feet 10 inches and weighs 165 pounds. Leith Dickie and Carl Howell, jr., alternate goalies, are the other Americans on the squad.

Hallowell, who had made Canada his home since early youth, played center for the LaChute, Quebec, pucksters of the Industrial League last season. He has been working out with the Eagles within the past ten days and is shaping up as a good prospect.

Mackenzie today predicted that he will have rounded out his full representation of 15 players over the week-end. One of his forwards will be selected from several boys working out here. Another is expected to arrive here from western Canada sometime tomorrow.

The Eagles' skipper today was arranging passports for his players, and intends breaking camp here and returning to Washington on Monday or Tuesday of next week prior to the opening of the Eastern League season against the newly organized Johnstown, Pa., team in Johnstown next Saturday and Sunday. A majority of the Eagles will return to Washington via train, but others will drive through with Mackenzie and Defenseman Len Burrage.

G.B.C. Grid Teams To Be Busy Today

The Georgetown Boys Club teams face a busy day today as three elevens see action. The 135-pounders will meet the Alexander B. C. at 11 o'clock; the 120-pounders will follow against the Police Boys No. 10; and the 135-pounders will engage the Eastern Branch team of the Boys Club at 3 p. m.

The 120 and 135 pound teams are unbeaten and unscored on, while the 135-pound club can clinch Boys Club honors with victory today. All games are scheduled for the Monument Grounds.

Incoming Captures Sagamore Handicap at Pimlico Course

Foul Claim By McCombs Disallowed

Trelawny Finishes Second, First of All Is Third; Flaught, Choice, Disappoints

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, Baltimore, Md., Nov. 7.—The Baltimore colors of Sidney S. Zell were carried to victory in the fifth running of the $2500 added Sagamore Handicap. Incoming, a 2-year-old son of Ladysman and Fob, won the 6-furling sprint, but the triumph was not official until Jockey Henri Mora won a word battle after a claim of foul. Jockey Ken McCombs registered the objection, contending that Incoming carried Trelawny out entering the stretch. However, as the race was run, almost any jockey could have registered a foul claim against another.

Incoming won by two lengths, with Trelawny nosing First of All out of second money in a photo finish for that position. The big disappointment of the race was Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords' Flaught, the heavily played favorite, which finished last in the field of six. Incoming paid a $14.20 mutuel and was clocked in 1:15 3-5 over a heavy, holding racing surface.

Among those who had trouble in the sprint was Incoming. Jockey Mora, finding himself being squeezed for racing room going to the far turn, took up and sent his mount wide. Trelawny moved with him and it was entering the stretch that McCombs said the colt nudged his mount towards the outside.

The race was unique in that First of All, Flaught, Town Hall and Cassis each took command at some stage of the battle.

Incoming made it five victories in a dozen tries and picked up $3,095 in purse money to boost his earnings for the year to $7,120.

Those who invested in the "7 and 9" combination collected a $107.10 pay-off in the daily double. The first race brought a thrilling finish in which Mrs. C. W. Williams' Zostera got up in the final stride to head out High Bud. The latter was another head in advance of Moselem. Zostera, capably handled by Jockey Al Shelhamer, paid $6.

No Ending, owned by George Perry, Marlboro hotel proprietor, surprised the talent by taking the second race. The 6-year-old went to the front early and was not caught, leading Sunphantom and Dorothy Pomp to the wire. A field of a dozen competed in the test of a mile and a furlong. No Ending paid $19.70.

The Radcliffe Claiming Handicap, located sixth on the program, proved a romp for C. E. Nelson's Rodin. The Chance Shot gelding galloped to the wire five lengths in front of Inscolad and another half length in advance of R. C. Thatcher's Jamerica. To the disgust of his backers, Jacsteal failed to get going at any stage and finished far back. This 4-year-old was recently claimed from H. G. Bedwell after beating everything in sight. Today, Jacsteal stumbled and floundered in the heavy going and Jockey Ruperto Donoso failed to help the situation by sitting still most of the way.

DIZZY DAME was rated while in the first flight, wore down RUN BY to take command inside the sixteenth pole and barely failed to last. RUN BY took command when ENGLES CHARM stopped and weakened slightly in the final test. DOORBELL had sped in spots.

Selections at Pimlico

Dear Al:

Prospects for the Manly Steeplechase were brightened considerably with the arrival from the farm in Virginia of C. K. Bassett's Corrigan. This horse was retired for the season several weeks ago but Trainer W. G. Janes decided earlier in the week to bring him back for Monday's $5,000 added event and he was given a workout at the farm. The pari-mutuel average for the first seven days of the Pimlico meeting is $412,761, as compared with $353,545 for the same period last fall. Floyd Smock, acting for H. H. Price, purchased Back Tooth from E. R. Bradley and the 2-year-old daughter of Clock Tower and Bubblette will be shipped to Miami. Alfred Vanderbilt has decided to race a half-dozen horses at the Fair Grounds this winter and they will be placed under the direction of Anthony Pelleteri. J. L. Friedman, Baltimore patron, has given his horses to C. M. Feltner to train. In the group is Baruna, a possible starter in the Walden Stakes. Vanderbilt, who missed his first day of racing at Pimlico on Thursday since he's been president of the Maryland Jockey Club, was on hand to present the trophy to the winning owner in the Sagamore Handicap. He was confined to his home with a cold. Those who attended the annual dinner Thursday night of the Maryland Racing Writer's Association voted it the best yet given by the association. Brother Leeds Reilly was down from Charles Town. See you on the rail.—BILL.

First race—CREEPY MOUSE seems to have an edge on these routers. Gets in with an average weight assignment due to the apprentice allowance. MAECLOUD is partial to this track and will be right there. BUNNY BABY'S last was impressive.

Second race—DARBY DU is the best of this cheap lot. Appears capable of carrying the 120-pound package. STURDY DUKE, also heavily weighted, may offer the chief contention. HERE AGAIN should take a place in the money circle.

Third race—FLYING FALCON had a long lead when he fell last out. This one generally is a steady jumper and will win if he stays up. MILLRACE is a fair jumper and belongs close. FATTY can better that last considerably.

Fourth race—LADY TOURIST turned in a good effort last out and seems ready to emerge from the maiden ranks in this company. ARTHUR J. and DRESS BOOT have worked well and promise to be keen factors.

Fifth race—ICE WATER may awaken with a bang in this field. Likes the route and the track. BEST SELLER has done about everything asked but may be overweighted at 121 pounds. WESLEY A. has been racing over his head and gets in light.

Sixth race—FILISTEO set a record at a longer route last out and belongs on top of this field. SHOT PUT is as good as that ailing leg. If right, he will take it all. PAUL PRY to take care of the others.

Seventh race — SON ALTESSE had poor racing luck in that recent outing and promises to make amends in this company. BALA ORMONT and ARMY SONG seem to have something on the others in this distance affair.

Eighth race—STRAIGHT LEAD, AARON BURR and BILL FARNSWORTH is the way I prefer them in the day's finale.

Best bet—SON ALTESSE.

A Novel Way to Name Children—Coach Style

Cleveland, Nov. 7 (AP).—Coach Tom Welbaum's suburban Bedford High School football team lost a game to Mayfield, 14 to 6 today but the coach got a name for his baby son. It's "Jim."

Welbaum promised to name the child for the first of his players to score. Halfback Parks counted Bedford's only touchdown.

Peoples Drug Nets $629,463 In 9 Months

Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., and subsidiary corporations, yesterday reported net profit of $629,4663 in the first nine months this year, equivalent to $1.28 a share on common stock. This compares with $585,266 or $$1.19 a share in the corresponding 1940 period.

Net sales of $19,815,437 in the period compared with $16,999,272 during the like period last year, but sharply increased taxes and expenses took a large bite from revenues. Costs rose from $16,493,871 last year to $18,837,634 in the first nine months this year, while Federal income and excess profits taxes (estimated) were $453,818 this year against $184,521 in the first nine months last year.

Earned surplus as of September 30, 1941, stood at $4,264,652, as compared with $3,963,098 on the same 1940 date.

Total current assets were $6,227,082, against $5,498,219 last year while current liabilities were $2,158,325 against $1,808,961. Radio of current assets to current liabilities was $2.89 to $1 this year.

Total assets aggregated $9,735,503, against $8,720,663 at the end of September last year.

C. & P. to Spend $1,267,000

Expenditures, amounting to $1,267,000 for the construction of telephone plant and the installation of equipment in the District of Columbia were authorized by the directors of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. C. A. Robinson, vice president and general manager, reported yesterday.

Approximately $1,060,000 was authorized for the installation of additional equipment in several central offices in the city in order to take care of constantly increasing demands for telephone service.

A large portion of the amount authorized, nearly $194,000, will be spent to install private branch exchanges and associated equipment for several of the company's large business subscribers and for the Government where increased activity relating to the national defense program necessitates the provision of much-enlarged telephone facilities.

This brings to $12,700,000 the expenditures that have been appropriated for construction in the District this year.

Area Home Loans Gain

Savings and loan associations in the Winston-Salem Federal Home Loan Bank District scored a 10 per cent increase in home building loans made in the first eight months of 1941, compared with the same period of last year, it was reported yesterday by Horace S. Haworth, of High Point, N. C., and George W. West, of Atlanta, here for the semi-annual meeting of the Federal Savings and Loan Advisory Council.

Donald M. Nelson, director of the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board, and Charles F. Palmer, defense housing coordinator, discussed priorities and housing for defense workers with the council, which consists of representatives of each of the 12 regional banks of the Federal Home Loan Bank System and six members appointed by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

This gain in building loans in the district, embracing Maryland, the District of Columbia and six Southeastern States, was largely due to the activity of thrift institutions in financing homes for defense workers, Mr. Haworth and Mr. West said. Mr. Haworth is chairman of the board of the Winston-Salem Home Loan Bank, of which Mr. West is a member.

Missouri Pacific Board Opposes ICC Plan

New York, Nov. 7 (AP).—Directors of the Missouri Pacific Railroad have indorsed all-out opposition to a plan of reorganization which the Interstate Commerce Commission has invited interested parties to vote upon starting November 19.

At a special meeting, the directors named Marion B. Pierce, of New York, general counsel, indorsed Chairman of the Board J. S. Pyeatt's letters to 40,000 bondholders opposing the reorganization plan and directed the company's officers "to take all steps necessary to defeat the reorganization plan to the end that a fair and equitable plan may ultimately be adopted."

The directors also named Robert W. Atkins, Col. T. C. Davis, R. J. Morfa and Pierce to fill vacancies on the board. All are New Yorkers.

Week's Auto Output Remains at 93,585

Detroit, Nov. 7 (AP).—Passenger car and truck production this week was estimated today by Ward's Reports, Inc., at 93,585 units, maintaining a level expected to continue through November. Assemblies last week numbered 92,879; a year ago this week they totaled 123,448.

Ward's said that one of the bright spots in the current automotive picture is the volume of truck sales, both at the factories and at retail. There are indications, it was added, that this branch of the industry would progress for a long period ahead in high ground.

15 to 20% Rise In Living Costs Is 'Inevitable'

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Nov. 7.—An "inevitable" increase of 15 to 20 per cent in the cost of living next year was predicted today in a panel discussion at the annual midcontinent trust conference of the American Bankers' Association.

Economists and bankers in the discussion were in agreement, however, that with "economic statesmanship" on the part of the Government, inflation could be controlled without rigid price-fixing measures.

They concurred in saying that fiscal and economic controls, now within the power of the Government, could be applied in such a way as to be effective.

"Those in a position of authority do not refer to the experience and findings of previous post war periods," declared Dr. William A. Irwin, national educational director of the American Institute of Banking.

"They frequently resort not to experience but to acts of political expediency. Businessmen are being urged not to pursue 'business as usual.' . . . It is equally important that those in authority do not pursue politics as usual."

Steel in Corsets Would Make 25 Destroyers a Year

New York, Nov. 7 (AP).—Because steel is the prime requisite of armanents, these facts, gleaned today from the American Iron & Steel Institute, ought to be interesting:

American men throw away 3,000 tons of high grade steel annually. That represents used razor blades.

Those tiny staples at the base of match books? One company alone uses 50 tons of steel a year in their manufacture.

Paper clips account for 1,200 tons of steel yearly.

Ten 25-ton tanks could be made out of the steel which each year goes to hold up men's pants. That's the steel parts of suspenders.

As for women's corsets—they correspond to 25 destroyers a year on the basis of 1,000 tons of steel to a destroyer.

Campbell, of the Connecticut Light & Power Co., today announced a $16,804,400 financing program, calling for retirement of 68,044 shares of 5½ per cent $100 par preferred stock and the raising of ten million dollars to expand generating facilities at the Devon plant.

I. B. A. Assails 'Loopholes' In Securities Act

By the Associated Press

The Investment Bankers Association asked Congress yesterday to plug the "loopholes" which it said permitted private financing, which amounted to 43 per cent of the total of all offerings the first eight months this year, to escape registration requirements under the securities laws.

R. McLean Stewart, I. B. A. spokesman, told the House Interstate Commerce Committee it would be in the public interest to amend the 1933 Securities Act to require such transactions, as well as public offerings, to be registered with the Securities Exchange Commission.

He expressed the opinion that if such registration were required, a majority of the issuers now going the private route would turn to the public because, among other things, they could get slightly better prices.

Cites Capital Need

Private industry cannot operate on a sound basis unless it has private capital, Stewart testified.

He submitted tables to show that private financing from 1933 to 1940, inclusive, totaled $4,409,853,985, which was 23.11 per cent of the total dollar issue volume. The percentage rose to 43½ per cent the first eight months of 1941, he added.

Investment bankers frankly have a great interest in the trend to private sales, he said, but he expressed the opinion that the general public interest far transcended that.

The securities industry told the committee in a brief filed several months ago that the amendment to make all such issues above three million dollars subject to registration would in no way prevent insurance companies or other large institutions from purchasing issues directly from issuers.

Big Purchases Stressed

Stewart said that from 1934 to 1940, inclusive, 20 insurance companies bought directly a total of $3,125,679,000, with the largest purchasers being as follows:

Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., $860,879,000; Equitable Life Assurance Society, $590,456,000; Prudential Life Insurance Co., $555,586,000; New York Life Insurance Co., $207,267,000; John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co., $178,918,000; Mutual Life Insurance Co., $171,757,000.

ICC Authorizes Seaboard Issue

By the Associated Press

The Interstate Commerce Commission has authorized receivers of the Seaboard Airline Railway to issue and sell to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation $3,552,000 of equipment trust certificates in connection with the purchase of new equipment costing about $4,750,000.

The Seaboard proposes to purchase 13 Diesel locomotives and 750 freight cars.

The receivers said the Seaboard's present equipment was insufficient to enable the railway to handle, economically and efficiently, present and prospective traffic.

Narrower Limits on Commodity Moves Asked

Secretary of Agriculture Wickard yesterday requested the Nation's commodity futures markets to cut their daily price fluctuation limits on futures trading in grain and cotton to about half of their present levels.

Wickard said such a reduction was proposed "as a protective measure against price disturbances from wartime developments."

Messages to the markets asked an immediate reduction of daily fluctuation limits to 5 cents per bushel for all grains except soybeans and flaxseed. On the latter two products he requested a limit of 6 cents. The existing limit is 10 cents per bushel for wheat, rye, barley and flaxseed, 8 cents for corn and soybeans and 6 cents for oats.

The cotton futures markets were asked to reduce the maximum permissable daily price fluctation from 2 cents to 1 cent per pound.

Officials of the department's commodity exchange administration said that there had been no unusual price fluctuation in recent days, but that precautionary steps were being taken against any future war developments.

500,000 Newsboys to Sell Defense Stamps

The Treasury announced yesterday that with the cooperation of various newspaper publisher associations, defense savings stamps would be distributed to about 500,000 newspaper boys throughout the country for sale to the public.

The plan will be based, the Treasury said, on an experiment conducted by the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, whose newsboys sold 1,001,635 stamps in seven weeks, or about a third of all the stamps sold in Philadelphia during the trial period.

The plan includes a series of awards for newsboys. After a boy has sold 187 stamps, he will get a special pin. After selling 375 more stamps, he will get a silver bar to hang on the pin. When he sells an additional 750 stamps, he will get a gold bar to hang below the silver bar. After that, he will get more gold bars for every 750 stamps he sells.

The announcement did not say what denomination of stamps the boys would sell, but the 10 cent variety was used in the Philadelphia experiment. Defense stamps also are available from many retail stores and also most banks and postoffices in denominations of 25 and 50 cents and $1 and $5.

Power Curtailment in Southeast Postponed

The Office of Production Management yesterday postponed for one week the 30 per cent power consumption curtailment previously scheduled to go into effect November 10 in Southeastern States.

The States affected by the 30 per cent rule are Georgia, Tennessee, Alabama, eastern Mississippi, northwest Florida and southeastern South Carolina.

The 5 per cent reduction scheduled for North Carolina and the rest of South Carolina was postponed indefinitely. The delay was made possible, OPM announced, because of moderate to heavy rains relieving the power shortage, and increased power deliveries through the pooling of electricity among utilities.

"Immediate and willing cooperation by the public" with the "blackout" provisions of the order affecting nonessential and ornamental lighting also contributed to the improvement, the OPM reported.

However, the blackout on illuminated advertising, show windows, and other ornamental lighting will continue in effect in the entire area.

It may be possible, it was said, to postpone the curtailment for still another week, to November 24, if the present favorable conditions continue. However, large industrial and commercial users were asked to economize voluntarily on their consumption of energy.

Huge Ammunition Plant Goes Up in Record Time

The largest small-arms ammunition plant in the world is nearing completion in record time and actual production of war materials is expected to begin late this month or early in December in the St. Louis plant.

Original plans called for a comparatively small $12,200,000 plant, but it was expanded rapidly into a 100-million-dollar layout comprising nearly 100 buildings and covering an area of almost 300 acres.

The first shovel of dirt was turned January 24, but semiofficial quarters predict that the huge plant will be finished by next March 15, which was designated as the date of completion of the first smaller project.

The plant will be Government-owned but operated by the United States Cartridge Co., a subsidiary of Western Cartridge Co. Capacity output is a military secret.

The McQuay-Norris Manufacturing Co. has a new armor-piercing core plant on the grounds. Production in one of these units already is under way.

Makers of Metal Office Furniture Hit by Order

The Office of Production Management yesterday ordered manufacturers of metal office furniture to cut their use of steel by about 40 per cent under the average amount used monthly in the 12 months ended last June 30.

The order covers furniture production from September 1 to the end of the year, and will affect in varying degree some 70 to 75 makers of steel desks, chairs, safes and other office equipment.

Priorities director, Donald M. Nelson warned that "more drastic cuts . . . may be necessary later," but said they would be applied gradually to permit as many manufacturers as possible to substitute wood for steel.

The industry uses 300,000 tons of steel annually, and the new slashes, if continued for a year, would save 100,000 tons or so, OPM sources said.

Crude Petroleum Supplies Heavier in Week

The Bureau of Mines reported yesterday stocks of domestic and crude petroleum at the close of the week ended November 1 totaled 243,340,000 barrels, a net increase of 1,079,000 barrels, compared with the previous week. Stocks of domestic oil increased 892,000 barrels for the week and foreign crude increased 187,000 barrels.

Daily average production for the week was 4,071,000 barrels, a decrease of 28,000 barrels, compared with the previous week's level. Runs to stills averaged 4,080,000 barrels daily, compared with 4,060,000 barrels for the preceding week.

Soviet Credit Spurs Buying In Grain List

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 7.—Another spurt in soybean prices, which were up almost eight cents a bushel at one time, helped to carry wheat, rye and other grains into higher ground today.

It was the second time this week that soybeans have advanced sharply. On Wednesday there was an advance of 8 cents a bushel in all deliveries, the maximum permitted in one day. The rise today amounted to as much as 7½ cents for December contracts, carrying the price to $1.76, highest in a month. Buying was stimulated by wet weather with snow, which is seriously delaying harvest in some areas.

Wheat and rye were affected by granting of a billion dollar credit to Russia. Wheat rose more than a cent and rye almost 3 cents, hitting the highest levels in about two weeks.

Gains Are Reduced

Late profit taking in soybeans spread to other pits and maximum gains could not be maintained. However, wheat finished ¾-1⅛ higher than yesterday, December $1.17-1.16⅞, May $1.22⅜-½; corn ¼-½ up, December 78⅜, May 84¼-⅛; oats ½-¾ up; rye 2⅜-2½ higher and soybeans 3⅛-5⅜ higher. Lard, strengthened by action of grains and Government purchases of about 10 million pounds this week, closed 7 to 10 higher.

The billion dollar credit to Russia, following disclosure that the Soviets have made inquiry at Washington regarding grain supplies, revived gossip about possibility of some exports. Wheat and rye were the cereals affected most by purchasing stimulated by this gossip.

Shipping Is Problem

Some observers hastened to point out that chances of any large scale shipment of grain to Russia must be considered with skepticism until it is demonstrated that the Soviets actually can buy and transport the goods.

The problem of transportation is a factor and there is also the point that United States wheat and rye are higher priced than competitive Canadian and Argentine grains and presumably would have to be disposed of by lend-lease arrangements or subsidy. In case Canadian rye is taken, this might relieve pressure of occasional imports to the United States, traders said.

185 Tons of Coins Arrive in Chicago

Chicago, Nov. 7 (AP).—A shipment of 42 million pieces of coin—the largest ever received—was unloaded at the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago today, in preparation for Christmas shopping in the Seventh Federal Reserve District. It amounted to $3,200,000 and weighed 185 tons.

Bank officials said the huge shipment indicated Federal Reserve authorities looked for a substantial increase in Christmas trade volume this year. They added that another million dollars in coins was expected shortly. Last year preholiday coin shipments were only $1,800,000.

Dr. R. D. Skinner Dies

Norwalk, Conn., Nov. 7 (AP).—Dr. Richard Dana Skinner, financial and industrial analyst and consultant, former newspaper and magazine writer and editor, died yesterday at the age of 48. He was at one time associate editor of the North American Review, and Washington correspondent of the Boston Herald.

Cold Weather Waited to Spur Retail Buying

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 7.—Business barometers remained stationary this week with the spell of underlying dullness unbroken in trade channels, Dun & Bradstreet said today in the Weekly Review.

"Retailers still awaited the appearance of cold weather to give impetus to seasonal demand," the agency said. "Sales turnover held above last year's in dollar figures but gains were traced largely to a rise in prices and were considered disappointing in view of the lag in sales during the comparable period in 1940.

"Restored activity in wholesale markets continued only fair. Although the scramble for goods was undiminished in some lines, as a rule buyers were showing greater caution in specifying quantities and prices. Manufacturers were continuing record production, with backlogs somewhat smaller but still substantial."

Gains in retail trade over a year ago were estimated at from 10 to 15 per cent for the country as a whole with the Pacific Coast area leading other sections with an increase of 16 to 20 per cent. Elsewhere the percentage increases over 1940 were: New England, 8 to 12; East, 6 to 10; South and Middle West, 9 to 15; Southwest, 12 to 17; Northwest, 9 to 12.

The Review described as routine the week's new order activity in wholesale markets.

65% of Current Work for Defense, 1897 Firms Report

New York, Nov. 7 (AP).—Increasingly rapid conversion of industrial plants to munitions making was reported today by the Iron Age Magazine on the basis of a survey of about 2000 companies.

"The poll," said the magazine, "showed that the conversion of civilian-product plants to defense goods is farther along than is generally believed, with companies in the poll reporting an average of 65.12 per cent of their current operations for defense.

"Of the 1897 companies submitting complete answers in the survey, 1178 said their rate of production had not been affected by priorities, but an even 500 companies reported priorities losses.

"Six hundred thirty-six companies told the Iron Age they are short of steel, although not all of this number had actually been forced to cut operation for that reason.

"Three hundred seventy-four nonferrous metals such as copper, non-ferrous metals such as copper, aluminum and zinc to a degree which has in most cases curtailed operations, while 145 companies declared their production has been handicapped by shortages of machine tools and small tools of various types. . . ."

Slab Zinc Smelters Set Output Record

New York, Nov. 7 (AP).—Smelters of slab zinc broke all previous monthly production records in October with 75,980 tons, the American Zinc Institute, Inc., reported today. This rate brought unfilled orders at the end of the month down to 62,559 tons, the smallest since July, 1940.

Stock Market Continues To Edge Lower

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 7.—The stock market today spent another session in the rear ranks.

Mild irregularity at the start turned into declines running to a point or more around midday. Improvement cropped up here and there in the final hour and most leaders ended above their lows. An assortment of modest advances also was in evidence.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks finished with a net recession of .2 of a point at 40.4. Low-priced issues, apparently still under tax-selling pressure, accounted for a sizable portion of the turnover. Transfers totaled 701,370 shares compared with 673,940 Thursday.

Rails Hold Steady

Rails steadied at the last but failed to get out in front as carrier managements announced acceptance of the wage awards of the Presidential fact-finding board. This picture was complicated, though, after the close when general chairmen of the operating brotherhoods voted flat rejection of the board's recommendations and urged execution of the strike ordered authorized September 5.

The war news seemed a bit more cheerful but far from convincing marketwise, brokers said, and the usual lightening of commitments for the weekend was a retarding influence. A little hope was inspired by the temporary side-tracking of the Treasury's multi-billion dollar tax proposals, but it was realized the taxing question was far from settled.

Select Shares Rise

Earnings reports and business optimism brought in some support for individual shares and a certain amount of bidding was attributed to the belief the setback of the day before, sharpest since October 16, had put the list in a healthier technical position. Prospects of severer Governmental controls of materials needed for defense, however, served to dim bullish inclinations in many cases.

Stocks edging to new lows for the year included Union Pacific, New York Central, Consolidated Edison, Public Service of New Jersey, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, American Can and General Electric.

In arrears, but above the day's worst, were United States Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Western Union, Anaconda, Westinghouse, Douglas Aircraft, Woolworth, Goodrich, DuPont and Johns-Manville.

Advances were retained by Pan American Airways, United States Gypsum, Paramount, Pepsi-Cola, United Airways, General Motors, American Telephone, Union Carbide and International Nickel. International Mercantile touched another new high for 1941.

Bonds Also Tend Lower

The bond market was again under the handicap of light selling in the rails today and most groups moved sidewise or tended a bit lower on average.

Volume dropped to $6,706,900, par value, from $8,161,000 Thursday. The Associated Press average of 20 rails gave up .2 of a point at 63.0, exactly canceling in two days the net improvement scored Wednesday when strong buying developed after the wage decision was announced. Statements by union leaders sent the group toppling .5 of a point yesterday.

New York Cotton

New York, Nov. 7 (AP).—Moderate trade and speculative demand advanced cotton futures quotations 55 to 85 cents a bale today, part of the demand stemming from reports of a falling off of the new-crop movement.

Tending to hold down volume was uncertainty as to the Government crop report due tomorrow. The trade expects an estimate of around 10,845,000 bales, although some sources suggested the October 1 estimate of 11,061,000 bales might be revised upward.

Buyers were encouraged by reports that Southern cotton growers were tending to keep their cotton or put it under Government loan.

Worth Street traders indicated that grey goods sales were light.

Production To Beat Nazis, Attlee Says

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

The joint efforts of the United States and Great Britain in the industrial field will defeat Hitlerism, the Right Hon. Clement R. Atlee, M. P., lord privy seal and deputy prime minister of Great Britain, said at a press conference here yesterday.

"We are fighting Hitler," the No. 2 man of Britain said. "We are getting enormous help from you. It is that power that is going to defeat Hitler."

He was reminded that some think too much emphasis has been placed on the slogan that production will win the war. He agreed that this was only a half truth, until fighting men were included in the picture.

"You've got to have the tools, and you've got to have the men to handle them," he said.

What, then, was expected of the United States in the way of men? Maj. Atlee was asked.

"Well," he replied, "isn't that rather a matter for you to decide?"

The Same Old Answer

This brought chuckles at the press conference, for it is the stock answer of every British notable that has come to Washington—Lord Halifax, Lord Beaverbrook, High Commissioner Malcolm MacDonald, and others.

Maj. Attlee, a Laborite, who was leader of His Majesty's opposition until Labor joined the Conservative and Liberal parties to form a government under Winston Churchill, crossed the Atlantic to attend the International Labor Conference. He said it was his first visit to the United States since "the premotor car age," and he expressed his gratitude for the generous welcome given him here by all elements.

He thought a great deal had been accomplished by the International Labor Conference, he said, and he singled out for comment the resolution saying that the future of labor must depend upon the defeat of Hitlerism. He also emphasized the importance of President Roosevelt's speech and the declaration of the Central European states—Poland, Czecho-Slovakia and Yugoslavia—that economic cooperation was essential in that part of the world.

Maj. Attlee declined to discuss military strategy and, specifically, to talk of a "second front" in Europe, but he did say that Britain's outlook today is far better than it was 15 months ago.

Calls on Lewis, Wallace

"France had fallen," he said. "We were all alone after Dunkerque. Yes, there has been a wonderful improvement, and I think the situation is going to continue to improve."

In the course of the day Maj. Attlee called on Phillip Murray and John L. Lewis at the offices of the United Mine Workers, and on Vice President Wallace at the Senate Office Building. He had lunch at the British Embassy and then, after his press conference, called on Sidney Hillman, of OPM. He then went to the reception at the Soviet Embassy, and in the evening dined with Col. William J. Donovan.

Mrs. Bertha Fraley Rites to Be Held At 11 A. M. Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Bertha G. Fraley, 32, wife of Samuel Fraley, who died at the Montgomery County General Hospital, Sandy Spring, on Wednesday after a long illness, will be held at St. Luke's Lutheran Church, Redland, at 11 a. m. today. The Rev. Ralph Hershberger, pastor of the church, will officiate and burial will be in the church cemetery.

Resides her husband, Mrs. Fraley is survived by a daughter, Helen C. Fraley, and her mother, Mrs. Mollie Stanifer; a sister, Mrs. Dewey Moles, and two brothers, A. P. Stanifer and Quillen Stanifer, all of Tennessee. She was born in Tennessee and had lived in the Laytonsville vicinity a number of years.

Defense Savings Position Filled

Dr. Harold G. Moulton, president of the Brookings Institution, has accepted the chairmanship of the division on education of the District of Columbia Defense Savings Committee, H. L. Rust, jr., chairman of the committee, announced yesterday.

Dr. Moulton is widely known as an economist and educator. Ancient Sumerian Tablet Tells Story of Creation

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Nov. 7.—The oldest known story of the creation of the universe—a subject that has intrigued mankind since the beginning of time—was unfolded here today in a stately poem carved on 16 clay tablets some 4000 years ago.

The tablets were excavated 40 years ago in Mesopotamia, regarded by many as the cradle of civilization.

The story they tell in the ancient script of the Sumerians was painstakingly translated by Dr. Samuel N. Kramer, of the University of Pennsylvania, and was read by him to a group of scientists assembled at the university museum.

This oldest of creation stories is the introduction to a poem recording the mighty exploits of a Sumerian hero in descending into the underworld. Many elements of the poem, Dr. Kramer said, resemble passages in later Hebrew and Greek versions and suggest some points in the biblical book of Genesis.

Older by a thousand years than the most ancient of other known creation stories, the Sumerian poem begins:

"After the earth had been moved away from heaven,

"After heaven had been separated from earth,

"After the name of man had been set up—"

It then goes on to describe the hero's invasion of the underworld.

Some of the tablets from which the story was taken have been in the university museum here since an expedition uncovered them in the soil of Mesopotamia nearly half a century ago. Others were held in Turkey.

Dr. Kramer, paraphrasing the above quoted passage of the poem and several from other Sumerian myths of the same period which he also has translated, sets down the Sumerian creation story in this fashion:

"First was the primeval sea. Nothing is said of its creation or birth, and it is not unlikely that the Sumerians conceived it as having existed eternally.

"The primeval sea begot the cosmic mountain consisting of heaven and earth united. Conceived as gods in human form, Anu (heaven) was the male and Ki (earth) was the female—the concept still suggested by our phrase, 'mother earth.' From their union was begotten Enlil (the air lord).

"Enlil, the air god, separated heaven from earth, and while Anu, Enlil's father, carried off heaven, Enlil himself carried off earth, his mother. The union of Enlil and his mother, earth, set the stage for the organization of the universe, the creation of man, animal and plant and the establishment of civilization."

The idea of the waters existing first corresponds to the Genesis story.

Arms to Take 45% of Income, Nelson Says

Declaring that the time "undoubtedly" is coming when the defense program will absorb 40 to 45 per cent of the national income, Donald M. Nelson said yesterday that the Government hopes the newly announced allocation plan will establish an even flow of goods to the Army and Navy and to all American Industry.

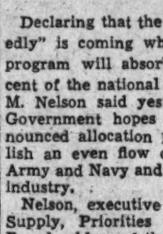
Nelson, executive director of the Supply, Priorities and Allocation Board, addressed the closing session of the fifth annual Construction Industry Conference.

Nelson told the conference of bankers, engineers and builders that he did "not wish to give you too much of a false hope that a considerable amount of material will be left for industry after military needs are supplied. "In my opinion this program has to get bigger and better all the time. That is mandatory."

Under the new allocation plan, said Nelson, "the Army and Navy will apply for their requirements just the same as any industry, and we will make sure that it is needed for defense. There is nothing in this system that will deny the Army and the Navy anything they need for national defense, or, to put it very blunutly, that may be needed anywhere to lick Mr. Hitler."

Columbia Alumnae Will Hear Talk By Dr. Russell

Dr. William Fletcher Russell, director of the National Citizenship Education Program, will discuss "What America Can Learn from France" before the Columbia University Alumnae Club at the Wardman Park Hotel at 7 o'clock p. m. tomorrow.



DR. RUSSELL

Dr. Russell, dean of the Columbia University Teachers' College, was given leave to administer the adult education program for five million foreign born Americans.

"Lessons in reading and writing are the least part of our job," he said, in announcing the topic of his address for Sunday. "We are to teach the principles of government in such a way that what happened in France can never happen in the United States."

Editor's Right To Criticize Labor Upheld

By the Associated Press

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 7.—The right of a newspaper editor to deliver his opinion of any labor leaders in an editorial was held to be unchallengeable today by James C. Batten, National Labor Relations Board examiner hearing charges that the Birmingham Post engaged in unfair labor practices.

Batten ruled that any editorial attitude of the Post could not be construed as unfair to the American Newspaper Guild (C. I. O.).

The remark came when James E. Mills, Post editor, was being questioned by Thomas J. Edwards, counsel for the paper, as to whether Mills ever had said anything derogatory about the guild and its leaders or any other labor leaders.

Without hesitation, Mills answered:

"I might have in editorials written things that could be construed as derogatory——," but before he could complete his answer, Batten declared, "that is a right that cannot be questioned here."

The newspaper, a Scripps-Howard afternoon daily, suspended publication September 6 following a strike of guild members in connection with demands for a guild shop and varying salary increases.

(In May, 1940, the NLRB ordered the Ford Motor Co., to discontinue distribution among employes of pamphlets setting forth Henry Ford's views on unionism. It held that such distribution was not protected by the free speech guarantees of the Constitution. However, the board was overruled by the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals, which set aside the order against "dissemination of propaganda."—Editor's note.]

So . . . He Was a Dummy

Camp Shelby, Miss.—A captain stepped into a tent occupied by football-playing members of Headquarters Company, 168th Infantry.

Several men jumped to attention but one form remained huddled under blankets in a bunk.

"What's the matter with him?" demanded the officer.

"Him" turned out to be a tackling dummy brought in to get it out of the rain.

Such knick-knacks are taboo in tents, so now KP is interfering with practice.

And Be Cautious!

Benton Harbor, Mich.—An applicant for a driver's license gave Police Clerk O. A. Fellows the right answers on the meaning of the red and green traffic signals.

"Now, what about the amber light?" asked the officer.

"It means hurry up like everything before the light turns red," the applicant replied.

"Two right answers out of three, but not good enough," announced the clerk. "Read the pamphlet on traffic rules again and come back later."

Contract Bridge

Alfred P. Steinwold, who knows quite a bit about this type of play, describes today's hand as one on which defender West perpetrated a "magnificent hoax." He made one trump trick into two against a slam contract by simply holding off his ace, doubleton, of trumps, leading declarer to believe the ace was in his partner's hand. The ace was not, but the jack was, and this card developed into a taking trick because of West's strategy. And "don't sneer at poor South," says Freddie, a "Bridge World" contributor. "He wasn't stupid; it was just that West was clever."

West opened the queen of clubs and declarer won with the ace. West knew, however, he could not expect to find the setting trick in that suit, as his partner had played the discouraging deuce, indicating declarer held the king.

Dummy was entered with the heart king and a small trump returned. East followed small; declarer played the king, and West, without hesitation, put on the five, giving declarer a splendid opportunity to lose two trump tricks, as he would place East with the ace. With the top tricks in clubs, hearts and diamonds accounted for, it seemed to West this was his only chance to set the hand.

Declarer went to dummy with the diamond king to take another trump finesse. He led the ten of spades; East followed low, and South proved he had fallen for the bait when he put up the spade queen. This lost to the ace, and later East's jack was turned in for a set of one.

If West had taken his ace on the first round, declarer would simply have entered dummy, finessed East for the jack and made his contract with the loss of but one trump.

"Certainly, West would have been reluctant to hold off if he thought South had a five-card suit," observed Freddie, "for that would leave East only two trumps and one of them might be the queen rather than the jack." But the bidding indicated South held only four spades, since he bid his lower-ranking suit, hearts, first. Six hearts, incidentally, cannot be beaten, since the long diamonds provide three spade discards.

Grin and Bear It

By Lichty

"Please, Gentlemen! . . . I beg you not to vote me a raise! I can't stand any additional taxes!"

Listen! with Glynn

Ted Husing made it a rule some years ago not to predict beforehand the winner of any football game he was covering for C. B. S.

The reason, of course, is obvious. Some readers might suspect bias in his reportage, despite the fact that that could have no possible effect on the outcome of the game.

Be that as it may, however, Ted is a pretty fortunate man today in that, because of that rule, he doesn't have to choose the winner of the game he's covering.

It's Navy-Notre Dame at Municipal Stadium in Baltimore and indications are that it's the hardest one to pick in the lot of today's contests.

Following Navy's unexpectedly decisive 13-6 triumph over the Penn powerhouse last Saturday, and Notre Dame's surprising 0-0 tie with Army, it now looks as if the Annapolis eleven has an even chance against Irish. Both are undefeated, despite the fact that both have played scoreless tie games, the Navy, with Harvard a couple of weeks ago.

However, just to show you that Mr. Husing is no coward, here are his choices in some of the other games: Wisconsin to upset Ohio State; Fordham to continue unbeaten against Pitt; Dartmouth over Princeton; Tulane to beat Alabama, and Stanford to take Southern California.
